Front cover: The painting 'Beltman Go' was painted in 1958 and exhibited at McCaughey Exhibition prior to being donated to Surf Life Saving Victoria by the artist Brian St. Alban-Smith, born in Singapore on 1/3/1926. Brian served in the closing stages of World War II as an Air Gunner with the RAAF, then again with the British Army in India before that country's independence.

He now lives, age 72 years, at the foothills of the Dandenong Ranges in Victoria, still painting and writing. Some of his writings include 'The Spirit beyond the Psyche', 'Brushstrokes from the Hills", 'Esther of Bethany', 'The Dreamtime Fisherman', and 'Children of the Opal'. The painter, Brian St. Alban-Smith has a wife, two daughters and a son. Their youngest daughter suffers from Cerebral Palsy. Brian has taken great pleasure in handing over copyright to the painting 'Beltman Go' in recognition of his brother, Geoff Smith who was for many years an active member of Burleigh Heads Mowbray Park SLSC, Qld.

President World Life Saving

Surf Life Saving in Victoria over these past fifty years has contributed to the community with over 14,000 lives saved. In addition to this contribution, the involvement of those who have given of their time to serve these past 50 years may well feel proud of their achievement of "No lives lost between the patrol flags". Their giving has been the making of many fine young people in our community and lifelong friendships have been made.

This history tells of heroes, deeds and magnificent achievements all in the name of Surf Life Saving. The writer, Alleyn Best has captured, in great detail, much of those 50 years past and more!

Surf Life Saving Victoria is very much an integral and important part of Australia's heritage. I take this opportunity to congratulate Victoria, the author, Alleyn Best and the team that made this history possible.

President Surf Life Saving Australia

It is indeed an honour for me to commend this narrative of the, "50 years and more" history of surf life saving in Victoria.

Surf life saving in Australia is part of Australia's heritage and has grown and developed around the coastline of the country for almost 100 years to become part of the Australian way of life and an essential service to the whole community.

The recording of the activities and achievements is an essential part of the surf life saving tradition. It is also important to recognise the wonderful contribution made by many thousands of volunteers who have made this organisation what it is today.

The compilation of this history has involved extensive research, coordination and preparation to achieve this comprehensive and quality publication. I acknowledge the outstanding work of the author Alleyn Best and the honorary Historian for Surf Life Saving Victoria Prue Weber and numerous contributors such as past President Charles Lyne AM.

This history traces back to 1947 the wonderful work of the surf lifesavers in Victoria. On behalf of Surf Life Saving Australia I congratulate Surf Life Saving Victoria on yet another wonderful achievement in this most comprehensive account of "50 years and more".

If you have read this forward, read on as it will make you feel proud to be an Australian.

Preface

This book, 50 Years and More of Surf Life Saving in Victoria, provides a unique picture of the contribution made by Victoria's 22,000 surf lifesavers from 1947, when the State Centre of the Surf Life Saving Association was formed, to the year 2002.

It covers all aspects of our state's surf lifesavers' commitment and dedication to protecting the beach going public. Since 1947, almost 40,000 people have been saved from drowning. Recorded, too, are our surf lifesavers' achievements in competition and in extending surf awareness within the community.

The history of saving lives on our beaches, however, started much earlier than the appearance of surf lifesaving clubs in the mid-1940s. The formation of the Royal Life Saving Society, and the founding of Royal lifesaving clubs on Victoria's beaches at the beginning of the 20th century, are also included. Earlier still were the methods devised to rescue people from the many shipwrecks along our coastline, some of which are recorded here as fore-runners of the modern equipment used in saving lives on our beaches.

Today around 13,000 volunteer lifesavers look after our beaches. They perform as many as 1,500 and more rescues in a season as they protect the expanding number of people using Victoria's beaches.

How current services such as first call-out response, coastal surveillance, the radio network to the full length of the coastline of Victoria were introduced are testimony to the inventiveness of our pioneers. This tradition continues with the ongoing development of equipment and essential on-beach rescue gear.

Surf Life Saving Victoria's activities have enjoyed strong public support over the years, including the welcome financial support of governments and the corporate sector. Undoubtedly such support has enabled our clubs to operate at levels of high efficiency in delivering an essential service to the community.

Our proud boast is that we have never lost a life between the flags.

We hope that you enjoy this history of surflife saving in Victoria.

Immediate Past President, Charles Lyne

To produce a history of the nature captured in this book, there has been tremendous effort by a number of people. Our gratitude goes to the author, Alleyn Best, who has been totally dedicated to the task. Likewise to the team of people who worked on the archive material, support information, photos, typing and computer inputs.

Fortunately information has been plentiful, whether from the clubs or from the memories and experiences of members past and present, especially those who had the foresight to keep records and historic information.

The book itself captures the many aspects of life along the coastline of Victoria, not just for the fifty five years of Surf Life Saving Victoria's existence, but much earlier. It starts in the 19th century when travelling by sailing ship along the Victorian coastline was extremely hazardous and some inventive methods of saving lives from shipwrecked vessels had to be devised.

The book also captures some of the contribution of the Royal Life Saving Society from its beginnings in Victoria and its contribution to safety on our beaches and inland waters. It gives credit particularly to the fifty years and more of the existence of Surf Life Saving in Victoria. Our voluntary organisation is truly an Australian organisation and a wonderful movement to which I, and so many others, have been proud to belong.

I trust the input and the achievements of surf lifesavers of the next fifty years is at least equal to this magnificent fifty five years of vigilance and service to our Victorian community as recorded in this book.

The Author, Alleyn Best

The author, Alleyn Best, is a writer and historian. Recently he completed editing a History of Amcor Containers Packaging (formerly Containers Limited). His other works include the History of Municipal Employees Union in Victoria; History of Tobacco Workers Union (incl. Cigar Workers Union) in Victoria; and History of the Federated Liquor and Allied Industries Employees Union, Victorian Branch. He has also written and produced manuals, directories and journals for many organisations and has edited a variety of books, including the history of Anglesea SLSC.

A chance meeting a few years ago with well known Lorne SLSC life member Tony Lester (d. 2000) resulted in Alleyn joining State Centre's hard working history project group. Thanks to them, and with Alleyn's guidance, the outcome is a history of the surf lifesaving movement in Victoria focussed on its members, leaders and clubs.

Although a late arrival to surf lifesaving, Alleyn has enjoyed his sports and recreation activities over the years in swimming, football, cricket then cycling. He is now a keen croquet player and won a state championship title last year.

President Surf Life Saving Victoria

Life Saving is indeed an icon of the Australian way of life. What more typifies Australia than a beautiful beach protected by life savers wearing the quartered red and yellow cap.

I would like to congratulate all those involved in producing this magnificent publication covering the first "50 years and More" activity of Surf Life Saving in the state of Victoria. The publication is more than a 50 year history book as it is indeed a reference text which will be used not only by members of the association but by a wide range of the community at large.

The book exposes the early days of the association giving an indication of the vision and the determination of the leaders at that time. In addition, the publication is so detailed that it lists all members who have gained their bronze medallion in Victoria.

In particular I would like to thank Prue Weber and Charles Lyne for their determined effort over many years in managing the project to ensure the books success.

I am certain you will agree that the publication is of an exceptionally high standard, which will guarantee that it will be read and reread by current and future life savers for many years to come.

Again, thank you to all who contributed to this fine publication.

Using the Past to prepare for the Future

On behalf of the members, officers and staff of Surf Life Saving Victoria, I would like to acknowledge the dedication to this project by the SLSV History Committee and the author, Alleyn Best. With Prue Weber, Charles Lyne and Alleyn Best as the catalyst, many others (noted on p vi) have so regularly gathered together that I suspect it has become as much a social gathering as an information sharing session.

The end result of their deeds will assist in settling arguments (may start others) as life savers gather to reminisce. It is a fitting and thorough compilation of SLSV's past activities and does justice to the commitment and sacrifices made by so many.

Today's life savers will have the opportunity to look back and appreciate how in different times the practice of surf life saving provision was delivered with the same enthusiasm and innovation as it is today. I am sure many will take inspiration from what has gone before and use it to create tomorrow's history.

It is particularly pertinent as Surf Life Saving Victoria is now going through the very early stages of a number of strategies that will see the association look very different in the future. It is reassuring to see that it has coped very successfully with change in the past, in fact it has thrived on the challenge. As a result I am convinced the next 50-year history will be a further reflection of the organisation's ability to remain an integral element of the Australian ethos.

Please use this book to both reflect and prepare for our future challenges and opportunities.

Nigel Taylor
Chief Executive Officer, SLSV.

The Red and Yellow Cap

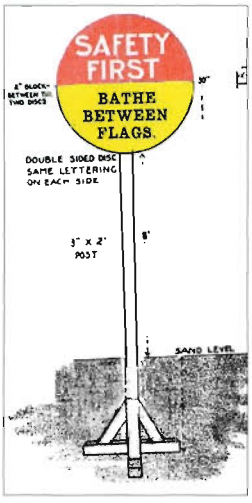

Standard design of a notice to bathers, marked by a blue and white flag, in use from 1924 to 1935.
Handbook SLSA Revised 1926,p.137

Caps similar to those used in competition and patrols today are based on an English practice used in swimming clubs where they were worn for competition and to control long hair. Surf life saving clubs members have worn caps from the beginning of the movement in 1907, carrying forward those swimming club traditions of old. Club caps, in club colours, were originally worn for patrol duty.

Royal Life Saving Society club members also wore their club caps (i.e. competition) for patrols. The first recorded instance of surf lifesavers wearing a red and yellow cap appears in 1948, after World War II.

No mention of the 'red and yellow' cap appears in SLSA handbooks until 1948. In the early handbooks, 1924 and onwards, the beach patrol flags were sky blue and white, and this seems to be the case up until 1935. The sign also included the words 'Bathe between Flags'.

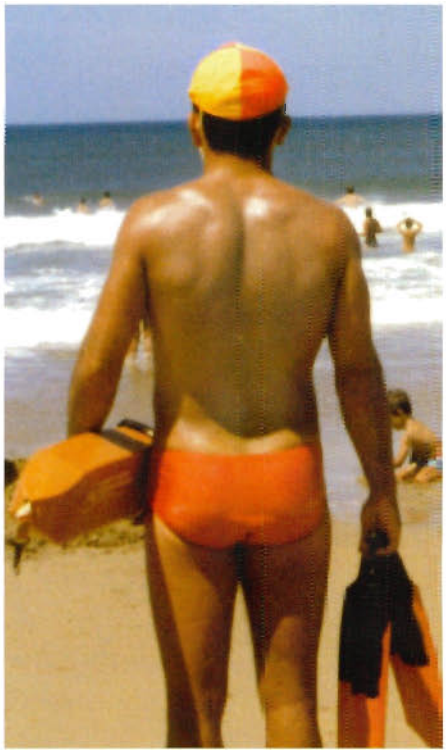

Suggested standard design of notice to bathers from 1935 onwards.
Handbook SLSA Revised 1935,p. 198.

'Bathe between the flags'

The introduction of the 'red and yellow' colours in surf life saving coincided with World War II (1939-45), reflecting a connection between the military influences of the period. Red and yellow flags used at sea have traditionally indicated a state of alert or a dangerous situation.

From 1939 on, the red and yellow flags were used for indicating the safe swimming area at a patrolled beach. The red and yellow flags also appeared on the right hand end of both the swimming and boat buoys used in competition.

The red and yellow cap found its way into surf lifesaving, then later into Royal clubs, from the naval coloured flag signals used to convey messages. The flag signal system is an ancient means of communication from ship to ship or ship to shore and is described in some encyclopaedias. The red and yellow flag is the signal for 'danger' or 'person overboard' but also represents 'O' in the flag alphabet.

The flag is diagonal red and yellow is still displayed on the halyard high on a ship's mast or rigging when messages are being conveyed.

In 1980 in conjunction with the Standards Association of Australia there was an agreement between SLSA and the Standard Association to adopt a change from the red and yellow quartered flag to a red over yellow in parallel flag. However the red and yellow quartered cap remained unchanged.

The use of these two colours on the quartered cap worn throughout Australia and New Zealand became the commonly used and widely recognised symbol of our patrolling lifesavers. Interestingly, Australia's choice of the red and yellow colours for surf lifesaving and water safety has been adopted almost world-wide. However in some South East Asian countries, the word 'patrol' means armed men or militia.

Today's practice of lifesavers accepting duty of care and responsibility for the safety of those swimming between the red and yellow flags continues a grand tradition. The red and yellow caps which identify a life saver are but one of the movement's most successful innovations by which the public can instantly recognise our volunteer life savers and professional lifeguards on Australian beaches.

" . . . On Your Marks . . ."

Foundation Meeting of State Centre

The foundation meeting of the Victorian Centre of the Surf Life Saving Association of Australia took place on a cool summer's evening, Thursday 9 January 1947, in a flat in Acland Street, St Kilda '... the residence of Mr J F Wall'.

Like the founding meeting of any organisation, it was an important occasion in the lives of those who attended. From that point on, the organisation would shape their lives as much as they would mould the organisation itself.

The written records (minutes) of that meeting are brief: a statement of establishment; the election of office bearers and discussion about the forthcoming visit to Torquay and Lorne beaches by a combined Queensland-New South Wales surf team en route to the Western Australian State Titles in Perth.

There is little doubt that the meeting itself merely formalised what had already been decided by those attending it. The social impact however was that the establishment of a Victorian State Centre of the Surf Life Saving Association of Australia marked a turning point in the progressive development of the water life-saving movement in Victoria.

From now on the life-saving aspect of that movement as it affected Victoria's coastal beaches would be managed separately and independently from the state's all-embracing organisation up to that time, the Royal Life Saving Society.

Organisationally, the Victorian State Centre would be a branch of the Surf Life Saving Association of Australia which had its Head Centre in Sydney, the founding city of surf life-saving clubs. The Victorian Centre would now join with other state centres already established in Western Australia (1925) and Queensland (1930), plus individual affiliations from clubs in South Australia and Tasmania.

The Decision Makers

Allan Kennedy from Queensland was first to arrive, warmly welcomed at the door by Jim and Phyllis Wall and their three-year-old toddler Terry with all of whom Kennedy had just spent the Christmas holidays at their Torquay surf beach camp site. In the lives of those who came to Jim Wall's flat that evening it is possible to see almost every facet of life saving activities in Victoria, even nationally, up to that time.

Jim Wall was at the Foundation SLSV meeting held at Jim Wall's flat, 9 January 1947. Jim became the first Honorary Secretary SLSV.

Kennedy was the Queensland State Centre's Superintendent of Instruction and Examination.

However, his activities during the war in forming life-saving squads along the southern Queensland beaches of Surfers Paradise and Kirra where American and Australian rest camps were stationed, and his roving job with the Queensland Department of Commerce and Agriculture as Promotions Officer of the Butter Board[1], made him perhaps the national Association's best-known ambassador and instigator of new clubs outside New South Wales. Those ex-servicemen among the people who had formed the Torquay Surf Life Saving Club only a year earlier (January 1946) had invited him to help establish their first Bronze squad, which he did on 29 December, less than two weeks before this evening's founding meeting of the Victorian State Centre.

Allan Kennedy, QLD State Superintendent, attended the Foundation Meeting SLSV on 9 January 1947 and became the first Victorian Superintendent.

In turn, Allan Kennedy held Jim Wall in high regard. Wall was a member of that first Torquay Bronze Squad but it was his attitude and dedication to the voluntary work associated with life-saving club activities — Wall was vice-president of the newly formed Torquay club and was about to take on the demanding task of Secretary of the Victorian Centre - that so typified the leading role that business people have played in community and social organisations: 'giving back to the community' as it is modestly expressed.

Wall was company secretary (similar to today's 'managing director' or 'general manager') of the Tyneside Foundry in Port Melbourne.

Ainslie 'Sprint' and Norma Walker arrived next, close friends of the Walls and part of the Torquay club 'extended family' from the early 1930s. While Norma Walker joined Phyllis, who was expecting another child [2], to prepare the refreshments for the evening, her husband went over to talk with Jim Wall and Allan Kennedy to discuss further his impending nomination as the president of the proposed Victorian State Centre. In addition to the meeting itself having been ". . . called by Mr A. Kennedy", as the minutes noted, Kennedy had also singled out Sprint Walker to head the fledgling organisation, just as he had suggested to Jim Wall that he (Wall) was the right man to be its secretary.

Ainslie 'Sprint' Walker, inaugural President of the SLSV, 1947-1970.

Walker's qualifications for the position of president were 'first class', in Kennedy's opinion. A former member and champion-ship competitor of the Manly Surf Life Saving Club where he earned the nick-name 'Sprint', Walker had kept up his swimming and surfing interests in Victoria after re-location in the early 1930s from Sydney to Melbourne by his employer, Grazcos, for whom he organised shearing activities at the many properties associated with the company. He joined the Melbourne Swimming Club at the St Kilda (sea) Baths where he first met Jim Wall. Soon Walker joined Wall and his fellow surfing enthusiasts from the Melbourne Swimming Club on weekend trips to Torquay beach. It was this group who, with like-minded people associated with the sporting side of the Victorian Railways Institute, swimming and water polo in particular, formed the Torquay Surf Life Saving Club soon after the war ended, including many men only recently demobbed from the armed forces such as ex-army corporal Walker.

Like Kennedy, 'Sprint' Walker had first-hand experience of how a surf life-saving club operated, both in patrols and in competitions. Sprint too, also had experience in life saving club administration— albeit secondhand through his father who was a former president of the New South Wales branch of the Royal Life Saving Society. Kennedy saw how much the Torquay people admired Sprint's surfing and swimming abilities ("the best body surfer I ever saw" is how people today still describe him). All these factors left little doubt in Kennedy's mind that Sprint Walker was among that rare type of natural born leaders who, quietly spoken, could lead others by their knowledge, dedication and example.

Three new arrivals soon joined them, but all were familiar faces to the Torquay group: Ralph Dean, Phil Bennett and Roy Parker. Together with Sprint Walker and Jim Wall, Dean and Bennett were founding members of the Torquay Surf Life Saving Club a year earlier as well as part of its first Bronze Squad. Roy Parker, another ex-serviceman (army warrant officer) and house builder in the Malvern area where he lived, was a member of the St Kilda Life Saving Club who became part of the Melbourne Swimming Club-Torquay group (together with Phil Bennett and his brothers Reg and Bill). Parker had agreed to become treasurer of the State Centre at this meeting.

The next two arrivals, Ernie Pleydell and Joe Henke, brought a more formal presence into the Wall's lounge room, being better known by reputation than personally to most of those already present: Ernie Pleydell was secretary of the Victoria Branch of the Royal Life Saving Society; Joe Henke was its vice-president as well as president of the Black Rock Life Saving Club affiliated to the society. Allan Kennedy had invited them to the meeting and introduced them around, referred jokingly to "getting off to a better start here than in his home state of Queensland", where friendly rivalry between clubs affiliated with the Surf Life Saving Association and those affiliated with the Royal Life Saving Society erupted into almost trench warfare in the late 1920s over differing competition rules until a truce was called and an agreement was signed between the two national bodies dividing the territory into 'surf clubs' and 'Royal clubs'.

Joe Henke remarked to Allan Kennedy that the situation in Victoria heated up a little at the same time when he, Henke, led a team from St Kilda Life Saving Club, a Royal affiliate, to Manly in 1929 to compete in the surf championships and was almost 'clobbered' by the Royal group on his return when he proposed that St Kilda have dual affiliation with the Surf Life Saving Association in Sydney.

He lost that one, he said, so it's gratifying to see tonight's meeting bringing the two groups together to launch the State Centre.

Down To Business

With everyone present, Allan Kennedy stated that they should start on the formal part of the evening's business. He would chair the meeting, he declared, adding with a smile that as an interstate visitor he was truly impartial to the interests of those present. But by way of explanation as to why this meeting had been called to form a Victorian Centre of the Surf Life Saving Association, he had to admit that he was responsible for 'jollying everyone along' in moving swiftly on it during his short stay.

Kennedy stated that to an outsider it might seem a trifle odd to be forming a State Centre with only one affiliated club, Torquay, and with a majority of Torquay club members about to fill most of the executive positions on the State Centre.

However, this is where our colleagues from 'Royal' come into the picture, he added, and called on Mr Pleydell and Mr Henke to expound on the possibilities of other clubs joining the State Centre almost immediately.

Ernie Pleydell explained that there was the possibility of 14 Royal Life Saving clubs joining the new State Centre—if they were functioning!

"The background to this", he said, "is that the two governing bodies, 'Royal' and 'Surf', signed an agreement in 1942, affiliating with each other at a national level. This allowed all clubs to compete in each body's championships, if they desired, and determined the rules under which the competitions would be conducted. As far as Victoria was concerned, it provided for the 'ownership' as it were of beach life-saving clubs in Victoria if ever the question of affiliation arose after the war." The effect of the agreement was that Victorian coastal surf clubs were free to affiliate with the Sydney-based Surf Life Saving Association if they wished.

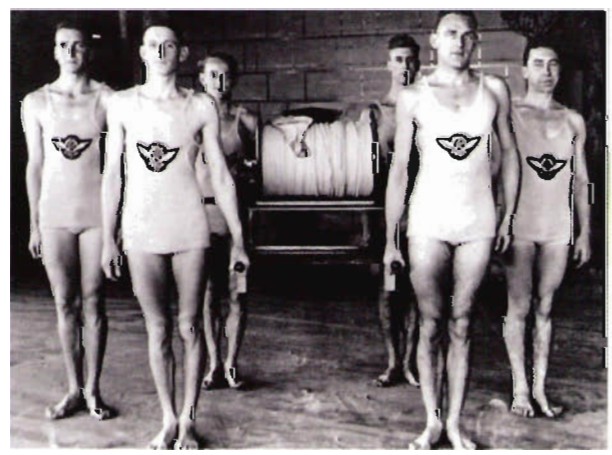

However, those clubs around Port Phillip Bay were to be the domain of the Royal Life Saving Society only.[3]

"Regrettably a number of these coastal clubs folded during the 1930s Depression, such as the Torquay club in 1933, or went into recess during the war and have not yet started up again".

Pleydell then read out a list of these clubs and the year they had affiliated with the Royal Life Saving Society:

Apollo Bay 1922
Barwon Heads Rowing and Life Saving Club 1919
Inverloch 1923

"Only a few of the people running these clubs had maintained contact with the society", Pleydell said, "but we can give you their names so that you can follow them up. The Warrnambool Royal Life Saving Club re-organised in late 1945, just after the war ended, and we will write to them about joining the new surf State Centre". There were also people he could write to at Portland, Lorne and Lakes Entrance, and he offered to inform them of developments here, which might help them to start up again. Pleydell then asked Joe Henke, who by reason of the 1942 agreement represented the Warrnambool and Portland clubs for the surf association (if ever such representation was needed, even though they were not operating) if he would like to add to what he had said.

Henke stated that his contribution, in addition to any organisational assistance the Royal Life Saving Society could give to the fledgling surf State Centre, would lie in promoting the competition side of the movement. As a team captain of the St Kilda club which won six out of 14 Victorian Surf Rescue Championships conducted by 'Royal' in the 1920s and 1930s and as captain of the first interstate reel team to compete in Manly in 1929, and since the early 1930s competing with the Black Rock team, Henke considered he had the credentials to assist in setting up surf carnivals and competitions on the surf beaches. He remarked that Mr Les Errey, the society's senior examiner, had consented to join the new surf State Centre's Board of Examiners. Henke then elaborated on his lost battle in 1929 to affiliate the St Kilda Life Saving Club with the surf movement in Sydney after returning from the Manly Championships, he made the point that by having a Victorian State Centre it gave local competitors the opportunity to compete with the best around Australia. "Under the 1942 agreement, our bayside clubs can now go to Sydney if they wish, or we might like to set up a combined Victorian titles system to send our best teams," he added.

Henke was enthusiastically warming up to his favourite themes, well known to those present who had read Henke's articles in the popular journal, the Olympic Magazine which promoted the activities of 'physical fitness' clubs of the day. "Viewing our clubs as 'life-saving' organisations alone," he continued, "while this is what the general public expect of us and indeed is a powerful ideal that appeals to the altruism of young people joining us, is, as we have found over the years, not enough to sustain either a club or our whole movement. What appeals most to young people wanting to join, as well as to those who stay with the clubs, is the physical fitness and competitive aspects, the challenges as it were to build up the individual level of fitness— and the team level—needed to perform a rescue effectively if called on. Competition among our members and among our clubs rewards both the competitors and the winners in many ways, and we as organisers should not limit the opportunities available to them."

Allan Kennedy thanked Joe Henke for his contribution and for expressing the sentiments to which everyone in the room agreed wholeheartedly. With the background to the meeting explained to everyone's satisfaction, he continued, he proposed that they start on the formal motions needed to establish the State Centre. Since the purpose of the meeting was self-evident, he would proceed with the election of officers. The result was:

President: Ainslie 'Sprint' Walker

Secretary: Jim Wall

Assistant Secretary and Treasurer: Roy Parker

Publicity Officer: Ralph Dean

Board of Examiners: Joe Henke, Allan Kennedy, Ainslie Walker, Les Errey (a Royal Life examiner).

Executive Committee: Phil Bennett, Charlie Kendall (Torquay Club), Dick Garrard (Torquay Club and Australian Wrestling Champion).

Allan Kennedy warmly congratulated the newly elected officers and wished them every success for the future. The Secretary, Jim Wall, was then "... instructed to advise Head Centre of the Movement (in Sydney) of the formation of the Victorian Centre and also to advise names of the executive". At the same time, the secretary was requested to ask Head Centre about stationery "... and any further information necessary for the centre".

Following on from Ernie Pleydell's offer, and after a brief explanation by Allan Kennedy of the executive structure of a State Centre which made the president of each affiliated club a vice-president of a State Centre, "... the secretary was instructed to write to the Lakes Entrance and Warrnambool clubs regarding affiliation and representation on the executive".

"Now that there is an official 'State Centre' and before winding up the meeting", Allan Kennedy declared, "there is one item of general business to discuss, and that is the visit to Torquay and Lorne of the interstate team made up of competitors from Queensland and New South Wales." Kennedy explained that he would be their team manager, joining them during their brief stay in Victoria then travelling with them to the State titles in Western Australia, but the accommodation "... and entertainment at Torquay" were in the hands of the Torquay Club. However, the arrangements for the demonstrations they were due to give at Torquay and Lorne would be made by himself, and the newly elected State Centre Secretary, Jim Wall, as the responsibility of this Centre.

Allan Kennedy then declared the meeting closed.

A demonstration of using the surf reel and line was given at Queenscliff beach in the 1912/13 season, when the 'neck to knee' costume was still required beach wear.

Issues Arising after the Meeting

During refreshments it was evident that Kennedy was in a buoyant mood over the establishment of the Victorian State Centre, remarking to Sprint Walker that his dream of a truly national surf life saving organisation was getting closer to reality. "When that happens", he said, "we'll all have an equal say in how it's run, not just copy Sydney or take orders from Sydney only, as happens now."

Kennedy's challenging statement soon had everyone's attention. He then explained that the Queensland State Centre was already drawing up a proposed constitution for a National Council structure to be the governing body of the association. The Head Centre in Sydney had been informed of the proposal in general terms and was supportive of the concept. A draft would be ready later in the year.

"However", Kennedy added, "unless we are on our toes the Sydney people will try and keep the authority they already have and simply transfer their powers into a national council structure. We propose that the Sydney Head Centre remains the administrative base but when it comes to policy matters and rules and the rights of State Centre - then these questions should be agreed by everyone equally around the table." Everyone nodded in agreement. If Kennedy wanted the Victorians to support the Queensland proposal, then he had it. Jim Wall quipped that it looked as if the new State Centre executive was involved in politics, too. Allan Kennedy laughed. "Too right!" he replied.

Royal Life Saving Society Vice-President Joe Henke raised another matter, the question of female members— or rather non-members, of surf life saving clubs, perhaps a more pressing issue than the Federal Council proposal but no less political in the way it has to be handled, he declared. Women have equal membership in Royal life saving clubs. Surf clubs do not allow women to be full members, only associate members, which means they are unable to participate in awards, competitions and patrols. The women members at Warrnambool, for instance, may not take kindly to being told to stand down because we've changed its status to that of a surf association club. Norma Walker and Phyllis Wall were interested in how this matter would be resolved. "Rules are rules," Norma said, explaining that she had no difficulty with this when she and her husband, Sprint, were members of the Manly Club. Norma considered that perhaps it would be accepted as another one of those post-war changes where women had to hand the jobs back to men. Allan Kennedy replied that he would explain this matter thoroughly to people he wanted to see in Warrnambool, Portland and Lorne about reviving their clubs.

Although most had to rise early for work the next day, the evening ended late but no-one begrudged the time they spent at the meeting. Like most of their compatriots, they felt a sense of urgency to get things going again after the war. And not just ticking over either, but to build something better that would give purpose to all the hardships they had undergone during wartime. 'Man the beaches' was perhaps the best-known slogan used by England's Prime Minister Churchill in exhorting an all-out effort to win the war. Now, in peace time, that same exhortation seemed to spur on the new State Centre's members in the cause of providing the best possible recreational conditions for their fellow Victorians, who were reclaiming the coastal beaches after the military defences on them were being dismantled, by establishing a comprehensive network of life saving clubs.

The foundation meeting of the Victorian State Centre was a rewarding start to what was to become an intensive period of voluntary activity and involvement over the following years.

Like other rationed goods, it was controlled through a separate authority, the Butter Board, joining the Meat Board, the Tobacco Board, the Sugar Board and others in ensuring a priority supply for the troops, best summed up in a famous slogan of the times "Butter Before Guns". Although the war ended in August 1945, butter and tea were among the last items to be removed from the rationing program in July 1950.*

It then defined "Surf Beaches" as "...beaches situated on the coast line of Australia, and includes: a) In the case of beaches which are directly exposed for their whole length to the open sea, the whole of such beaches. b) In the case of beaches which are exposed to the open sea for part of their length only, such parts thereof as are so exposed. c) And in addition any such beach or part of such beach indirectly exposed to the open seas if the conditions of weather which prevail thereon are such as to render normally impracticable the launching and use therefrom of any boats other than surf-boats."*

Allan Kennedy, M.B.E.

'... with guidance and experience...'

Allan Kennedy played a pivotal role in the history of surf life saving in Australia. Apart from his strategic plan for a national organisation, and his foresight and knowledge on everything surf life saving, he brought it all to Victoria in 1946.

Allan Kennedy

With an enthusiastic team of people frequenting Torquay after World War II, Allan Kennedy could see his longtime strategy of State Centres in every state being more than a possibility. When his work brought him to Victoria, he joined Ainslie 'Sprint' Walker, Jim Wall, Phillip Bennett and the rest of the Torquay group, becoming Victoria's first State Superintendent and Examiner for that first Bronze Squad at Torquay.

Allan began in surf lifesaving with Byron Bay Club in New South Wales (then a part of the Point Danger Branch) from which he moved to Queensland and the Surfers Paradise Surf Life Saving Club, later taking up the position of Queensland State Superintendent from 1941-1946.

Victoria was extremely fortunate to have Allan come on board in 1946. His guidance and experience quickly put the whole of Victoria's aspirations in perspective.

Much has been written and recorded about him, particularly as the founder of Surf Life Saving Great Britain.

He returned to Britain to preside over the celebrations of that Association's 21st year where he died suddenly at Halywell Bay in Cornwall in August 1976. Some of Allan's collection of photos appear elsewhere in these chapters. His boundless energy and organising skills resulted in Surf Life Saving Victoria being formed in 1947 and after more than 50 years it goes without saying that this man would have been extremely proud of Surf Life Saving Victoria's achievements today.

His obituary from the 1976-77 Annual Report of Surf Life Saving Victoria reads:

"It is with sadness that we have to announce the death in August, 1976 of Allan Kennedy, MBE Allan was President of the Surf Life Saving Association of Great Britain at the time of his death and many members of this Association will remember Allan as one of the founders of the Victorian State Centre in 1947.

Allan was Superintendent of the Victorian State Centre in 1946/47 and 1947/48, and his record relating to surf life saving both in Australia and Great Britain was outstanding."

Victorian Foundation President: Surf Life Saving Victoria

'Sprint', as he was affectionately known, was an early member of the Manly Life Saving Club, where he gained his Surf Bronze in 1921. He was a champion swimmer, winning three Australian Championships as a member of the Manly Surf Relay Team.

Ainslie 'Sprint' Walker

Victoria —and indeed the surf life saving movement —was fortunate that his transfer to Melbourne with his Company, Grazcos resulted in him leading Surf Life Saving Victoria for 23 years.

Sprint's ability, assisted by his adoring wife Norma, became an icon in the State following the formation of the Surf movement in Victoria.

Sprint was an unassuming man— he was quietly spoken and led by example.

His early years in Victoria were spent at Torquay where he held the position of Club Captain. His final years were marred by illness, rendering him unable to speak. However it was the wish of all involved that he remain in the Chair until his passing.

'The Father of Surf Life Saving in Victoria', he left alot to live up to for those who followed him.

In 1963 Victorian clubs honoured 'Sprint' by commissioning the artist, Noel Counihan to paint his portrait, which takes pride of place in the building named after him — 'A.W. Walker House', our Victorian State Centre.

Jim Wall
1904 - 1963
'The Fire in the Engine Room'

Jim Wall

They say: "Give a busy person a job to do and it will get done", this very much applied to the late Jim Wall. Jim was the 'fire in the engine room' of the new Surf Life Saving Victoria.

He was a born leader and organiser and much of the initiative and the strategies were left to this man. The inaugural meeting of Surf Life Saving Victoria was held at Jim's home. He was the first Secretary of the State Centre, whilst at the same time holding down the Presidency of the Torquay Club, a position he held for thirteen years. He gained his Bronze Medallion at the age of 36 years amongst all the other activities building up around him, then in 1947 when the Victorian State Centre was formed, he prepared the first Annual Report. This was a very busy period and many meetings were held at Jim's work place, the Johnstons Tyne Foundry in Port Melbourne.

His early days (pre War) included the West St. Kilda Water Polo Team and later he transferred to the Melbourne Swimming Club. However after the War it was the surf that attracted Jim and his long list of surfing mates. Some of these included members of the Melbourne Swimming Club. 'Sprint' Walker, Phillip, Reg and Bill Bennett followed by Peter Bennett, Ken Tanner, Doug Hopkins, Reg Burnett, Barry Stevens, Burnie Gandy, Harry Pittard, Charlie Kendall plus Joe Parkin and Roy Parker, both members of St Kilda Life Saving Club. Many of these men and their wives went on to camp at Torquay for all of their lives.

The Jim Wall Memorial Surfathon, conducted on New Year's Day each year at Torquay, was really the first iron man event in the surf and honours his name. For his contribution to Surf Life Saving in Victoria, the first Honour Board of the Victorian State Centre was dedicated to him. During the lead up to and the 1956 Olympic Games Carnival, Jim Wall was at the forefront of organising the Surf Carnival held at Torquay that attracted some 50,000 spectators.

In addition to these duties, Jim Wall was delegate to the Australian Council and remained a member of the Board of Examiners travelling the length and breadth of the coast line of Victoria along with those other dedicated men, Phillip Bennett. Ron Hussey, Milton Roberts, Ainslie 'Sprint' Walker, Harry Pittard, Frank Innis just to mention a few.

His remarkable energy and dedication saw bestowed on him the highest honour of Surf Life Saving: Life Membership of both his Club, Torquay and the Victorian State Centre of SLSA.

Jim Wall died on 17 August 1963.

Phillip Bennett once described Jim Wall as a great man, quickly qualifying 'great' as described in the dictionary as 'eminent and marvellous'. Jim Wall was 'the fire in the engine room'.

Phillip Bennett
'A man who gave so much'

Phillip Bennett, like the others who helped form the Victorian State Centre, was a disciplined and precise man. He was a mentor to many and held in the highest esteem by all.

On his return from the 1939-1945 war, Phillip re-joined the Melbourne Swimming Club, taking up old friendships and making new ones. But like all of his peers of that time their ages had now reached near middle age.

Phillip Bennett

Forms of swimming races did not exist for their age groups and water polo was all but a thing of the past. With 'Sprint' Walker now in Melbourne and surfing the various surf beaches, Phil joined up with the group from the Melbourne Swimming Cub and others who made Torquay their retreat. The catalyst that sparked men like Bennett and the members of that first Bronze Squad at Torquay in 1946 was the highly regarded Allan Kennedy. Phillip Bennett, like the others around him, responded to the exciting idea of bringing the Surf Life Saving Association to Victoria.

Phillip Bennett gained his Bronze Medallion on 29 December 1946, became an instructor on 25 January 1947, and an Examiner on 6 November, 1947. He coached early R&R teams, helped build the clubhouse at Torquay, travelled along the length of the Coastline of Victoria conducting exams and organising demonstrations at various beaches.

For those who can remember Phillip Bennett the 'Examiner', he presented a most favourable and imposing sight as he came over the hill and onto the beach dressed in impeccable whites. He was a fine looking man with the knowledge and the presence expected of someone setting a standard in presentation which is still required to this day.

At Torquay like all the other friends from the Melbourne Swimming Club, he set up camp behind the beach in the sand-dunes. He was at home with his friends there and they enjoyed this life, also attracting many new young members to join them.

Phillip helped move the old Royal Life Saving Club building around from the front beach and located the weatherboard structure on the poles that were embedded in the sand as 'tank trap defence' from the war time. He took his term as President of the Torquay Club during 1965-68 and he is remembered for introducing the Torquay Ladies Auxiliary.

The workload taken on by this man continued to stretch his resources even after his term as State Superintendent. He was always there for lifesaving until his untimely death in 1971.

Phillip Bennett's contribution extended from State Centre Vice President and State Superintendent to Instructor and to being an average member. He would help at any level and could communicate with anyone.

Phillip was made a Life Member of his Club, Torquay in 1962 and of the Victorian State Centre in 1957. These honours were a fitting tribute to a man who gave so much!

By his own request, his ashes were scattered at sea off the 'Haystack' of his beloved Torquay in a ceremony involving his two sons, Phillip (Jnr.) and Damian, family members and friends.

Bathing and Saving Lives on Victoria's Beaches: 1835 - 1920

Victoria's vast coastline with its extensive sandy beaches is like a summertime magnet to its population, both present and past.

Each spring, Victoria's semi-nomadic coastal and bay Aboriginal tribes would move down to the beach in much the same way that people do today, but "...while the coast was pleasant in spring and summer, icy winds rushing up from Antarctica made it cold and forbidding during the winter months and (Aboriginal) bands retreated inland"[1] again a familiar pattern at coastal resorts now. Aboriginal settlement in the southern part of the continent occurred about 40,000 years ago, at a time when the current coastline was nowhere near the sea but was part of a large land mass extending south of Tasmania.

As the climate warmed after the last ice age, about 20,000 years ago, the sea level rose and flooded the low land bridge, bringing the sea inland to create our present coastline as well as forming a large strait (Bass Strait) between the mainland and its previously most southerly point (Tasmania). Various climatic warming and cooling periods since then created an unstable coastline along our southern shores. Today's coastline is estimated as having reached this level between 5,000 to 8,000 years ago.[2] and beaches soon after Captain Cook first sighted its most easterly point (Cape Howe) on 20 April 1770. Cook did not stop to go ashore.

The first Europeans to do so were survivors of the Sydney Cove which was shipwrecked at Preservation Island, south of Cape Barren Island, in 1797. Attempting to reach Sydney in the ship's launch, they were washed ashore through the surf onto Gippsland's Ninety Mile Beach.[3]

This early disaster was the beginning of the Victorian coastline's notoriety as the 'shipwreck coast', with more than 150 shipping accidents occurring over the next 150 years.

Settlement

Following military coastal surveys by George Bass in 1798 and John Murray in 1802, the first European settlement was made at Sorrento in Port Phillip Bay in October 1803, at the start of what became an exceptionally hot summer period. Water shortages and mutiny among the soldiers and settlers soon brought the settlement to an end within eight months.

Whalers began setting up seasonal bases along the coast some 20 years later, among them Port Fairy in 1826, then Portland in 1828 to which the Henty family came from Tasmania to settle a few years later. Also from Tasmania in 1835 came Melbourne's early founders, John Batman and John Fawkner, to set up sheep farms. More settlers soon followed.

These early 'squatting' settlements grew quickly. The illegal Melbourne settlement and others were officially sanctioned by the New South Wales authorities in 1837. Fourteen years later the entire 'Port Phillip District of New South Wales', as it was called, was granted autonomy by Queen Victoria and named after her as the 'State of Victoria' in 1851.

When gold was discovered in the Yarra Valley later that year (then more gold in the inland ranges around Ballarat and Bendigo in 1851), the population of all settlements grew in leaps and bounds. Thousands came overland from the other parts of Australia but hundreds of thousands arrived in Melbourne by ship from all parts of the world. Many left ten years later when the gold rush ended but enough people stayed and settled in the State.

By the time of the next boom, the 1880s 'land boom' until its bust in 1890, the basic yet extensive social structure of Victoria as we know it today was well established— its parliamentary system of government, cities, towns, roads and railways and social institutions such as local government, schools, hospitals, theatres, business and union organisations, charitable and humane societies and sporting clubs.

Shipwreck rescue tactics

The Gold Rush in the 1850s set Melbourne on the world's shipping map as hundreds of ships from all countries brought hopeful miners to begin their journey to the goldfields. The 1860s recession brought fewer ships but by that time Melbourne had become a major port for landing imported goods from the 'mother country', England, which were then off-loaded onto coastal freighters for other ports such as Sydney and Brisbane. As well, Melbourne, Geelong and Portland became major shipping ports for the export of wool, wheat and other products back to England.

In the 1870s as Melbourne's factories started up to replace imports and the city became the major manufacturing centre in Australia, the port facilities increased to accommodate extra ships for both imports and exports, particularly during the boom-time 1880s as the city spread and its population increased. It was during this period, from the 1850s to the early part of this century, that a staggering number of ships came to grief off the coast.

The government quickly installed lighthouses but it was the settlers who devised a variety of rescue tactics to try and save lives from the ships wrecked close to shore.

A lifeboat rescue station was first established at Queenscliff in 1856 to service the numerous overseas and coastal ships being wrecked around Pt Lonsdale and Point Nepean close to the entrance to Port Phillip Bay. The next lifeboat station was set up at Port Albert in 1860 and was chiefly involved with the numerous wrecks of coastal traders off the Gippsland coast. Lifeboat stations were then established at Portland, Warrnambool and Port Fairy. Each station comprised a volunteer crew of thirteen men required to row the 30 foot (10 metre) lifeboat, which was capable of holding at least 50 people, into the same squally and dangerous surf that had contributed to the shipwreck.

A variety of shore-based rescue methods were also brought into use, according to need and circumstance:

- The human chain, perhaps the oldest rescue method ever devised. This method was used to rescue a family from the ship Emily which was wrecked at Johanna in 1887.
- Rescuers swam out with a rope in order to set up a line between ship and shore. Shore-anchored rope methods ranged from a simple line along which people could drag themselves in hand-over-hand, or by which other ropes could be hauled in and a double line set up to establish an over-and-under line (one for your feet while you held on to the top one to walk your way back), or alternatively to rig up a flying fox.
- The first recorded shore to ship line rescue from a shipwreck occurred in 1856 when "... an Aboriginal, Buckawall, swam out (to the ship Enterprise anchored in Lady Bay, Warrnambool, which in a gale had dragged its anchor and blown broadside onto the surf) with a rope tied around his waist, and despite a terrific buffeting, succeeded in getting a line aboard, enabling Captain Caught and his crew to land".[4]
- A 'rocket' line, by which a rope attached to the tail of a 'rocket' could be fired out to the wreck and secured around the mast or any other part to set up similar rescue lines.

Rocket stations, manned by volunteers, were quickly established in coastal towns. Stations on the western coastline were set up at Queenscliff in 1869 (the Queenscliff lifeboat crew carried rockets as early as 1856), Warrnambool in 1864, Port Fairy in 1866, Point Lonsdale in 1886, Port Campbell in 1891 and also Split Point at Aireys Inlet the same year. The lighthouses at Cape Nelson, Portland, Cape Otway and Point Lonsdale were also equipped with rocket gear.

Rocket stations on the eastern coastline were established at Point Nepean in 1859, then Sorrento, Port Albert, Cowes, Lakes Entrance, Inverloch, Waratah Bay. Rocket equipment was kept on hand in lighthouses at Wilson's Promontory, Cape Schank, Cliffy Island, Point Hicks and Gabo Island.

There are frequent references to rockets being used in rescue attempts, sometimes successfully, but in the majority of cases they were not considered the most reliable method of sending out a line to the target.

. . . . . then returned, looked to see that there was plenty of rope for him to carry out, then took a short run, and leaped as if from the springing-board of a plunging-bath. He touched the water full five-and-twenty feet from the edge of the cliff. Down into its dark depth he went, like a plummet, but soon to rise again. As he reached the surface he saw the crest of a mighty wave a few yards in front of him—the wave that he had been told was to dash him lifeless against the cliff. But now his old experience of the Pacific stands him in good stead. For two moments he draws breath, then, ere it reaches him, he dives below its centre. The water dashes against the cliff, but the swimmer rises far beyond it. A faint cheer rises from the shore as they feel him draw upon the rope. The waves follow in succession, and he dives again and again, rising like an otter to take breath, making very steadily onward, though more below the water than above it.

Early use of the beaches

From the beginning of European settlement in Victoria, beach usage followed the early New South Wales rules— which were simply transplanted in the colony from England — that "... forbade bathing in waters exposed to view from any wharf, street, public place or dwelling house between the hours of 6 am and 8 pm", reflecting the English values that the general public must be prevented from being scandalised by nude sea bathing which was the common practice of the day.

Nor did 'bathing' mean swimming, since in the majority of cases, few people could swim. Bathing nude in open waters, whether sea, lake or stream, meant mostly 'having a bath' to cleanse away the dirt and sweat and grime on people who had access to only limited water supplies that had to be fetched by hand from wells or rivers which were the main sources in the early settlements. At the beach, it was common practice to use the sand as a scourer.

To overcome the inconvenience of restricted open sea-bathing hours, entrepreneurs began to build enclosed baths, a fashion that had caught on in England and Europe by the mid-19th Century. Melbourne's first enclosed swimming baths, 'Mr Riddle's Baths' for men only, was built on the south side of the Yarra in January 1844, "combining as it does a perpetual flow of water with privacy and comfort"[5], for Melbourne's well-to-do nude bathers. No other description of it is recorded, but perhaps it was designed along the lines of a bath built on the Seine river in Paris in the 1850s: "The bath is moored in the river, and the space occupied by water is 120 feet in length: a course long enough to afford room for all the exercises connected with swimming. A wooden platform, three or four feet under water, reaches to about the middle of the width of the bath ... for the use of children and mere bathers who do not swim.

The other half is of a considerable depth in the middle, admitting of practice in genuine diving".[6] Like the Paris bath, which was itself modelled on German river baths of the day, Mr Riddle erected a building to it in which "... the bathers may enjoy a cup of Mocha and a mild Havana: a grateful and refreshing luxury after the exertion of the bath".[7]

Pollution in the river however soon meant the end for these enclosed river baths, both here and overseas. Lack of clean drinking water and sewerage facilities lead to outbreaks of cholera in Melbourne and forced residents in 1857 to build a dam on the Yan Yean tributary on the Plenty River in order to bring clean water to the city. They also introduced the night cart system to dispose of sewage on land rather than in the waterways.

The focus on open water bathing soon shifted to the seaside. Sea baths became the accepted alternative for daytime bathing activities. A number of entrepreneurs erected a variety of baths, including a Hot Sea Baths at Middle Park, along the popular Melbourne beaches as development extended down past Brighton by the 1880s. By the turn of the century there were 14 sea baths from Williamstown and Port Melbourne to Brighton, a chain of large wooden enclosures squatting on the water's edge, some only a kilometre or half a kilometre apart. Country coastal towns also built sea baths in the most sheltered parts of their harbours: such as Lakes Entrance, Warrnambool, Portland, Geelong, etc.

Swimming

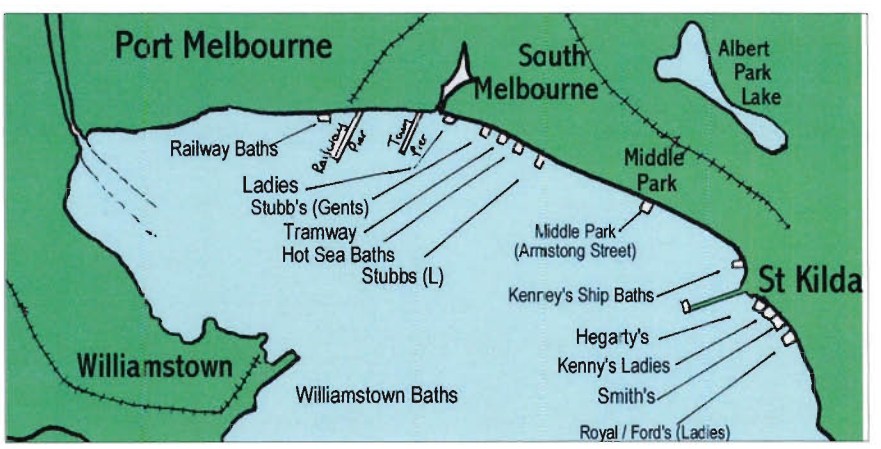

In order to attract people to the enclosed baths, proprietors began organising competitive events and promoting their establishments as a means to restoring health to people living and working in the closed and cramped conditions in cities. "It is gratifying to see," said a reporter in the Melbourne Argus newspaper in 1860 when reporting on the swimming races held at Captain Kenny's bathing ship bath, "such a goodly array of clean-limbed and 'proper' lads, sporting 'in the briny'. In fact most Victorian boys excel in outdoor exercises and make the most of a climate so well adapted for the development of muscular Christianity".[8]

Outings to the beach were by now becoming regular pastimes, even if daytime swimming and bathing were not permitted. It was enough to cool off from the sea breeze or paddle in bare feet on the water's edge. After 6 pm, if the weather was still warm, people could legally take to the water on open beaches but were encouraged to wear something in order not to offend by nudity. The idea that everyone, particularly children, should be taught to swim was slowly taking hold, and baths were now opening up to women— separately and often on alternate days to the men, but still nude bathing was the norm. Williamstown baths, for example, flew a blue flag to indicate it was men's day, and a red flag for women's day.

Attitudes to beach going and swimming in particular underwent a dramatic change at this time, spurred by medical theories that promoted swimming as a healthy exercise and proclaimed that visiting the seaside and breathing the ozone was a way of restoring energies depleted by work. Sporting activities of all types were also being held up as healthy achievements in this land of the sun, and by the late 1870s a number of swimming clubs began to form, basing themselves in the sea baths on the foreshores in the suburban and country baths and pools that sprang up around this time. Among the earliest were South Melbourne Swimming Club established at the baths and in 1875, Middle Park, and St Kilda shortly after. Soon the cry went out to make swimming a compulsory subject in schools: "Swimming may be ranked both as a pastime and as a purely gymnastic exercise... but it should be on the school curriculum", urged the Royal Humane Society. There was also another reason behind this call to arms: as open sea bathing became more popular, the number of drownings increased.

Rescuing the drowning

The Royal Humane Society was the first body to turn its attention to educating people in techniques to resuscitate the 'apparently drowned'. The Society was first established in England in 1774. In 1874 a branch of the Society was established in Melbourne.

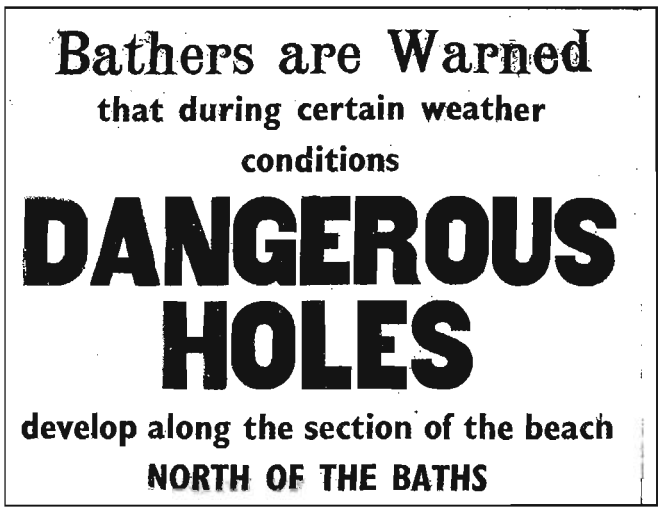

Only three years later, concerned about the high rate of drownings in the state (153 males in 1875), mostly in rivers and lakes but increasingly in beach areas, its Melbourne founder John Stewart urged that all school children should be taught how to swim and should learn also the society's lifesaving method, the Sylvester method. This resuscitation method, first devised in 1857, required laying the patient on his or her back, then using two people to alternatively apply pressure to the chest and raise and lower the arms to induce breathing. At the time it was seen as an improvement over earlier methods which saw patients laid on a barrel and rolled from side to side, or placed on a sheet held by two people at the ends and alternatively raising and lowering it in a rocking motion (similar to the Eve Rocker which was popular in the 1930s to the late 1950s).

The growing popularity of swimming and boating in Australia, as in England and Europe in the late 19th Century, increased the number of drownings and brought a sharper focus on lifesaving.

In 1889 the 'Swimmers Life Saving Society'was formed by men and women members of amateur swimming clubs in England in order to concentrate on teaching life saving techniques to the growing number people taking up swimming in baths and bays. Two years later it simplified its title to the 'Life Saving Society' and in the following year, 1892, began issuing its first awards.

A branch of this Society was founded in Sydney in 1894— the first branch outside England. In 1904, the same year that the Society was given its royal charter to become the Royal Life Saving Society, a branch was established in Victoria at the Port Phillip Club hotel on 6 December.

The Eve Rocker

After being strapped into the equipment, the patient was firstly inverted to allow gravity to assist in draining the airways, then a rocking motion was established. Later, when improved methods of resuscitation were adopted, this equipment was relegated to a secondary role. It finally fell from favour and was discontinued in 1959.

Six life saving clubs were formed in Melbourne in the first year as a result of the Society organising swimming clubs:

- The Pioneer Swimming and Life Saving Club
- The Melbourne Swimming Club
- The Albert Park State School Swimming Club
- The Richmond Amateur Swimming Club
- The Abbotsford Swimming Club
- The St Mary's Society.

The Society's program included training swimmers and teaching them the rudiments of water rescue and resuscitation methods. The first system of progressive certificates and awards was the Elementary Certificate, Proficiency Certificate, Bronze Medallion and the Honorary Instructors Certificate.

The instruction course in a life saving class consisted of six lessons in the land drill and six in the water, but before enrolling, an applicant had to pass the elementary and proficiency swimming tests. In addition to basic resuscitation techniques, the Elementary Certificate was based on swimming 50 yards non-stop (breast stroke), then 25 yards on the back with arms folded and kicking the legs (... "because in life saving the arms are used to support the rescued patient", according to the Society's handbook). The next stage up was the Proficiency Certificate, which was based on swimming 100 yards without stopping and 50 yards kicking on the back. Diving from the top of the water to a depth of no more than five feet (almost two metres) and recovering an object was also part of these tests.

The highest award was the Bronze medallion. As well as an increased knowledge of rescue and resuscitation methods, it involved an individual swim of 400 yards to be completed in 13 minutes, plus being part of a team in terms of throwing a weighted rope to a swimmer in difficulty, swimming out to that person while clothed, also forming a human chain to bring the distressed swimmer to land.

Within only a few years of its formation in Melbourne, Royal Life Saving clubs were established in more swimming clubs, schools and by some sporting clubs including the Victoria Police. More interest in the work of the Society followed as the restricted hours of daylight bathing on open beaches were gradually lifted from 1911, although it seemed that every small gain was the result of a hard won battle. The Melbourne Harbour Trust was still issuing directives in 1907 that daylight bathing was forbidden along the foreshore except in the sea baths. In 1911 South Melbourne council moved to allow open-sea mixed bathing up until 10 am (previously 6 am, then 8 am) and after 6 pm (previously after 7 pm). This liberalisation of hours became the standard around the bay but still meant that bathing was prohibited during the hottest part of the day in summer, between 10 am and 5 pm, but it was enough to give a hint of the freedom to come.

Once again, more people in the sea meant more people at risk from drowning. The Royal Life Saving Society was active in helping beach life saving clubs form, again mostly from the ranks of the swimming clubs which had headquarters in the beach sea baths, such as the Albert Park Swimming Club which formed the Open Sea Bathing Club in 1914 then renamed themselves the Albert Park Surf Club the same year.

The first beach clubs to appear, as noted in the Royal Society's 1912 report, were:

- Elwood Life Saving and Open Sea Bathing Club
- Black Rock Life Saving Club
- Hampton Life Saving Club
- Middle Park Life Saving Club
- Brighton Beach Ladies Life Saving Class.

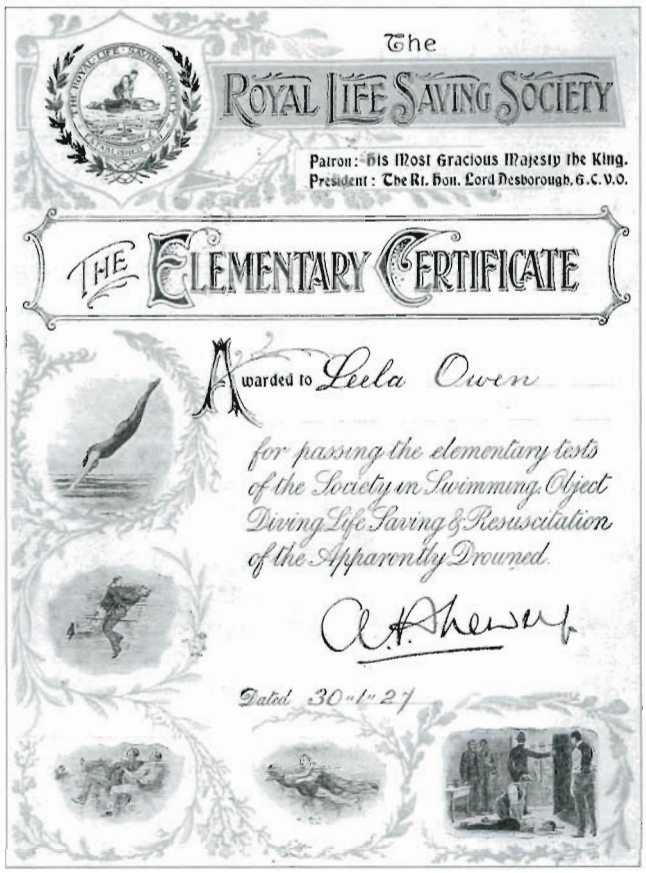

In 1913/4, Port Melbourne Life Saving Club, St Kilda Life Saving Club and the West St Kilda Life Saving Club [9] were added to the ranks.

Meanwhile, the Society expanded its personal achievement awards. In 1910 an Award of Merit was introduced involving, among other tests, a 600 yard swim fully clothed then undressing (to underwear) on top of the water. The Award of Merit soon became a much sought award, rising from six awarded in 1910/11 to 66 in 1916/17, of which 15 were won by 'ladies' (the word commonly used then). A Teachers' Certificate was also instituted in 1910, aimed principally at assisting school clubs to operate the awards. In 1914 a Diploma was introduced, then, as specialisation of methods occurred, a Surf Medallion in 1920, followed by a Surf Instructor's Certificate in 1921 and a Resuscitation Badge in 1922.

SURF RESCUE CHAMPIONSHIPS AT ST. KILDA

The Royal Life-Saving Society held its annual championships on Saturday. 1. The St. Kilda team, winners, with some of their supporters. 2. Black Rock men's team were the runners-up. 3. The North Road ladies' team. 4. Miss Lill Main was reelwoman for the Brighton ladies' surf team. 5. 14 teams took part in the march past. 6. St. Kilda ladies' team, winners in their class. 7. It was the Warrnambool combined teams first visit to Melbourne.

Competition events among the clubs soon started, and within a few years the Society began organising a number of championship events in which all clubs could compete for trophies and awards, the highest of which was the Premier Certificate, awarded to the top club of the year.

Progressively, as the restrictions on daylight bathing were removed — from 10.30 am to 5.30 in 1917, then to 1 pm to 5 pm in 1921, then to no restrictions by 1928 — more beach life saving clubs were formed around Port Phillip Bay and in country coastal towns:

1917: Half Moon Bay.
1919: Barwon Heads Rowing and Life Saving Club; Warrnambool Life Saving Club.
1922: Apollo Bay Life Saving Club, Loch Life Saving Club, Queenscliff Life Saving Club; Torquay Life Saving Club.
1923: Inverloch Life Saving Club and Lorne Life Saving Club.
1927: South Melbourne Life Saving Club.
1929: Anglesea Life Saving Club.
1930: Port Fairy Life Saving Club.
1932: Portland Life Saving Club.
1935: Lakes Entrance Life Saving Club.
1937: Carrum Life Saving Club.
1939: Wonthaggi Life Saving Club.

By 1933, the variety of clubs within the Royal Life Saving Society's Victorian framework made it one of the most vibrant recreational associations in the state: seven associations, 61 life saving clubs (31 beach and 30 pool), 17 swimming clubs and 28 schools and colleges. It could also boast of a remarkable increase in the number of certificates issued: from 119 in the formative years of 1904 -1910 to 12,418 in the brief period from 1925/6 to 1931/2 plus its surf awards.

The Surf Bathers Association

All Victorian beach life saving clubs, whether in the calm waters of Port Phillip Bay or along the coastal beaches where clubs were forming from the early 1920s, affiliated immediately to the Royal Life Saving Society, unlike the situation that had developed in Sydney where surf life saving clubs, which as early as 1906, joined the Society but quickly started their own organisation.

In 1907, seven Sydney surf clubs formed the New South Wales Surf Bathing Association, which then evolved its own system of awards and competition events. Clubs starting up along the New South Wales coast had already formed district associations of the New South Wales Surf Bathers Association. In Queensland, surf clubs formed a Queensland Surf Bathers Association affiliating with the New South Wales Association (as the 'home' branch, as it were).

In Victoria a Victorian Surf Bathers Association was formed from the Royal Life Saving Society's coastal clubs in 1918, adapting the New South Wales rules to its own conditions and operated by the Society as a form of specialist sub-committee.

In 1920, representatives from the state branches of the Surf Bathers Association agreed to establish a national body, that is, a grouping of independently run state bodies with a 'head centre' in Sydney that might co-ordinate national events but which would be the main arbiter of awards and rules.

To denote this significant development, the Australia-wide association adopted the title of Surf Life Saving Association of Australia.

John Bond of Portland

John Bond

John Bond was born at Portland, Victoria, on 24 October 1855. After leaving school, he was apprenticed as a coach builder in his uncle's business in nearby Hamilton. It was in this town that he married Sarah McDonald on 27 August 1877.

Unfortunately, Bond had to give up his trade after injuring himself with an adze. His relatives had established a joinery business at Parramatta, NSW, and in 1880 Bond made the move north to work in the firm. He resided at Newtown (1883) and Petersham (1892) before moving to Waverley in 1893 where he lived at 'Coleraine', 41 Belgrave Street, until his death in 1927. He began to study medicine and although never graduating as a doctor, he was regarded by the local residents as the next best thing. (A grand-daughter, Mrs. Jean Taylor, still has the medical texts he studied).

In 1883 Bond was working with the Railways and on 7 June of that year resigned to join the NSW Volunteer Corps. (He had previously served five years with the Victorian Volunteer Artillery). Initially posted to the 1st Infantry Regiment, Bond transferred to the Medical Staff Corps. on 26 October 1888, was promoted to Company Sergeant Major on 17 April 1892 and transferred to the Instructional Staff on 29 May 1892. Bond served in the Boer War (1899-1902) as a Warrant Officer and was part of the First Contingent which left Australia in 1899.

In 1894 the Life Saving Society (later Royal) was established in Australia and opened its first branch at Waverley. The Secretary,

Captain Arthur Holmes compiled the Branch's first Annual Report which reads as follows:

"The first public meeting having for its object the formation of the first branch of the Life Saving Society of the Australian Colonies was held at Waverley on 24th January, 1894, the necessary formalities having been completed and the branch authorised and duly acknowledged by the parent society.

A large number of members were enrolled and active work was at once begun.

We were fortunate enough to secure the gratuitous services of Sergeant-Major Bond, instructor to the Medical Staff Corps of the New South Wales Military forces, as our drill instructor and he at once organised a class of about 20 gentlemen, of whom 16 completed the full course of rescue drill, release drill and resuscitation. The drill was first carried out on land and afterwards in the water at the Bronte sea baths.

At the request of the officer commanding the Public School Cadets Corps. of the Colony, a public display was given for the information and benefit of about 300 officers and cadets at the Bronte Baths.

It is worthy to note that this public display was the first of its kind ever held in the Australian Colonies.

At the invitation of the swimming club of Parramatta, 'a large town about 15 miles west of Sydney', two squads under Sergeant-Major Bond visited Parramatta in April and gave an exhibition of lifesaving for the benefit of the local club and a large number of residents. The display was in every sense, a great success.

A third display which took the form of a water carnival was held on 14 April, 1894, at the Bronte Baths, where a large concourse of persons representing all classes was present, including members of Parliament, Officers from H.M. Ships of War on the Australian station, the Mercantile Marine and representatives of the local military forces.

It was seen that many persons, although excellent swimmers themselves, had no idea how lifesaving work was performed and were agreeably surprised at the methods adopted. Many of the members then being drilled were among the foremost swimmers of the colony.

Since the visit of the members of our branch to Parramatta the daughter of the proprietor of the baths there successfully rescued a woman who had got into difficulties.

Another instance also happened, where one of the members of the Waverley branch plunged into the Harbour at Circular Quay at night time and rescued a passenger who had fallen off one of the ferry steamers. It would therefore be seen that the work of our branch is already bearing good fruit.

It was decided in 1894 that the swimming and surfing season would commence on 1st October, each year."

A 1924 newspaper article entitled 'Pioneer of Life Saving'—Major John Bond— 'First club at Bronte' included the following statement:

"Major Bond's proudest possession, as far as life saving is concerned, is the first report and manuscript of the pioneer life saving club in Australia, which was formed at Bronte in 1894. The late Major-General Holmes—who gave his life in the Great War — was the Hon. Secretary. At the time this brilliant soldier was a captain in the 1st Infantry Regiment. The document shows many little shorthand notes made by Captain Holmes from time to time in connection with the club".

A 'Sun' newspaper article in 1936 provided details of early training. The article states that F.W. Lloyd, the lessee of Bronte Baths, obtained a handbook from A.L. Hendry, the Secretary of the Royal Life Saving Society in England. Lloyd showed the book to Holmes and Bond and shortly after Bond began instructing a group of the local swimmers. Instruction was given in an old weatherboard pavilion on the hill in Bronte Park (above the existing Surf Club) and also in Bronte Baths.

Members of Bond's first life saving class were: B. Bloomfield, W. H. Bond (his son), H.A. Brian, J. Clarke, F. Cox, H. Cox, W. E.H. Craig, W. Ellison, F. Lloyd (senior) (first lessee of Bronte Baths), F. Lloyd (junior), A.B. Parker, S. Roberts, W. Smith, S. Slater, L. Sharpe, J. Tocknell and J. Tonkin.

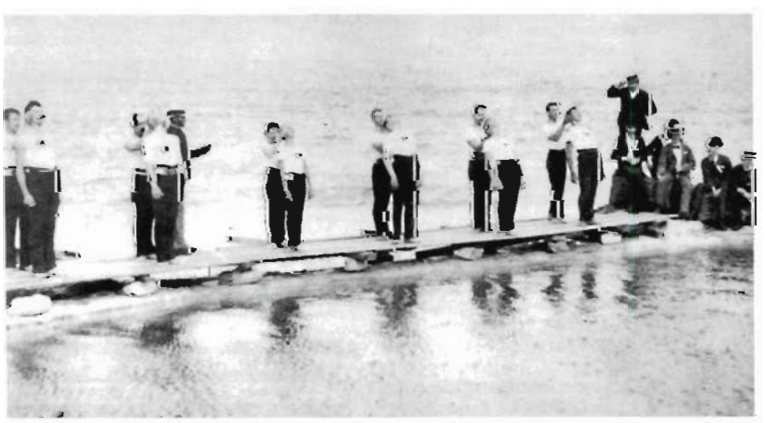

These men were the first in Australia to receive the Bronze Medallion direct from the parent body in England and were termed the Waverley Branch of the English Life Saving Society.

Assisting in the instruction was Dr Reuter, E. Roth, who was later to serve with Bond in South Africa as a Major. During World War I, Roth was promoted to Colonel and appointed Deputy Director of Medical Services in the 1st A.I.F. It is interesting to note that Holmes, Bond and Roth all served in South Africa and there is little doubt that their military background had a great influence on the drill associated with Bronze Medallion training.

Also notable are the dual roles that these men were to play:

- Arthur Holmes, Hon. Secretary of the Life Saving Society, became a Vice President of the Bronte Surf Bathing Association and later Chairman of Council of the Surf Bathing Association of NSW.
- John Bond, the Society's Hon. Instructor, became the Instructor for the Bronte Life Saving Brigade and later for both the Bronte and Bondi Surf Clubs.
- Reuter Roth became President of the Society and acted as a judge at many of the early surf carnivals conducted by the Association.

Around the middle of the eighteenth century interest had begun to develop in the resuscitation of drowned people. A succession of doctors and scientists from various countries developed techniques which improved as time passed. In England the Royal Humane Society was formed and was responsible for much of the early research. The British Army and Navy, Lifeboat and Coastguard services were also involved and there is little doubt that Bond and Roth as members of the Medical Corps had access to this information.

In 1896 the Life Saving Society placed life saving equipment on the beach at Bronte. The equipment consisted of a line and life buoy attached to a pole positioned in the centre of the beach. Bronte, being a relatively small beach, does not offer many choices in which to swim. The centre and in particular, the south end, are often dangerous with rips which sweep out and around the back of the reef and baths.

The regular swimmers quickly realised that the safest spot was mostly found north of the centre and it became the accepted procedure to detach the line and buoy from the pole and take them to where it was considered safest on the day. In the event of swimmers getting into trouble elsewhere on the beaches, the locals would race along with the line land buoy and pull them out.

On Boxing Day, 1902, one such rescue was attempted. A man was swept out at the south end and drowned despite the efforts of the locals. The rescuers waded out and threw the heavy life buoy as close as possible to the man. Their attempts were futile and rescuers and onlookers alike stood by helplessly watching the victim become weaker until he drowned. The body was swept out behind the baths and recovered the following day.

At the time Bond, who had recently returned from South Africa, was stationed at Victoria Barracks in Sydney and was studying to become an officer. The tragedy stirred Bond into action and he immediately set about organising the locals into squads to patrol the beach on a regular, scheduled basis.

There are a number of claims as to who invented the lifesaving reel which was first demonstrated at Bondi on 23 December 1906. One name however tegularly appears amongst those who are given credit for the idea— John Bond.

On 13 June 1916, G.H. Williams, Secretary of the Royal Life Saving Society, wrote a reference for Bond. Williams wrote, "He (Bond) designed the first Life Saving Reel which has proved so useful and effective on our ocean beaches and which has been adopted in the other States, New Zealand and various coastal parts of England". (G.H. Williams acted as a judge at the Bronte Surf and Life Saving Club's inaugural surf carnival held on Saturday 24 October, 1908).

A further article published in the 'Telegraph' in 1935 also referred to the origins of the surf reel:

"Of the estrangement between the society and the Surf Life Saving Association, Mr. Pior said that the rift must be causing pain to the veterans."

Veterans H. Danniell, C. Trickett, Syd Collier, and others pointed out that the great surf organisation had its birth in the R.L.S.S.

Mr A.B. Parker said that when the surf team goes to England, the surf-reel should bear a plate 'The Major Bond Surf Reel' to let the world know the originator of this aid to life preservation.

The 'Daily News' of 6 December 1938, published an article on surf life saving. The article stated:

"Surf bathing was practically unknown before 1902. Once people took to the water, someone had to safeguard them. Bronte, Australia's first life-saving Club, was formed a year later. John Bond, a Staff-Sergeant at Victoria Barracks, devised the first reel".

In a newspaper article published in that year, Mr A.B. Paterson, Secretary of the Bronte Surf Life Saving Club wrote:

"In 1910 the origin of the surf life saving movement was investigated by Mr. William Henry - then Chief Secretary of the Royal Life Saving Society— who was on a visit to Australia. He stated that the first club was formed on Bronte Beach and the surf reel was the invention of the late Major John Bond who was a foundation member of the Club.

The first reel was placed on Bondi Beach and is still in existence. The second reel was made immediately afterwards for Bronte Club."

A newspaper article published in 1939 claims that Bond was inspired by a kitten playing with a cotton reel. As the reel rocked back and forth, the thread wound and unwound and Bond thoughts led him to construct that first reel.

In 1941 A.B. Parker wrote to Les Bond (the Major's son) attributing the invention of the reel to the Major. In his letter of 25 March 1941 and 1 May 1941, Parker stated that as early as 1904 Bond was discussing the idea of a reel. He further stated that a model was made by Hainings & Son, Coachbuilder of Chippendale in 1906 and "that the first belt was made by Mr. J.T. Dudley of 35 Sussex Street, Sydney and accompanying New Zealand hemp line by Messrs. A. Forsyth & Co. Ltd., 339 Kent Street, Sydney." (Parker's statements are credible when one considers that he was a member of Bond's first Bronze Medallion Squad in 1894 and became Coogee Surf Club's Hon. Instructor in 1907).

In 1908 Major Bond became the lessee of the Bronte Baths and began a family association which was to last until 1954. In the early years sons Billy and Les managed the Baths on behalf of their father.

On 29 April 1909, Bond gave evidence before a Parliamentary Standing Committee inquiring into a proposal to extend the tramway from Waverley to Bronte Beach. Bond, who described himself as a 'Drill Instructor', stated that he had lived at Waverley for 16 years (ie. since 1893). He also said that he had been an instructor to the Bondi Life Saving Club and was currently Instructor to the Bronte Club.

He remained the Club's Drill Instructor (now termed Chief Instructor) until the end of the 1911/12 Season and was First Aid Instructor in the 1912/13 Season. He was also elected as a Vice President in 1912/13 a position he retained for the rest of his life.

Bond was duly commissioned as an officer and was promoted to Captain and then to Major. He was also an Instructor with the St. John Ambulance Brigade and upon retirement from the Army became prominent in Veterans' Affairs.

Major John Bond died on 27 February 1927, aged 72 and his wife, Sarah died on 30 August 1948, aged 89.

John Bond, the young man from Portland, played a major role in the beginnings of lifesaving in Australia.

The following extract is taken from the plaque dedicated to the 90 years of service of the reel, line and belt, which is displayed in the main hall of the Torquay Clubhouse.

"After many gallant rescues and changes over the years, the reel, line and belt is no longer used for rescue work but remains for competition.

The old hemp line went to cotton then waxed cotton then nylon and finally terylene which is still used today. The surf belt was around as early as 1896 and was used in the first instance in conjunction with winch, line and flotation buoy.

The Bronte brigade, the predecessor of Bronte S.L.S.C. developed the original cork filled surf belt which was adjustable for size and carried a sheath knife. It was somewhat cumbersome and highly dangerous.

The skeleton belt was then devised which was more practicable but was not sanctioned by Surf Bathers Association and so the cork belt continued in service. It was not until the drowning of Corrimal Lifesaver, James King that a belt with a safety release pin was designed and trialed by Manly S.L.S.C.'s Steve Dowling and Claude West in 1924. The Dowling belt as it was known was also rejected and this situation remained until 1950 when beltman Merv Fletcher drowned at Dee Why, NSW on 19th February, 1950. North Cronulla Captain, Jim Perryman also drowned whilst carrying out a rescue in the belt. It was only then that the Ross safety belt was introduced. This belt was almost identical to the Dowling Belt and very similar to the present day designs. (Getting rid of the old cork belt is attributed to Bondi's Tom Meagher.)

The surf line was first developed in 1906, the design being attributed to Major John Bond, Bronte S.L.S.C. born at Portland, Victoria on 24 October, 1855 and died 27 February, 1927. It was simply constructed with a small diameter drum, supported by only two pieces of timber nailed together. The use of the reel, line and belt spread to all States of Australia and New Zealand, various coastal parts of England and taken to other parts of the world by the army during World War II.

The reel continues to be constructed in timber, however from the 1960s many reels were constructed from stainless steel tubing and aluminium was used for the drum and handles.

The reel, line and belt has served us well having been used in thousands of rescues over a period of nearly 90 years and remains the symbol of our motto, 'Vigilance and Service'."

The De Beaurepaire Family

Lorne

'A fine contribution'

Frank de Beaurepaire

Twin brothers, Frank and Don Beaurepaire came out from England in the mid 1800s, the family settling in Lorne where they purchased Carinya, Newthorne and the Cumberland guest houses plus the Grand Pacific Hotel at Lorne. Frank Senior, born Francis Edmund De Beaurepaire on 25 March, 1869, was very supportive of the fledgling Lorne SLSC, and in fact donated the Club's first Surf Boat, The Frank Beaurepaire which in 1954 cost £500. Don Stewart gathered up the courage to ask for this large amount of money.

Frank assisted in a number of ways encouraging the club where possible. He also encouraged his children, Frank Junior, Ernest and Lillian particularly in swimming. Frank Junior, later to become Sir Frank (1891-1956), was Founder of Beaurepaire Tyre and Rubber Company in 1933 and was Chairman of Olympic Consolidated Industries from its formation.

As a swimmer, Frank junior became a World Champion representing Australia at the 1908, 1920 and 1924 Olympic Games. Sir Frank played a major role in securing the 1956 Olympics for Melbourne. In the days after 1924 he became a swimming coach passing on much of his knowledge particularly at the Old YMCA pool in South Melbourne. His vision saw the Beaurepaire Physical Education and Research Centre at Melbourne University come into being with an initial gift of £200,000. He became Lord Mayor of Melbourne from 1940-42 and MLC for Monash Province 1942-1952. He was born in Melbourne in 1891 and he died in Melbourne on 29 May, 1956 without really being able to enjoy the Olympic Games he had worked so hard to secure. He was also able to secure the World Life Saving and Australian Championships at Torquay, Victoria in 1956.

Lillian Clarke (nee Beaurepaire) also represented Australia at Olympic, Commonwealth and World swimming. She was an extremely good diving exponent, often giving diving demonstrations at popular swimming venues, but also on occasions off the end of the old Lorne pier. Lillian worked in the family business and did many of the tasks at both Carinya and the Cumberland often working in the kitchen. In those days there was a bell placed on a stand on the beach which would be rung if any person got into difficulty in the surf. 'Aunty Lil' as she was affectionately known, would race down out of the Cumberland, strip off (she wore her bathers under her clothes), swim out to the stricken person, very quickly assisting them back to shore and on occasions performing revival techniques.

For her generosity, commitment, community spirit and in honor of the funds she also committed to the project, the swimming pool on the foreshore at Lorne is named the Lillian Beaurepaire Pool. The Lorne Surf Life Saving Club recognised her contribution to surf life saving by naming not one, but four, surfboats The Lillian Beaurepaire.

Ernest Beaurepaire was, for a short time, a member of the Lorne SLSC and gave of his time to assist the Lorne SLSC. His daughter, Giselle Desére De Beaurepaire provided a range of photos and information for inclusion in this book.

Victorian Surf Championships of The 1920s and 1930s

How the Royal Life Saving Society of Victoria kept the surf beach clubs under its wing for another 26 years, from 1918 when it grouped them under the title of the Victorian Surf Bathers' Association until 1947 when it handed them over to the newly formed Victorian State Centre of the Surf Life Saving Association of Australia, is attributable to both astute management by the society's leaders and, to a lesser degree, to the cultural differences [1] —perhaps even to the long travel times —that existed then between Sydney and Melbourne.

There were, however, three main factors involved in the Royal Life Saving Society's total control over beach life-saving club activity in Victoria during this period. One was the society's adoption of the surf reel, devised for use by surf life-saving clubs in Sydney after its first public demonstration at Bondi Beach on 23 December 1906.

A second factor was the formation by the Royal Life Saving Society's Victorian branch of a Victorian Surf Bathers Association in 1918 as a sub-committee of the Royal Society. The society grouped its beach clubs under this heading and affiliated it with the New South Wales Surf Bathers Association but seemed to do little more with the opportunity it provided itself with. When, in 1920, the New South Wales Surf Bathers Association became the Surf Life Saving Association of Australia, thereby opening up the opportunity to conduct national competition events, the Victorian Royal Life Saving Society continued its affiliation with the Surf Association (in 1922) but did not participate in any national titles; nor, after an abortive attempt in 1920, encouraged any Victorian clubs to participate. Indeed, in 1929, when one club, St Kilda, went to Sydney and participated in a Surf Association competition and then desired to affiliate separately with the Surf Association, it was threatened with expulsion from the Royal Life Saving Society.

The third and most important contributing factor to the Royal Life Saving Society's control in Victoria was undoubtedly the introduction of the Victorian Society's annual Surf Life Saving Championships, the first held in the 1914-15 season under the title of Surf Rescue Championships. This development differed markedly from the situation in New South Wales and Queensland where two separate organisations — Royal and Surf —emerged, and where individual clubs in other states (but not Victoria) affiliated with the Surf Association from the 1920s onwards, many maintaining dual affiliation with Royal and Surf. The 'surf' title, however, may seem oddly used when in all the years that the surf championships were conducted, up to 1939 when World War II started, the competition was held at St Kilda Beach or at nearby beaches with very few competitors coming from the coastal beach life-saving clubs. The title of 'surf' derived primarily from the surf reel in line and belt team competitions but used the same rules as the Surf Association. The Victorian Surf Championships however did not conduct surf boat competitions, nor were surfboards used as was the case in the Surf Association by the late 1920s.

Adopting the Surf Reel

In 1914 the Royal Life Saving Society of Victoria began "... several experiments with forms of reels with life lines for surf rescue work" [2] which the New South Wales branch of the society was already using. Although officials considered "...it may be seldom that danger occurs from surf bathing in Port Phillip Bay itself..." the reels were worth putting in place for those occasions when they might be needed. The other benefits of introducing reels would come from training members in their use if called on in other locations (at that time, unattended reels were being put on some coastal beaches), and the use of reels in competitions might inspire spectators to join the society's activities.

Joe Henke in 1927, was a member of the St Kilda LSC. He transferred to Half Moon Bay and later founded the Black Rock LSC, of which he became Honorary President.

Prior to the reel being taken up by beach life-saving clubs, beach rescue training involved both 'towing', that is, rescuing a person unaided according to the society's methods, or taking out a lifebuoy and line which adorned most beaches at the time. The lifebuoy was then replaced by the 'line and belt', using at first a ship's lifejacket (to replace the lifebuoy) then a modified cork belt version, replacing the heavy kapok-filled belt.

The reel "made for efficient rewinding and unimpeded paying out of the line during rescue as it did away with the possibility of the line becoming entangled and thus holding up the beltman on the way out", explained Joe Henke in his article on 'Life Saving With The Use Of Line And Belt' in the Olympic Magazine in 1931. "Other advantages," he continued, "are that when the reel is rewound properly, it is ready for use again immediately, and the quickness with which the whole equipment can be transferred from place to place." Henke was correct in theory, but as time progressed with the reel's use in heavy surf, snagging of the line on rocks and the subsequent death of a beltman revealed a few weaknesses. In time the line release pin was modified (but not until the 1950s), and Sydney lifesavers led the way in removing the cork blocks in favour of a lighter and less cumbersome belt.

An alternative to the reel was the 'box line', or 'one-man outfit' which contained a belt and a line coiled up in a box. This was promoted for stand-alone use on unpatrolled beaches (similar to the lifebuoy and line on a pole) by the New South Wales Surf Life Saving Association. "The box line was devised for use where the surf is much heavier," Henke commented, "but is not very often seen in Victoria. (Although this gear is generally used by an experienced team of five men) in cases of emergency anyone can don the belt and go to the rescue, or if someone has already gone out, help with paying out and pulling in the line. Things to remember are: make sure that the beltman had reached and secured the patient before pulling in, also during the pull in, to cease pulling as the beltman and patient are overtaken by a wave. The reason for this is to allow the beltman with his patient to go back through the wave, otherwise if the wave breaks on them, other than probably tearing the patient away from the beltman, it is likely to cause serious injury to both of them."[3]

Once the reel was adopted by the Royal Life Saving Society in 1914, it promoted its placement on beaches —with or without clubs trained to use them —with zeal. In its 1918-19 annual report, the society could pride itself on having "...up-to-date life-saving appliances installed on the beaches, and with this object in view has undertaken the making of life-saving reels, which have been placed on the following beaches either directly or in conjunction with the various life-saving clubs: Port Melbourne, Albert Park Yachting and Angling Club, West St Kilda, Open Sea Bathers League, South St Kilda, Elwood, Hampton, Sandringham, Black Rock, Sorrento, Lorne, Torquay[4], Edith Vale, Chelsea, Anglesea, Warrnambool, Seaspray, Queenscliff. Negotiations are in progress for the installation of reels at Middle Park, Barwon Heads, Lakes Entrance, and Esplanade Life Saving Club at St Kilda. The following councils have thoughtfully provided a complete reel for the local life saving clubs: Port Melbourne, South Melbourne and Dandenong."[5]

Soon, after adopting the reel in 1914, the society was requested to organise the erection of a 'life-saving station' at Point Lonsdale, to be known as the 'Seabrook Memorial', following "...a surf bathing disaster at Point Lonsdale on 3 January 1914, by which Mr William Thomas Seabrook lost his life in attempting to rescue Miss May Hunter".[6] The station, designed by an architect and fitted out with "up-to-date life-saving apparatus including a complete ambulance first-aid station" was built "on the ocean beach, opposite the Glaneuse Reef, about a quarter of a mile west of the Point Lonsdale lighthouse".[7] On the day the station and memorial tablet was formally opened, 16 January 1916, members of the Elwood Life Saving Club gave a practical demonstration of the use of the reel.

Use of the reel in rescues does not feature greatly in the rescues recorded by the society over the years, but there were occasions when its usefulness was evident, as these examples show.

"REEL TEAM ASSISTS DISTRESSED MOTOR BOAT

On Sunday night, February 16th, 1922, at about 8 o'clock, some members of the Sandringham Life Saving Club were informed that a motor boat was in distress off Sims Street. The president (J. G. Meere), G. Ross, A. Allat, A. Barker Snr., and G. Cole went to the place mentioned and could just discern a boat. It being very dark at the time, and the circumstances of their distress not being known, a reel was brought from the clubhouse. Mr. G. Ross donned the belt and swam out in the darkness to get particulars from the party in the boat. There was an element of danger in this work for, at the place where Ross went out, there is nothing but a mass of reef; and this, with the darkness of the night and rough sea, made the undertaking a perilous one. A letter of appreciation from the occupants of the motor boat was sent to the club members concerned."

"RESCUE FROM DROWNING AT SORRENTO BACK BEACH (1922)

At the finish of a demonstration given during the Easter holidays by representatives of the society, an alarm was given by the Acting President, Mr A. W. Ralph, that a man was in trouble some distance from the shore, and was drifting towards the danger zone, making signals of distress. Mr Russell, of Middle Park Surf Club, went out and supported the drowning man. The reel was hurried to a convenient position on the beach. Mr G. J. Farley then swam out with belt and took charge of the patient, who, together with his rescuer, was then towed ashore. Had the patient been left much longer in his perilous position, no lifeline would have been long enough to have reached him. Mr Farley was the society's Chief Instructor and Examiner."

"PORTSEA (1937).

On Thursday, 30th December, four bathers who were in danger of being swept out to sea, were rescued by a volunteer beach patrol who staged a most dramatic rescue. Mr S. Palmer, captain of the patrol, brought two men to shore and, although exhausted, attempted to bring a third man. More then 300 bathers were surfing in a sea swollen by a strong southerly. The patrol, which was composed of members of bayside surf life-saving clubs who were spending their holidays at Portsea, noticed that some of the bathers were drifting towards Point Nepean. It was thought that they were seeking less crowded water; but, when cries for help were heard, members of the reel team, with Mr Palmer in the belt, went to the rescue. After struggling through the strong surf Mr Palmer brought a Mr Miller to the beach. Almost immediately the alarm was again sounded and, after a 200-yard swim, Mr Palmer brought a Mr McIlroy to the shore. The two men, suffering severely from the effects of the immersion, were immediately treated by a doctor who was present. While these men were being revived the alarm was again sounded and two other bathers were seen to be in difficulties. Mr Palmer again took the belt but was too exhausted to reach the patients who were brought ashore by other members of the patrol. Earlier in the day four other surfers were brought ashore at Sorrento, one girl having to be treated by a doctor."

The Victorian Surf Bathers Association

This extract from the Royal Life Saving Society's 1918-19 Annual Report succinctly records the formation of the 'Surf Bathing Association of Victoria':

"For some years the society has been endeavouring to organise all the surf and beach life-saving clubs in Victoria with a view to having up-to-date life-saving appliances at all seaside resorts but, owing to the war (1914-1918), the matter was allowed to remain in abeyance. However, with the advent of peace, the society at once proceeded to form an association for the control and organisation of surf bathing, and an association has been formed on the lines of the New South Wales Surf Bathing Association, called the Surf Bathing Association of Victoria, which is controlled by the society. Last year the society affiliated with the New South Wales Surf Bathing Association, and likewise this year."

"During the formation of the Victorian Association it was fortunate that Mr O. G. H. Merritt, the Chief Hon. Instructor and one of the founders of the New South Wales Surf Bathing Association, was in Victoria on a business trip, consequently the benefit of his advice was sought which was distinctly beneficial. Mr Merritt was shown our life-saving stations and attended the monthly meeting of the society. Mr Merritt was made a life member of the Royal Life Saving Society and a life and foundation member of the Surf Bathing Association of Victoria. Mr Merritt was also presented with a silver surf reel badge as a small memento of his visit."

"The Victorian Association have been delegated all the necessary powers dealing with surf bathing in this state by the NSWSBA, and is now the controlling body for all surf reel and life- saving work in Victoria. A representative team from surf reel clubs in New South Wales has been invited to come to Victoria to compete against a representative team from our clubs. The competition will take place in February 1920 and should act as a stimulus to life-saving work in this state.

Mr Donald McIntyre, the Hon. Sec. of the NSWSBA, rendered valuable services to the society when it was forming the association, as did Mr Walker, the Hon. Sec. of the NSW Head Centre of the RLSS.[8]

In that season, 1918-19, five club teams qualified for their 'Surf Reel Badge' under Mr H. L. O'Hara, Chief Hon. Instructor for reel work. Those who passed the examination were entitled to wear a replica of a surf reel on their bathing costumes. The teams were: South St Kilda, South St Kilda Ladies, West St Kilda team No 1, West St Kilda team No 2, and Brighton Beach. The examinations were held on Brighton beach, near Penny's Baths. It must have been a long day according to the report: "Each member of a team of seven had to act as instructor, give the words of command and necessary explanations, and take in rotation every position in the reel team. The test proved an arduous one ... (!)"[9]

A second visit from a Sydney team in 1920, following an invitation from the society and a reciprocal visit of a Victorian team to Sydney, did not eventuate. It seemed that rather than put its efforts into organising teams for interstate competitions, the society turned its attention to local events, particularly reviving its 'Surf Rescue Championships' first held in February 1915. Of special interest at this formative stage of the Victorian Surf Bathing Association, is that the Royal Society did not move to exclude women from its reel teams for competition and for patrols as was the case in New South Wales and Queensland Surf Bathers Associations.

Surf Rescue Championships

A visit to Victoria in February 1914 by members of the Manly Life Saving Club ("at their own expense") was arranged at the invitation of the Royal Society's Council, who "were desirous of obtaining information as to the line on which surf rescue competitions were held in New South Wales. Manly club members "gave demonstrations on the beaches, at which our members attended and received valuable advice and instruction from the Manly team. That this instruction has been fruitful is shown by the form displayed by the competitors in the Surf Championship of Victoria, which was held on March 27, 1915".[10]

The competition was held according to the rules of the New South Wales Surf Bathing Association and three teams were entered: St Kilda, Elwood and West St Kilda, with St Kilda the winning team (whose captain, Mr H. O'Hara was also the society's chief instructor).

The Manly team had requested that the Victorian championships be opened to interstate teams, which the sponsors of the Treadwell Challenge Cup of the surf championships agreed to, "providing that similar concessions were given to Victorian competitors to take part in New South Wales championships". The war years intervened to prevent this happening.

The second Surf Rescue Championships was held in the 1920-21 season, following the introduction of the Surf Award for proficiency in the use of line and reel in the surf.

The title of 'Surf Championships' was dropped and replaced with 'Reel and Line Championships' in 1940, reflecting the agreement between the Royal Society and the Surf Life Saving Association (verbally agreed to in 1938 but not signed into a document until 1942) to delegate all surf matters to the surf association, titles included.

Rescue and resuscitation (R&R) competitions based on the Surf Medallion Test Drill

Reprinted here is the 'Surf Medallion Test Drill' from the New South Wales 'Surf Bathing Association's Handbook' of 1918, which was adopted at the Victorian association's handbook. This drill is the origin of the Surf Association's 'Bronze Medallion'.

It is interesting to read it in this original form since it was later added to and modified and appeared to increase in complexity in the handbooks printed by the Surf Association in the following decades, especially in the 1930s and 1940s. Surf club members, past and present, will see elements of their own drill in it and realise how little or how much it differs from their own 'Bronze' test.

The chief difference is in the resuscitation methods used over the years. This 1918 account used the Schaefer method, first adopted by the Royal Society around 1903.

The team format of the 'Surf Medallion Test Drill' had been laid down early by the founding Sydney surf clubs, adapting British military drill (pre 1914-18 World War 1) to the use of the reel in order to increase the efficiency of the reel's use in a team situation, similar to the way a gun battery is efficiently put into use by the battery team. Squads consisted of candidates and instructor.

1. "Fall In"

On the words "Fall In" the candidates will form up in single line, according to the positions previously balloted for, two paces behind the reel, with Nos. 3 and 4 behind the right and left handles respectively, and stand at ease, viz: left foot to be carried smartly about 12 inches to the left, right foot to stand fast, and clasp hands behind back.

2. "Attention"

On the word "Attention" the members will stand in the following position: shoulders square and body to the front; the arms should hang easily from the shoulders, elbows to the rear; the fingers together, slightly bent, and their tips touching the thigh lightly; the hips drawn back, and the chest arched forward, but without constraint.

The heels must be in line and closed, the knees well braced back; the toes turned out so that the feet may form an angle of 45 degrees; the weight of the body resting on the fore part of the feet. The head erect, but not thrown back; the chin slightly drawn in, and the eyes looking straight to the front.

3. "Right Dress"

On the word "Dress" the right-hand member will stand fast, looking straight to the front; the remainder will direct their eyes to the right, the head being smartly turned in that direction; each member, except the right-hand one, will take his dressing or position in line by moving with short, quick steps until he is just able to distinguish the lower part of the face of the second member on the right. Care must be taken that he carries his body backward and forward with the feet.

4. "Eyes Front"

On the word "Front" members will turn their head and eyes smartly to the front.

5. "Number"

On the word "Number" the right hand man will call out "one", his left hand man "two" and so on, until each has called his number in the line.

6. Rescue and Release drill on land

Candidates must be taught the Rescue and Release Drill on land, as laid down in the Royal Life Saving Society's Handbook, and will be examined thereon before entering the surf.

Reel and line drill

(This drill—paras 7 to 12— has been omitted from the Rescue and Resuscitation Competitions today).

7 Reel - "Positions"

On the command "Positions", Nos. 2 and 5 will take up positions at front handle, Nos. 3 and 4 at rear handles, and Nos 1 and 6 at sides of reel.

8. "Lift Reel"

On the command "Lift Reel" Nos. 2 and 3 will grasp handles of reel with their left hands, and Nos. 4 and 5 with their right hands and lift reel.

9. "Quick March"

On the command "Quick March" the instructor will march the squad to a position indicated by the examiners.

10. "Down Reel"

On the command "Down Reel" Nos. 2, 3, 4 and 5 will place the reel on the ground and then stand to attention.

11 "Reform"

On the command "Re-form" the squad will turn right about and march back to their original positions.

12. "Front"

On the command "Front" the squad will turn right about and take up their dressing from the right and stand at ease.

13. Instructor to indicate here that Nos. 1 to 6 will act as under:

(1) Patient
(2) Beltman
(3) First Lineman and Resuscitator
(4) Reelman
(5) Second Lineman
(6) Third lineman

14. No. 1 "Go"

The squad will first be called to attention. On the command "Go" (or pistol shot) the patient will swim out to a distance specified by the examiners. No. 2 to then place belt in position (six paces in front of reel) by taking a pace to the rear and marching round the left flank of the squad; returning by the same route.

15. Line– "Positions"

On the command "Positions" the squad will double to their positions, viz: No. 2 to belt and don same. No. 3 to adjust belt on No. 2.

Nos. 3, 5 and 6 to take up position on line, No.3 on right-hand side and Nos.5 and 6 on left. No.4 will step up to reel. All to stand to attention.

"Hauling In"

16. "Go"

On the command "Go" No. 2 will swim out to No.1 (in competitions there will be no second "Go" or pistol shot, but beltman will start immediately the patient reaches buoy and raises his hand). Nos. 3, 5 and 6 to pay out the line above their heads with the right hand, whilst holding the left hand stationary and allowing the line to run through the fingers. The beltman, on reaching the patient, shall secure him by the Royal Life Saving Society's second or third method of rescue and indicate to the shore by raising the arm that he is ready to be drawn in.

"Patient Carry"

The linesmen, on receiving this signal, shall bring the line smartly to their sides, Nos. 3 and 6 being on the right-hand side of the line and No.5 on the left-hand side. They will then proceed to pull steadily in, taking time from No.3. During this process they shall maintain a direct line between the belt and reel, and the reeman shall assist by facing the reel accordingly.

On reaching shallow water No. 2 hands patient to No. 3, 5 and 6, No.3 taking right-hand side of patient and No.5 the left, clasping their right and left hands respectively under the buttocks, and their left and right hands under the shoulders of the patient. No. 6 will carry patient by the legs on his right. In this manner they will carry the patient head foremost to a point indicated by the examiners.

The patient will then be lowered to the ground, the feet towards the left flank of the squad, and No. 3 will proceed immediately to turn the body face downward, first taking the patient's right forearm, with his left hand, bend it across his forehead, at the same time raising the patient's left arm over his head, and allow it to rest in the palm of the hand of the bent right arm, so then when turned the patient will be moved over on his extended left arm, and forehead will rest on the right forearm.

The body to be turned away from No. 3 by placing his right hand under the patient's hip, and the left hand under the patient's shoulder. The patient's head and arms will then be placed in position, the head resting of the left side of face and arms extended above the head, examine and clear mouth. The feet will be placed together.

No. 2 (beltman) after handing over patient will march back to starting point, then divest himself of belt, and place same on the reel and return to his position in team by left flank.

Note: Here it might be explained that the beltman, after handing over the patient, shall march back to the reel and place the belt on same. This being done, No. 4 (reelman), after adjusting reel, will take up his original position squad and stand at ease. No. 2 will wait beside the reel, while Nos. 5 and 6 will form into single file behind him. All will then march to their respective positions in squad, on the word of command from No.6, stepping into line together, and stand at ease.

Resuscitation drill, introducing Schafer method

After patient has been placed on the ground and turned face down, as indicated above, No. 3 to examine mouth and kneel to attention.

Note: clear mouth. No. 3 will examine patient's mouth to see that no obstructions, such as false teeth, rushes, grass, mud or sand are blocking same and that the air passage and cavity of the mouth are perfectly clear.

Note: attention. Operator to kneel at side of patient midway between knee and hip, right knee touching patient's leg, body, head and eyes directed to the front.

17. "Proceed"

Operator will place his hands slightly above the small of the back of the patient, with thumbs about 1 inch apart, and parallel with the backbone, fingers extending on each side of the body, the little fingers to be over the two floating ribs; he will then lean forward steadily allowing his weight to fall upon both hands slowly, arms straight, and without effort compressing the body downwards and slightly forward, taking care the hands do not slip backwards. Still keeping the arms straight, he will then release the pressure, swing backward smartly, but without lifting the hands from the patient's body. The complete movement should occupy four seconds, and the correct number 15 complete to the minute.

Movement to be completed and operator to kneel at "attention".

Note: operators should at all times act smartly, but not roughly, watch patient closely for any signs of consciousness or returning breathing. In actual cases of drowning it is preferable to kneel astride patient.

Promotion of warmth

19 "Promote Warmth"

On the command "Promote Warmth" No. 3 shall rub with both hands down the back and up the sides of the body, then will rub the legs (right first), rubbing with one hand, and holding the feet with the other.

He will then rub the arms (right first), rubbing with one hand and holding the patient's hand with the other. (On no account should the limbs be raised whilst the patient is face downwards). The patient is then turned over towards No.3 by grasping the patient's hip with the right hand and right shoulder with the left hand. The patient should then be lying face upwards with the arms extended above the head and the legs together. Friction over the surface of the body will then be resumed by first rubbing the face, neck and chest, sides of body and abdomen. The arms will then be rubbed (left first), raising and smacking palms of hands. As each arm is rubbed it shall be brought down and placed at the patient's side. The rubbing must always be towards but not past the patient's heart. Limbs to be rubbed only on the inside.

On the command "Halt", which will be given as soon as the patient's right arm has been placed at the side, No. 3 will bring his hands smartly to his own sides and kneel at attention.

21 "Reform"

On the command "Re-form" No. 3 will assist the patient to rise by taking the patient's right hand with his right hand and placing his left hand under the patient's shoulder, and Nos. 1 and 3 will then resume their original positions in the squad, the patient leading, and shall both step into the ranks at the same time and stand at ease.

22 "Change Flank"

The squad being again brought to attention, the command will be "Change Flank", when No. 1 will take one pace to rear, left turn, and march to the end of line, right turn, and take one pace forward. Immediately No.1 has taken the pace to the rear, Nos. 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 will take two short paces to right. Right dress, number and proceed as before.

SLSA followed the original British Royal R&R drill.

In competitions, there was a ballot for positions, and judging was based on points, the maximum being:

20 for speed by the patient and beltman,

10 for general efficiency in use of belt and line,

20 for resuscitation work and treatment of patient generally,

10 for general discipline.

St Kilda tries to affiliate with the Surf Association of Australia in 1929 – but is stopped

"Early in the year (1929)," St Kilda Club Captain Joe Henke wrote in his article for the February 1931 issue of the Olympic Magazine, "I arranged with Captain A. Holmes, president of the Manly Surf Club, for a team from St Kilda Club comprised of R. Hillis, N. Farley, L. Hassett, F. Johns, A. Wells, A. Bennett, L. Jacobson to visit and compete at the Manly carnival in February, 1929. This was the first Victorian surf reel team to compete interstate, and I might add a great experience and invaluable instructional education in actual surf work to those who made the trip. Four of us gained the Australian Surf Association's Surf Award whilst there, being the first members of a Victorian Club to obtain the award, the other three members (in addition to myself) were R. Hillis, A. Wells and L. Hassett."

In preparation for joining the Manly carnival 'officially', Henke —who was club captain of the St Kilda surf reel team —put forward a motion at the club's annual general meeting on 26 September 1928 that the club affiliate with the Surf Life Saving Association, which had its head centre in Sydney. The club would still keep its affiliation with the Royal Life Saving Society, Henke said at the meeting, and would simply have dual affiliation in the same way that a number of interstate clubs in New South Wales, Queensland and Western Australia, whilst primarily affiliated to their state Surf Association branches, also maintained an affiliation with the Royal Society.

"In moving the motion for dual affiliation, Mr Joe Henke said members had won all the awards offered by the society, and now desired to gain further knowledge by competition with an association that had different methods. There was no suggestion that the club should break with the society. The club had won the Surf Championship four years in succession and now wanted to try its skill against Australia's best."[15]

"Act of a traitor!" declared the society's chairman, Mr A. A. Meyers, "that's what this proposal is! It is a contemptible business — and is the basest ingratitude to the society which had done so much for the St Kilda club!"

Henke and his fellow team members were no doubt taken aback at this reaction to their proposal which they hoped the meeting would view in sporting terms only.

However, they should have seen it coming, Henke admitted later. Animosity still prevailed following a visit to Melbourne of a Sydney Surf Life Saving Association team en route to Western Australia when it was refused permission by the Royal Society to give a display on Victorian beaches. When the team returned from Perth to Melbourne the St Kilda Club ignored the ban and arranged a display, pitting a strong team against the visitors and were watched by thousands of spectators. "The St Kilda Club having incurred the displeasure of the society in 'flouting its decision not to allow a display', drastic action was threatened but, wiser counsel prevailing, the matter was allowed to drop; not, however, before much damage had been done to the movement."[16]

Henke's replied that if the motion was passed, the club would probably take a team to Sydney in February (1929). "As to the reference to traitors," he added, "my interest in the motion is solely that of club interest."

An amendment was moved by Mr L. Brown "that this meeting places on record its appreciation of the work and constitution of the Royal Life Saving Society and views with indignation any attempt to affiliate with the Surf Association of Australia and resolves that until the Victorian Head Centre of the RLSS determines on a satisfactory agreement with the SLSA, it is the duty of the officers of the club to resist overtures from the association". A heated discussion followed, lasting until midnight. Finally a vote was taken and Henke's motion was lost in favour of the amendment by 18 votes to 12.

Behind the Royal Society's officials' opposition to the St Kilda proposal was an attempt by some inside the society to become more independent from their English roots, eyeing the Surf Life Saving Association as an example of an Aussie born and bred organisation. Opposed to this republican push were the majority of officials in the society who were zealous about maintaining the system of awards which officially came from the head centre in London. The Herald reporter at the St Kilda Club meeting expressed a poetic view of this struggle:

"Behind these moves and counter-moves there is an intention on the part of some members of the Royal Life Savers to cut the painter that ties them to the parent society in England.

From the sirens of the Sydney surf there have come whispered invitations to the recalcitrants to desert the dear old mother and see life. 'Come on in, the water's fine' has been the burden of the siren's song. The surf lifesavers have already revolted and have made themselves strong in their rebellion.

LIFE SAVING WAR IN SYDNEY

Royal Society Charged With Wrong Methods

SYDNEY, Tuesday. — So bitter has become the war between the Royal Life Saving Society and the Surf Life Saving Association of Australia that at the council meeting tonight of the association notice of motion was given that in future all members and clubs must not practice or learn R.L.S.S. methods.

There are now several clubs in Sydney affiliated with both bodies and practising both methods of rescue. Friction between the organisations began with the formation of a R.L.S.S. federal council in Melbourne recently, and the attempt to publish a book called Australian Surf Rescue Methods.

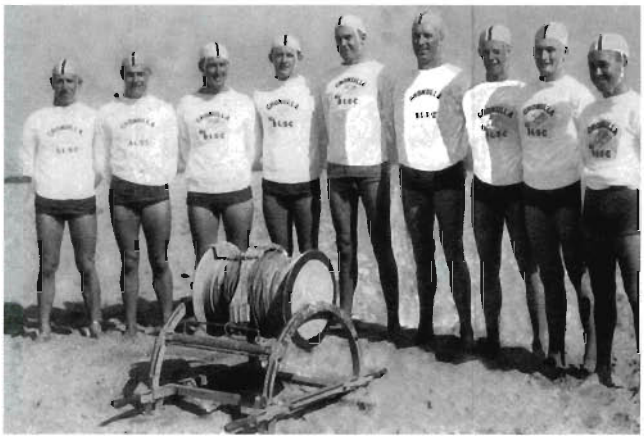

The deputy president (Mr. R. Doyle) said the R.L.S.S. taught wrong resuscitation methods and the association should fight against it. It was moved that the federal council be given until next Monday to reply to an early letter calling for confirmation of their attitude, and failing a reply there be a complete break.

In 1935 a dispute occured between the two life saving bodies as noted by this article.

...The malcontents stress the advantage to be gained from the widening of experience that would accrue, but it is felt to be a small return to be offset against a greater loss. It is felt by some loyalists to be a mere subterfuge, veiling more sinister reasons that spring from active antagonism towards the Royal Life Saving Association."[17]

The Royal Life Saving Society's leaders in Victoria simply did not think there was room for two organisations in the state. If their response to the St Kilda Club attempt seemed 'over the top', it is excusable in terms of wanting to stop what they saw as even one club becoming the 'thin edge of the wedge' in dividing up the territory between Royal and Surf as they had seen happening in the other states.

But having won the war, they did not win every battle. St Kilda Club went to Sydney in February 1929 and participated, as a welcomed Royal club, in the Manly carnival.

In 1930, Joe Henke left the St Kilda club and joined Black Rock (Half Moon Bay), building it up to a championship team that beat his old team in the Surf Championships of the early to mid 1930s. At the same time Henke joined the state committee of the Royal Society and by hard work and commitment to the society, rose through its ranks as chief examiner, then vice-president in the late 1940s, eventually and without fuss taking the society's coastal clubs into the newly-formed State Centre of the Victorian Surf Life Saving Association in 1947. At this stage Henke (and Royal Secretary Ernie Pleydell) maintained "dual affiliation" on both organisations' executive, which almost 20 years after his earlier but failed attempt must have given him a great degree of satisfaction in the cause of life saving in Victoria.

Ronald J. Hussey
'Victoria's first fearless boat sweep'

Ron was indeed Torquay's and Victoria's first 'fearless' Boat Sweep.

Arriving in Victoria from Queensland for his job, Ron quickly became involved with the Torquay Group of 1945/46 and although not a founding member of Torquay, he was among the very early group who helped form the Victorian State Centre.

Ron Hussey

His efforts in all aspects of Examination and Instruction but particularly in the boat area, were always very well respected.

Ron gained his Bronze Medallion at Surfers Paradise in 1937 and had been a member of the Surfers Paradise Boat Crew over quite a long period prior to the Second World War.

For the younger lifesavers on patrol, it was often the case when Ron would step out the distance between the flags, take a quick look at the conditions then ask the question, "Are you the Patrol Captain, Son?" "Yes," he replied. "Then tell me, is this the only bit of water that is safe or is this all you are able to patrol?" This question usually brought a stunned silence, to which Ron would reply, "Open them up, son! Open them up"!

To have a surf boat named after you is an honour in Surf Lifesaving, received by few — Ron had two: The Ron Hussey I and The Ron Hussey II.

Chevalier R.E. Garrard

MBE, OBE, OS (Philippines), KSCV

'Victoria's first National competitior'

'Dick', as he is affectionately known, grew up in Mordialloc and joined the Mordialloc Life Saving Club in 1925 at the age of 15. His swimming ability was evident early, coming second to John Gibson in the Mentone /Mordialloc Pier to Pier Swim in 1927.

R.E. Garrard

Dick also won belt swims and surf races for Mordialloc, and in 1928 he won the Three Mile Swim in the Yarra River. Although by then a member of the Victorian Railways Institute with more than just an interest in fitness and wrestling, Dick also joined the YMCA where for several years he was coached in swimming by the late Sir Frank Beaurepaire. This was despite the rivalry between the YMCA and the Victorian Railways Institute in wrestling.

His interest in swimming fitted in with his growing interest in wrestling. Dick was an extremely energetic and naturally athletic young man who by this time was showing more than average talent as a wrestler.

Along with young men like Vic Harvey, Tony Johanssen and Jack O'Hara (who wrestled as a welter weight with Dick, who was a light weight, at the Berlin Olympics in 1936) he started a camp at Torquay from around 1937. In those days they slept in the old Rotunda and Dick remembers the signs which indicated the dangers of swimming at the Back Beach.

After competing in the Pan Pacific Games in Tokyo in 1939 where he captained the team, the war years (1939-45) put a gap in his wrestling career.

Dick and his band of wrestlers joined with those other founding fathers of surf lifesaving in Victoria, Ainslie 'Sprint' Walker, Jim Wall, Phillip Bennett, Charlie Kendall and many others to form the Torquay Surf Life Saving Club in 1946.

He also organised the first surf boat for Victoria, the Southport from Southport, Queensland, which arrived at Geelong by train and was transported to Torquay by Jim Wall who had organised a truck from Johnson's Tyne Foundry.

Although by now Dick saw wrestling as his career and surf as his recreation, he supported the formation in 1947 of the Victorian State Centre of Surf Life Saving Australia and was Torquay's first delegate.

In 1946 he became the first Victorian surf lifesaver to represent Victoria when he competed at the Australian Surf Championships in Queensland as a board paddler for the Torquay Club. Then in the early 1950s Dick joined with several Torquay members and others who went 'over the hill' to form the Jan Juc SLSC in 1951.

More importantly he was responsible for rescuing 20 people from drowning during his long career.

For his involvement in wrestling Dick received an MBE, OS (Philippines), KSCV and the OBE.

Dick competed last in 1956 when he dislocated his shoulder. His wrestling career and involvement spans over 60 years and he is still contributing at 86. As a wrestler he competed as a Light and Welterweight in 525 major bouts with a loss in only 9. During this time Dick held the Victorian Weightlifting Championship and broke an Australian record in his class in 1994.

His major achievements are:

- British Empire and Commonwealth Games 1934-54 (held Title for 20 Years), Official 1958-1990.
- Olympic Games 1936-56, Official 1960-92.
- World wrestling Championships at 44 years of age (in Tokyo) 1954, Official 1961-81.
- National Games (Australia) 1931 and 1935 (Gold medallist).
- Asian Wrestling Championships as an Official 1973, 74, 75.
- Asian Games 1954, 1962.
- Australian Championships 1931-56 (held Title for 25 Years, defended 17 times).
- Victorian Championships 1930-56 (held Title for 26 Years, defended 17 times).
- Victorian Championships 1930 - 56 (held Title for 26 years, defended 17 times.)

"Get Set . . ."
The First Year - 1947 to 1948 – a Year of Firsts

Although the Royal Society handed over its surf coastal clubs at the inaugural meeting of the Victorian Surf Life Saving Association on 9 January 1947, the reality was that this new State Centre had only one club in existence: Torquay. The Royal Society's coastal clubs, with the exception of Warrnambool, had folded either in the 1930s depression years or during the war years, 1939 to 1945.

The immediate task ahead was to revive the coastal clubs as Surf Life Saving clubs. The way to achieve this, the executive members agreed, was to follow in the footsteps of the early founders of the surf life saving movement in Sydney when they started out, namely to travel down to the beaches with demonstration teams in order to arouse local interest, then, when clubs formed, to arrange competitions and carnivals to keep up members' involvement. A State Centre that sat back and waited for clubs to 'magically' form and affiliate to it was a State Centre that was doomed from the start. And if, within two years at the least, there were not enough clubs to run a decent carnival, then it would be evident there was no public interest in a surf life saving culture in Victoria in accordance with the New South Wales model and the coastal life saving scene could revert back to the Royal Society.

There was a gamble, too, on whether or not the general public wanted to swim at surf beaches. In Victorian coastal towns the swimming beaches and sea baths were located in the more sheltered coves and harbours. Would people desert these safe havens for the more turbulent surf further down the beach?

The State Centre executive members who were going to go down to these established towns would also have to be salesmen for the surf culture which, at the time, everyone associated with New South Wales and the almost 'foreign' nature of many of that state's sporting and recreational activities such as rugby, surf carnivals and racing horses in the opposite direction.

On the positive side, the surf life saving movement could offer people a more exciting involvement in beach activities, particularly in the way the New South Wales and Queensland Associations had already incorporated surfboard racing into its competition programs as well as the spectacle of surfboats in its carnivals and during patrols. If the manner in which the Torquay club started was any criterion, namely from an adventurous group of surfboard riders and surf swimmers, then it might be that this was one of the new elements that people, especially young people, were looking for in their leisure activities as a distraction from the drab post-war reconstruction environment and the continuing rationing.

The fledgling Victorian State Centre found its super salesman in Allan Kennedy, the Queensland Superintendent who was now the Victorian Superintendent. Its ambassador of good will was president Sprint Walker, an ex-Manly champion. The Centre's business expertise lay in the skills of secretary Jim Wall, Manager of the Tyneside Foundry in Port Melbourne. State Centre's roving demonstration group would have to come from the members of the Torquay club. "But once the momentum started, which seemed to me to be built on their enthusiasm only," as Phyl Wall commented on her husband's active involvement as Secretary in those early years, "the whole show just took off like a rocket!"

A few 'Firsts'

Only a week and a half after the State Centre's inaugural meeting, Superintendent Allan Kennedy provided the new State Centre with its first official hosting opportunity when he, Walker and Wall welcomed the Sydney Head Centre's East Coast Surf Team (comprised of NSW and Queensland champions) on its arrival in Melbourne on Friday 17 January 1947. Head Centre had chosen Kennedy to manage the team for the West Australian Titles in late January 1947. As Kennedy had stated at the foundation meeting, the timing of the team's trip could not have been better as far as Victoria was concerned and by arranging a few displays, this would provide excellent publicity for the surf movement in Victoria. The Herald reported: "Mr Kennedy hopes the Victorian visit of the team will encourage the extension of surf life-saving clubs here". A further comment, that "... dark, handsome 15-stone captain of the team, Jack Ferguson, of Bondi, winner of the Army swimming championships during the war and Australian life saving champion for two successive seasons ... is the only member of the team who has swum in Victoria, but the cooler water here holds no fear for the others who swim all the year round"[1] fed the popular belief at the time that surf swimming and associated activities were only suitable in warmer climates.

Through fellow executive members Joe Henke and Ernie Pleydell, who were also the Royal Society's Vice-President and Secretary respectively, a reception with the Lord Mayor of Melbourne was arranged soon after the team arrived, but they had the bonus of meeting former Olympic champion swimmer, Councillor Sir Frank Beaurepaire, who deputised for the Mayor, Cr Connelly.

The Royal Society, through St Kilda Life Saving Club, arranged for the team to demonstrate their R&R skills on St Kilda beach on the Saturday. Using the collapsible surf reel the team had brought with them, this performance also allowed them to practice as a team for the first time. Following this, they were driven to the Torquay club for a reception on the Saturday evening. On Sunday morning the team went to Lorne for another demonstration, then returned to Torquay in time to join in the Torquay carnival, borrowing surfboards from the club to compete in the board races. To add to the excitement on the beach there was the drama of a major bushfire at Anglesea that day, with Torquay almost surrounded by smoke. The East Coast team, both invigorated and perhaps a little exhausted after this busy schedule, caught the train for Perth on the Tuesday.

Melbourne newspapers certainly gave the East Coast's team visit the publicity profile that Kennedy had hoped for and, in effect, it proved to be a major catalyst in stirring up interest in surf activities. It was not long before it finally bore fruit in the shape of new clubs forming.

However the visit also showed up a weakness in the organisational side that needed urgent attention, namely, the executive's ability to secure sufficient petrol for this type of promotional activity along the coast. Torquay members had contributed a considerable amount of their valuable petrol ration coupons to keep the East Coast show on the road. In the following months the State Centre executive explored the possibility of securing a supply of ration tickets in its own right rather than drain the supply of its individual members.

Sir Frank Beaurepaire, Lord Mayor of Melbourne 1940 - 1944, supported the formation of State Centre in 1947.

A case was made to the Liquid Fuel Control Board based on the importance of the Association's work in securing safe surf beach swimming areas and the need to promote their work through carnivals and competitions and the long travel distances to many of these centres. Rations are required "... for country trips on instructional purposes, for examples, 40 gallons are needed to get to Warrnambool and back", the application stated. Their application was "favourably received by the Board" in September 1947 and "85 units were allocated to the Association". It was the first of many such applications to the Board who were not particularly over generous in handing out supply coupons each time. But every little bit helped.

Another 'first' was the Victorian centre's first (and only) official representative, Dick Garrard, in the Australian Surf Life Saving Association Championships held in Queensland in April 1947. Dick Garrard was (and still is) a member of the Torquay club, and an Australian champion wrestler who represented Australia in the 1936 Olympics in Berlin[2]. Garrard was both a founding member of Torquay and one of the founding committee members of the Victorian State Centre. He entered the surfboard race and came sixth, explaining the result (with a smile), "on the lack of competition in Victoria at the time to prepare for the tough competition of Aussie Titles". The event that year was scheduled at Southport but due to storms was moved to Greenmount. Allan Kennedy was one of the organisers and it was the first time that a double ski championship event was included. Kennedy was a keen promoter of double skis as basic surf life saving equipment for all clubs.

However Dick Garrard managed to score another first for both Torquay and Victoria in making the initial contacts with the Southport Surf Life Saving Club which only a month later, in May 1947, resulted in them donating one of their boats to the Torquay club. Torquay members dubbed it the white boat.

A milestone 'first' was achieved early in 1947 when the Warrnambool Life Saving Club regrouped with old and new members as the Warrnambool Surf Life Saving Club and affiliated in March 1947 with State Centre, sending in their cheque for affiliation fees of one guinea (£1/1 - $2.10). This now made two clubs affiliated with Victorian State Centre. Almost six months passed before a visit to the Warrnambool club from a State Centre executive member could be arranged.

When Superintendent Allan Kennedy visited the club in late August that year, he found that they had enrolled women as members just as they had done when it belonged to the Royal Life Saving Society. The change-over, they thought, was merely to be in name only, but with business as usual. Kennedy pointed out to the club officials that women could not become members for the purpose of patrols and competitions under the rules of the Surf Life Saving Association, but could only be involved in an auxiliary capacity, such as the Ladies Auxiliaries that operated in the club structure in other states.

More clubs a priority

The switch-over of more Royal coastal clubs (other than Warrnambool) to the new Surf association by correspondence came to nothing as the months rolled on after the State Centre's founding. In June 1947, letters to Portland Surf Life Saving Club and Lakes Entrance Surf Life Saving Club regarding their entitlement to send delegates to State Centre brought a response from Fred Lyne, Secretary of the Lakes Entrance Life Saving Club, that ". . . it was dormant owing to members enlisting in the forces, but that he hoped to re-form the club before next season".

More promising in terms of starting new clubs was the relationship the State Centre had already begun with the Lorne Foreshore Committee as a result of the Torquay Club and the East Coast team visit there in January 1947. Another likely prospect was at Portsea. The Portsea Foreshore Committee asked the State Centre in April 1947 for assistance with controlling the "dangers of surfboards" there. The executive recommended that the Torquay sign be adapted for Portsea. The sign at Torquay read:

"Surf bathers are to observe that the beach area south of this notice is for the use of Surfers using large Surfboards, other Surf bathers must not enter the water in this area, but must bathe between the flags on the beach. By Order, Committee of Management, Torquay Public Reserve."

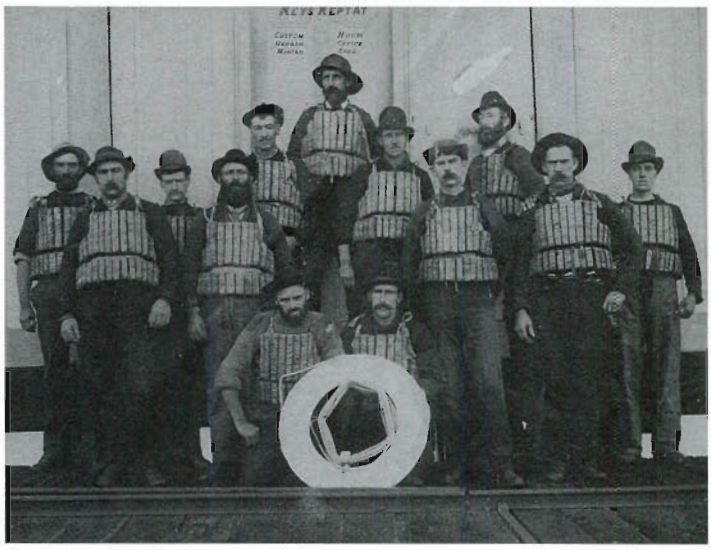

Hoping to promote any future surf life saving club activities at Portsea, the executive recommended that a sign at Portsea should read:

"Surf bathers will observe and act as instructed by the Surf Patrols, particularly when told to bathe between the flags.

Surf bathers are to observe ...(etc, as above for Torquay)".

It was not adopted immediately. The old sign that the Ocean Park Trust had erected, stating: "Danger - Owing to the dangerous undertow, bathers are warned not to venture beyond their depth" was thought to be sufficient, since there had been no drownings at the beach in the 15 years since the Life Saving Club had disbanded and if there was trouble then the club's old lifeline that was kept on the beach could be used.

State Centre members quickly realised the advantages of working with Foreshore Committees in terms of starting up surf clubs at new locations. These committees, where they existed, were the 'fast track' to getting a club off the ground and could involve local identities with a proven record of administration.

In late August 1947 Superintendent Allan Kennedy travelled to Warrnambool and attended their club meeting as well as giving instruction. He then travelled to Portland, accompanied by some Warrnambool club officials, to meet with the former officials of the Portland Royal Life Saving Club in order to explain the new surf movement that was starting in the state and which had the support of the Royal Society's Head Office. The importance of this 'face-to-face' explanation proved a key factor in reviving interest in Portland to turn the former Royal club into a surf club, as was already happening to their neighbours in Warrnambool.

The following month, on 24 September 1947, a public meeting in Portland re-formed the club and affiliated with both Royal and the Victorian Surf Life Saving Association. Like Warrnambool, Lakes Entrance still accepted women as members for the next two seasons until conforming fully with Surf Life Saving rules.[3]

Back in Melbourne after the Warrnambool trip, Kennedy embarked on a whirlwind of activities in his role as Victorian State Superintendent (see extract from his report, p. 56). With the first Victorian State title championship scheduled for March 1948 at Torquay, Kennedy was keen to see well trained squads and competitors in all events in order to impress the onlookers as much as club members themselves. During the week, training was conducted at St Kilda for the Torquay members, also for the St Kilda Royal Life Saving squad who were to compete in the Royal competition at the Police Barracks in October, in which Allan Kennedy and Sprint Walker were asked to be judges. Most weekends from September onwards, however, Kennedy and the others were either down at Torquay putting the Torquay squad through its paces or Kennedy was on the road again. Phil Bennett from Torquay was becoming more involved in these instructional activities with Kennedy and Walker. Already Kennedy had an eye on his successor and the one he picked to carry on the style and pace he established was Phil Bennett.

The first annual general meeting of the Surf Life Saving Association — Victorian Centre was held at secretary Jim Wall's factory in Normanby Road on 6 November 1947. Those who attended were the same people who had attended the Centre's foundation meeting earlier in the year, but this meeting provided an opportunity to co-opt other specialists into the associations work, such as an Honorary Solicitor (Mr E.K. O'Donnell) and the first Honorary Medical Officer (Dr Tom King) and to appoint the Board of Examiners to the Committee of Merit Awards and Gear Committee. Once again, Mr Ernie Pleydell spoke on behalf of the Royal Life Saving Society "...and hoped that the co-operation between the two bodies continue as in the past". Also as before, Sir Frank Beaurepaire was nominated as Patron, with continuing debate as to whether this was an office and if so, Sir Frank was unlikely to accept it. Further talks were planned on the subject.

On 21 November 1947, the Lorne Surf Life Saving Club was officially launched, with Jim Wall, Phil Bennett, Allan Kennedy and Charlie Kendall representing the Victorian State Centre at the meeting. Ralph Dean, in his capacity as the State Centre's publicity officer, showed some films at the meeting, which was the beginning of Dean's enthusiasm for taking films of surf life saving activities and showing them as widely as possible. Following the meeting, 20 new Lorne members were instructed in their Bronze work over the next two days.

With the Torquay, Warrnambool and Lorne clubs established, Kennedy aimed at getting Portland set up with trained squads ready to compete in the State Titles, while another likely prospect in Poinr Lonsdale had emerged in late November. In addition - and with any luck - the groundwork put in at Portsea might bear fruit in rhe form of club and club members trained to compete in the titles at Torquay in March 1948.

A meeting to form the Point Lonsdale Surf Life Saving Club was held on 3 November 1947, thanks to the efforts of John (Jack) Meehan, secretary and chief instructor of the Williamstown Life Saving Club who responded to local efforts to establish a club there. As he explained to State Centre Secretary Jim Wall in a letter to Meehan only a few days earlier[3], "Queenscliffe Council wrote to Royal asking for assistance in beach patrols and the Royal Executive passed the letter on to you. Our club (Williamstown) contacted Queenscliffe Council and offered to co-operate. That was in July. Our club wrote to Port Lonsdale Progress Association and arranged a meeting with the youth club, who were enthusiastic". Meehan also mentioned that Sprint Walker (Surf State President) had told him (Meehan) that "repercussions might arise with Royal if care was not taken (by having a Royal club like Williamstown forming a Surf club at Point Lonsdale), but I told Sprint that the Williamstown club treasurer, R. Tyler who was also chairman of the Royal Life Saving Society, did not anticipate any trouble at all". Together with the Lorne club, Point Lonsdale Surf Life Saving Club officially affiliated to State Centre at the mid-December meeting, 1947.

A Sorrento-Portsea club also seemed a possibility, following a highly publicised drowning of two young men on the back beach, one in February and the other in March, but this did not occur until after the first state carnival.

The prospects of a sixth club, Ocean Grove, forming from the RAAF cadets who patrolled the beach in time for the Victorian titles suddenly appeared. At the same time, a letter dated 24 December 1947 from the Barwon Heads Progress Association, stating they were interested in forming a surf life saving club, was forwarded to State Centre from Royal Life Saving Society, to whom it had been sent.[5] However it was not until 1961 that this club became a reality.

This rush of new clubs placed a heavy workload on Allan Kennedy who (somehow) got around to most of them, putting members through their Bronze and then drilling them into competitive R&R teams in time for the first State Championships. The State Centre executive also faced an increased administrative workload, handling requests from clubs for gear and equipment in time for the Victorian titles, organising the program for the day and facing, for the first time, the question of allocating colours to the clubs. In effect, the clubs could choose their own colours, with State Centre intervening in the event of duplication. By mid-February 1948, one month before the State titles, the situation was:

Torquay: Blue and Gold
Lorne: Black and White
Point Lonsdale: Gold and Black
Portland: Yellow and Green
Warrnambool: Brown and White

First Victorian championships, Torquay 1948 ... referee Allan Kennedy's voice of command upsets the Point Lonsdale reel

The Torquay club played an important role in these preparations for the championship by sending demonstration teams to the newly affiliated clubs, for example to Warrnambool and to Point Lonsdale. In addition to R and R demonstrations, the Torquay club also showed their surfboat in action, which they had received from Southport SLC earlier in May that year.

At the same time the State Centre was asked by Head Office in Sydney to take part in the Australian Surf Girl Contest by organising local surf beach contests, then a Miss Victoria Surf Girl contest with the winner going to Sydney to try her luck in the Australian title. This contest, claimed Head Office, was a sure-fire way to raise much needed funds for the clubs and State Centres. The best that could be done was to arrange two judging competitions, one held at the Plaza Theatre in Geelong to which 650 people attended, and one conducted at the Melbourne Town Hall on 22 February 1948 at which over 700 attended. Miss Shirley Herbert, from Torquay, was chosen as Miss Victoria Surf Girl. In spite of the attendances, the cost of staging the competition exceeded the income and the State Centre suffered a loss of £32-2-6, a sum it could ill afford at the time.

Ms Herbert did not win the national title, but the whole event from the beach level to the city level was conducted with such good fun and good will that it was continued for a number of years, eventually turning the early loss into a small financial gain for the Association.

First Victorian Surf Titles

A large crowd filled the dunes at Torquay beach on Sunday 7 March 1948 to witness and enjoy the first Victorian Surf Championships. The weather, however, competed against the organisers. "A colossal surf was running but some exceptional performances were given during the day, particularly the Junior Surf Championship which was won by Peter Johnson of Warrnambool Surf Life Saving Club", State Secretary Jim Wall reported. However the two belt races were postponed and held the following week. "Despite the fact that huge seas spoilt the efficient running of the carnival," wrote Allan Kennedy in his report to State Centre, "the attendance was over 5,000, and certainly has proved that the holding of the Championships has given the surf movement in Victoria a greater incentive for the future".

The Sir Frank Beaurepaire Reel was a major and practical trophy and was won by Torquay Club gaining the highest number of points on the day, with Warrnambool second, Point Lonsdale third and Portland fourth.

First Victorian State Team

Superintendent Allan Kennedy's sharp eye on competitors as referee in the Victorian Championship resulted in him selecting the first Victorian state team to compete later that month at the National Titles in Manly, Sydney, held on 27 March 1948. This team comprised Philip Bennett, G. Emerson, R.(China) Gilbert, Sprint Walker, Bill Makin from Torquay; the whole Point Lonsdale R & R team of D.Fortune, S.Wookey, B.O'Brien, J.Urquhart, John Meehan, L.Higham, D.Negus and J. Jenkins; Peter Johnson from Warrnambool, L.Gunn from Point Lonsdale, with Graham Beck of Torquay as team manager and State Superintendent Allan Kennedy as team coach. The outcome of this first Victorian attack at the National Surf Titles did not match their enthusiastic expectations. G. Emerson of Torquay, however, came third in the Junior Belt, "distinguishing himself and showing natural ability in swimming" as Allan Kennedy reported later, and the Victorian (Point Lonsdale) R&R team reached the finals but were disqualified and put in 6th place. "It was cruel, really," recalls China Gilbert, "and talk about a baptism of fire!" Team Manager expressed it in a more understated way in his report by remarking "...team members realise we are not quite up to the standard of New South Wales and Queensland, but now they have seen what the chaps from these states can do, I feel sure they will improve themselves with experience".[6]

The Sorrento-Portsea Surf Life Saving Club formed within two weeks of the State Carnival, at a public meeting on 16 March 1948, bringing the number of clubs in the state association to six in little more than 12 months since the State Centre was founded. Arthur Burge, a 1948 Olympic Games competitor in water polo, became secretary and club captain, and curiously proposed to State Centre two sets of colours for the club: red and white for Portsea and green and gold for Sorrento. Since Portland's colours were yellow and green, the Portsea-Sorrento club were cut back to one set of colours, red and white.

In June 1948, Superintendent Allan Kennedy was stationed in Perth for five weeks, then returned to Queensland where he wrote up his Superintendent's report on the Victorian scene to date. With characteristic foresight, Kennedy mapped out the approach the State Centre should take in both nurturing the clubs it had and where its efforts should be made in forming new clubs. He also nominated Phil Bennett of Torquay, "who has undoubted ability", to take over the role of Victorian Superintendent. The following extracts of Kennedy's comments on each club and his early judgements of people who indeed rose to lead the association make fascinating reading:

"Portland to be encouraged to keep in close contact with Warrnambool ..."

"Port Fairy — that a club be formed here as soon as possible, as there is undoubtedly a fine beach at East Beach."

"Warrnambool quite a sound club, to be encouraged to qualify more instructors and examiners under the guidance of Doug Kemp, responsible for such in Warrnambool, Port Fairy and Portland, and that later a Branch be formed when Port Fairy is functioning."

"Lorne needs continual contact and a number of displays till the club house is built. This club could well do with a surfboat, and temporarily with a double ski ... and could develop into a fine club and a useful asset to the community."

"Torquay is of such strength that it could be quite easily formed into two clubs, the second being on the beach around the rocks to the right. Nevertheless there are too many board paddlers about the club, who despite being fit and active, avoid being active members of the club, i.e., becoming qualified bronze holders, and only use the club to house their boards."

"Point Lonsdale: members should be required to spend more time on the beach."

"Sorrento-Portsea. The future of this club will depend largely on the guidance of Arthur Burge, Captain and Instructor. There are two beaches, which are about three miles apart, and could be patrolled properly by two clubs, instead of having one as present. Sorrento ... is not very safe for surfing because of rocks, under-currents, channels and kelp... but it is obvious people will swim there. Portsea ... is a dangerous beach with rough surf, and at present the local kiosk owner puts up flags; it is imperative that this beach should have contact with a telephone as at present the closest telephone is at least half a mile away."

"The absence of telephones in club houses is very noticeable in Victorian Surf Life Saving Clubs ... which are on fairly isolated beaches."

"Despite the fact that surf life saving in Victoria is more or less in its infancy, and that the men who have developed this work have done an excellent job, it is obvious to me that one vital essential has been to a great extent neglected, and that is 'Belt Swimming' in the surf."

"Two good beaches: Ocean Grove (22 miles from Geelong) and Anglesea (23 miles) are quite popular and are prospective surf club centres.

Lorne Beach 1947.

Ocean Grove seems a very quiet locality and would take a lot of enthusiasm to get a club going. Anglesea is a good beach which is frequented by a number of surfboard and ski men, together with the fact that there has been a number of drownings on this beach nearly every season, should be an incentive for the formation of a club here."

Kennedy thought highly of newcomer Jack Williams at Portland, recommending that he qualify as an instructor as soon as possible. Within two years, Williams succeeded Jim Wall as State Secretary of the Association when Wall decided to concentrate his energies on his home club, Torquay.

This first season for the new State Centre, 1947/48, was a remarkable success story all round and an outstanding credit to the men and women who pioneered the surf movement in Victoria. "It is particularly pleasing to the Executive of the Centre that the membership of the affiliated six clubs total 304," Secretary Jim Wall reported to Head Centre in August, 1948. "and that 51 rescues and services were given to surf bathers during the year. Awards gained were 54 Bronze Medallions and five Instructor's Certificates. This is considered to be an excellent effort after only two seasons of organising," he added, referring to the Torquay club's 1946/47 season as the first of the two seasons.

The early doubts as to whether or not a surf life saving movement could get a toehold in Victoria had been blown out of the water in a remarkably short period. The 'excellent effort' referred to by Jim Wall in jumping from one club to six clubs in 12 months was like a model of the saying, 'success breeds success'. From this point it was all go.

Surf Lifesaving Demonstration Carnival, Lorne in 1941

"Under the auspices of the Surf Life Saving Association, a camp for life savers from Melbourne RLSS clubs has been arranged at Lorne during the Easter holidays. This will provide visitors and locals with the opportunity of seeing interstate life savers at work and in action. The camp will be under the direction of J. J. Henke, the Victorian representative of the association.

An association team of nine surf men from New South Wales beaches has been selected and will arrive at Lorne on Good Friday. Mr Russ Crook is the Manager. Mr Crook is the association standard bearer at all carnivals held in Sydney. The other members: J. Ferguson, A. Fidler, F. Guthrie, W. Kelly, K. Kennington, R. Quill and H. Street are all well known performers in the Sydney surf.

On Easter Saturday a demonstration carnival will be held at 2.45 p.m. Following the March Past and demonstration of the surf reel drill, there will be an open surf race, in which some of Victoria's champions, such as I. Donaldson, W. McIntoch, W. Atkinson and H. Cullen, will match their ability against the visitors. The belt race will be of considerable interest, as the New South Wales team have some outstanding belt men. N. McIntosh of Half Moon Bay, who holds the Victorian title, will also be a starter. In the chariot race the Hampton team should more than hold their own as they have specialised in this event on Victorian beaches. Other events are a surf teams relay race and beach sprint.

Victorian RLSS clubs from Sandringham, Hampton, Chelsea and Half Moon Bay are making the trip. During the camp an instructional course for the SLSA Surf Bronze will be conducted by the New South Wales team. Several squads of Victorian members will submit themselves for examination."

Manly Life Saving Club visit to Torquay 1950/51

A team from the Manly Life Saving Club visited Torquay during late December in the 1950/51 season. Surf Life Saving was in its fourth year and so a number of clubs were up and running.

A Manly lifesaver who was in the team wrote in his letter to SLSV the following:

"Ainslie 'Sprint' Walker, the then Captain of Torquay SLSC, and president of the fledgling Victorian State Centre, had strong ties with the Manly club and suggested we should send an instructional/competitor team to visit them in Victoria.

The team chosen comprised Alex 'Blue' Parlett, Ken Dean, Rany Rush, Ron Brooker, Roger Clissold, John Forrest and Ken Jones (Captain) with Pop and Ma Windschuttle commanding the truck to convey us.

The trip down was pretty torrid but we arrived safely at Torquay where we were billeted at 'Stars Haven', a sort of half permanent, half tent-like dwelling amongst similar abodes located over the hill behind the beach and near the creek. To greet us were a number of guys amongst who were Clinton 'Shacks' Shields, (Shiells) 'Mumbles' Walker, Owen Yateman, George Packham, Vic Tantau, Aub Cherry, 'China' Gilbert, Mick O'Donnell and numerous other Torquay members. We were made very welcome and spent the next few weeks enjoying the company and the competition.

Carnivals were held at Torquay, Anglesea, Lorne, Portsea, Ocean Grove (and possibly Barwon Heads) with March Pasts (photo at Torquay), R&R and surf races at these venues.

In those days most of the Torquay members owned motor bikes and we had some pretty 'hairy' rides on pillion seats driving down to places like Airey's Inlet which was our favourite watering hole.

Our carnivals claimed a lot of interest from the locals and I'm sure had the effect of creating more interest in the movement in those areas.

Amongst other activities, we did some board riding and water skiing at Torquay and enjoyed some reasonable waves during our stay. Portsea turned on a "howler" surf for us and provided good entertainment.

New Year's Eve at Torquay left nothing to the imagination along with many other pleasant social activities.

Overall we all consdiered the trip a great success from the movement's point of view and certainly in bonding the two clubs, Manly and Torquay, together.

This trip was the first official Club visit interstate and many more followed.

We had a safe return journey and had many happy memories of our visit."

15/7/96: Ken Jones
Manly Team Captain

There is no doubt that the friendships between both Torquay and the Manly Club continue because of these early trips and the fact that 'Sprint' Walker was a member of Manly Life Saving Club prior to the Second World War and had great influence in persuading the Manly club to send teams down to Victoria on a number of occasions.

Following the trip by the Cronulla team in 1939 to Lorne, visits to Victoria continued for some years. Victoria gained tremendous experience from other trips by interstate clubs, particularly in R&R, striking up many great friendships over the years.

This spirit of camaraderie and giving, much to the astonishment of many within the community, still exists and is very much alive today!

Our Travels to the Nationals – Scarborough, Perth, W.A. 1951

History was in the making, and the air buzzed with excited discussion about the trip and the prospects of competition and success when 380 surf lifesavers and supporters entrained at Spencer Street Station for the first ever National Championships to be held in Western Australia at Scarborough Beach in 1951. The strength of the WA competition as a whole, was virtually unknown. To find out, it was now a matter of "Go West Young Man, Go West".

Even with the extra carriages put on the train to carry the lifesavers' contingent, the impressive pulling power of the mighty steam engine locomotive was evident early on the run across to Adelaide, and its cheerful whistle sounding at level crossings was in tune with the mood of the travellers.

Arriving in Adelaide, the train was met by other lifesavers from the east coast, many of whom had overlanded by various means to join the train. Not the least of these were members of the South Narrabeen club, sister club to Warrnambool, who rode AJS, Velocette and BSA motor cycles across country from Sydney, some riding pillion. One member of their group had gone for a couple of bottles of lemonade, returning to the platform to see the back end of the train as it disappeared en route to Port Pirie.

Enlisting the aid of a taxi driver, he pursued the train to Port Pirie to be informed there, that it had just pulled out. With little or no money, he persuaded the taxi driver to book the fare to the South Narrabeen Surf Life Saving Club, also the air fare from Port Pirie to Kalgoorlie, where his astonished mates saw him still in shorts and tee shirt waiting for them on the platform with the two bottles of lemonade still in his hands.

By this time, the 'Surfers Song' sung to the tune of 'Lilli Marlene' had been distributed along the train for rehearsing and memorising.

Impressed by the isolation and loneliness of the Nullabor Plains, team members experienced during the stops the strange feeling of loneliness here, by turning their backs to the train and looking away across the vast moonlike terrain stretching endlessly to the west and north. A stop for replenishing water on the steam locomotive was made at the railway fettlers town of Cook where the dunnys were supported by a sleeper at 45 degrees on either side to prevent the strong desert winds from laying them flat, perhaps with a luckless tenant inside.

Signatures on the poster of the Victorian Team members interstate competition at Scarborough in 1951.

After a visit to the local school room where Harry Pittard explained the 'nuts and bolts' of lifesaving to the pupils, the team was shown various marine fossils discovered in the surrounding area, residual from when Australia was bisected by ocean. This was a learning curve for locals and lifesavers alike.

Next, an impromptu Cook Gift series of foot races were organised for the pupils by the visitors, and with a little financial incentive, the speed shown in the heats was impressive. A mighty cheer went up after the final was decided. Warm friendly people live in Cook.

Strolling around Kalgoorlie next day the size and extent of this desert city and its operations was impressive. Enormous development had taken place since Paddy Hannan, an immigrant gold miner newly arrived from the Ballarat/Bendigo goldfields in 1893, had his lucky find of a rich gold bearing reef, triggering the whole Kalgoorlie gold story.

On arrival in Perth the train was met by the official party from the W.A. State Centre who extended a warm welcome.

Their hospitality was such that it was not possible to attend many of the social functions as training activities had to resume after days of relative inactivity aboard the train.

A memorable afternoon tour up to the Stirling Ranges and Mundaring Reservoir was enjoyed by many members of the team, travelling in cars courtesy of the welcoming committee.

Accommodation was adequate at the Claremont Showgrounds and a comfortable bed and mattress was supplied to all. It was no mean organising task to supply sleeping and accommodation facilities for 380 visitors.

Two main differences were noticed at the site of the National Titles to anyone not familiar with them. The first was the nature of the wave as it rolled in from the Indian Ocean in that it was basically a shore break only, differing from the long steep offshore sets usual in Victoria, NSW and Queensland. This necessitated an immediate rethink of tactics by the visitors.

The other was that single surf skis were paddled in a standing position evolving perhaps from inshore break of the surf at all the main city beaches. It caused much comment from the visitors who retained the seated position on their craft.

South Curl Curl boat crew made the long trip towing an extremely light, purpose built surfboat the Flora Roberts to maximise their chances in the milder Scarborough beach conditions. In the senior 'A' surfboat Championship final they finished second to Cronulla with Swansea Belmont in third place.

A credible third place in the Senior Double Ski Championship was gained by Steve King and Doug Sheppard of the then relatively small Warrnambool Club at their first try for a National Title.

Ceylon (now Sri Lanka) was represented by a team of highly enthusiastic lifesavers who vigorously contested most events on the program, gaining the respect of all for their efforts. Socialising with them at the Scarborough club house at day's end was a pleasant experience. Following this trip to Australia in 1951, over a period of time, all members of that Ceylon team have become Australian citizens, and all are now resident.

On the return trip to Melbourne, two members of the Victorian team left the card game in their carriage to seek some sleep on the last untenanted carriage on the train. Sleeping on, they failed to notice that the carriage had been shunted off onto a siding at Bordertown, where the railway gauge changes to Victoria.

A loud metallic clanging of the carriage's buffers awoke them and frantically they climbed out and sprinted across several tracks in the marshalling yard to the Victorian train in time to thankfully resume their slumbers.

All in all it was an unforgettable experience for all Eastern States competitors and for the Western Australian branch of the Surf Life Saving Association also whose unstinting hospitality will never be forgotten or equalled.

'Those Warrnambool men'

Warrnambool Surf Life Saving Club was instrumental in helping Portland, Port Fairy and Port Campbell to form as surf life saving clubs from the lae 1940s. The Warrnambool club is centrally located in what is now called the 'Western District', although referred to in those early days as the 'Far West'.

The control of standards, examinations and requalifications was virtually left to Warrnambool's Ron Blackney, Harold Stevenson, Wes McClear, Stan Stevens and Peter O'Rorke.

Their lead considerably eased the pressure on those at State Centre. Nevertheless there were many, many trips down to the Western District in support.

Friendships became strong, the mateship never waned and as those early men passed on there was a strong sense of loss. The strength of the Warrnambool Club continues to this day with the commitment to vigilance and service being passed on to younger members, and now those Warrnambool men are joined by the Warrnambool women.

This close camaraderie was related directly to the passion they had and their belief in Surf Life Saving Victoria becoming a recognised strength.

The Warrnambool women, so strong during the club's involvement in Royal Life Saving days, have again made their mark in support of those Warrnambool men.

Theirs has been a most worthwhile input.

Doug Kemp

Doug Kemp

One of the Warrnambool club members who contributed so much, particularly during those formative years, was Douglas Gerald Kemp. Like many other founding members from 1947, his contribution was considerable. Born in Ballarat in 1909, his sudden death on 20 April 1960 prompted this article in the Warrnambool Times:.

"In 1934 Mr Kemp came to Warrnambool and before the war he worked as a transport driver. He joined the Warrnambool Life Saving Club in 1935. He had been club captain, chief instructor, vice-president, and some years ago (1952) he was made a life member in recognition of his services.

At the outbreak of war (1939) he was one of the first citizens of Warrnambool to volunteer for active service, and he was on the first train of service-men to leave Warrnambool. He served throughout the war in Greece, Crete, Syria, the Middle East and the Pacific Islands.

At the evacuation of Crete, Doug Kemp and Alf Whitely, a former teacher at Warrnambool High School, together (swimming from different directions) saved an Australian soldier from drowning. In the Army, Mr Kemp rose from private to captain, and was acting major when he was discharged. He was mentioned in dispatches for bravery in the Mediterranean area. Mr Kemp obtained his Surf Bronze on 20 December 1945 (No: 22461).

When the Surf Life Saving Club was re-formed after the war (in 1947) Mr Kemp trained the first class of bronze medallion holders. He was subsequently appointed a member of the Board of Examiners of the Victorian State Centre, and he was District Superintendent of seven surf lifesaving clubs on the western coastline of Victoria. In 1948 he was Deputy Superintendent for Victoria.

Two surf boats of the Warrnambool Club were named in his honour.

Because of his prowess as a diver (his hobby was spear fishing and underwater exploration) Mr Kemp had several times been called on by the police to assist in immersion accidents. Some years ago, when a car with four youths aboard plunged into the Merri creek from the bridge at Dennington, Mr Kemp dived and located the car in deep water.

In 1951, Mr Kemp received, under seal of the City Council, a letter of commendation for his services to the community." (21 April 1960.)

As State Deputy Superintendent, Doug made an enormous contribution, particularly in setting up all those clubs on the Western side of Melbourne. Doug, as part of the great strength offered to the fledgling Victorian State Centre by the Warrnambool Club, is fondly remembered.

Doug was also mentioned in the book Not as a Duty Only (An Infantryman's War) by Henry (Jo) Gullet. This outlines his great strengths, ability and love of life, for example: "Doug Kemp was a big, amused, good-looking man who had done almost everything, from pearl-diving in the Torres Straits to teaching young ladies at Frensham School to swim. Kemp was a thoughtful man who considered things before he acted. He feared neither physical violence nor a battle of wits; his authority over his company was absolute. I have known few men more suited by nature to lead fighting soldiers."

Ronald Blackney 'Basha'

Ronald Blackney joined the Warrnambool Surf Life Saving Club in 1947 following two years with the Warrnambool Rowing Club. He gained his Surf Bronze Medallion (No: 26752) on 23 January 1947, his Instructors Certificate on 20 January 1951 and his Examiners Certificate (V134) in 1954.

His interests were in boats, R&R and March Past. In 1950-51 Ron was a member of the successful Victorian Titles Surf Boat Crew which took out the club's second title in this event in as many years. On New Years Day, 1952, while on a club trip to Sydney, a scratch crew consisting of Geoff Stott, Stan Stevens, Steve King, Ron Blackney and Jack Ford, using a borrowed boat to compete in the South Curl Curl Carnival. It is believed that this was the first Victorian boat crew to compete at a Sydney Carnival.

Ronald Blackney

In 1956-57 Ron was a member of the crew that won the State Titles in Senior Boat. He continues today to be actively involved in the boat area at Club Carnivals, State Titles and National Championships.

Ron also participated in R&R with his fellow members but these teams had little success. This did not stop him from fostering swimming within the club as he took an active part in the development of the Amateur Swimming Club in Warrnambool. He was also a foundation member of the Surf Club's Annual 'Mile' Swim which first began in 1960 and he still holds the position of handicapper and referee for this event.

As a member of the March Past Team from the late fifties to the early sixties, Ron was party to a number of successes at club and state level. However the real success came when the March Past Team, under Stan Stevens, was reformed in 1981 with a number of older club members. Ron led the March Past team as Standard Bearer to six State Titles before retiring from active competition.

Ron has held a number of administrative positions with the club over the years of his involvement. In 1950 to 1956 he was Club Captain. For the next two years he held the position of Vice President and then took on the Presidency from 1959 until 1970.

Along with Peter Johnson, Ron Blackney supervised the planning and construction of the Warrnambool Surf Life Saving Club premises which was begun in 1948 and completed in 1955. In recognition of his effort and his active participation as a life saver and competitor Ron was awarded Warrnambool Life Membership in 1954. He continued to serve on the building committee until 1970 and since that time has been an advisor to subsequent committees.

Ron Blackney also led a group from the Warrnambool Club to assist the emerging Port Campbell Surf Life Saving Club. The group spent many hours helping the new club establish itself at Port Campbell in the early sixties.

In 1963 the Warrnambool Club hosted the Australian Surf Life Saving Championships. Ron as President, along with Harold Stephenson, the Organising Secretary, Harold Johnson, Wes McLear and Bruce Owen formed the organising committee of one of the most successful Australian Titles conducted to that time.

In recognition for his services to Life Saving in Victoria Ron was awarded a Life Membership of the Victorian State Centre in 1977. He frequently attends meetings of the Examiners and continues to officiate at most interclub carnivals and State Championships each Year.

Apart from his involvement in Surf Life Saving Ron has been actively involved in basketball where he played, coached and held a number of administrative positions over the years. He was also a foundation member of the Basketball Referees Association in Warrnambool. For his services to basketball he was awarded a Life Membership to the Association in 1977 and to the Referees Association in 1978.

Ronald Blackney has, over the past fifty years, given great service to the Warrnambool Life Saving Club, to Surf Life Saving in general and to his community. He has achieved recognition from his peers in the form of a Citizenship Award as well as a number of sporting awards for service and achievement.

Harold Ivor Stephenson 'Stevo'

Harold Stephenson was born in the Western District town of Colac in 1922. Later, with his family he moved to Warrnambool where he attended school. He first joined the Warrnambool Life Saving Club in August 1936 and was active for those years prior to World War II. Harold saw active service before being invalided home during 1943.

Upon his return to Warrnambool he took over the secretarial role of the club from Miss Joan Batson and continued in the position until 1970. He actively supported the establishment of the Victorian State Centre in 1947 and assisted the Warrnambool Club through those early days of Surf Life Saving in Victoria.

Harold gained his Surf Bronze Medallion (No: 26760) on 23 January 1949 and gained his Instructors Certificate on 20 January 1951.

He was not only an exemplary lifesaver, both actively and administratively, but he was also a distinguished citizen, having served as a City Councillor from 1958 until 1976 with six terms as Mayor of the City of Warrnambool.

From the late 1940s through to the early 1970s there would hardly be a Victorian Life Saver who did not know Harold 'Stevo' Stephenson. His reputation was also well known in administrative circles in the other states as well as at national level. He was recognised as one of the best administrators in Australia and proved this on many occasions.

Within Victoria during those years, particularly in the latter half, you would find 'Stevo' at 'the table' in the centre of the competition area meticulously keeping the records of the carnival results. He was just as meticulous with the records of his own club and his successful bakery business.

Harold, along with his wife Pat and two daughters, Barbara and Jane, attended most Carnivals in Victoria and seldom missed an Australian titles. The famous walking stick was often the first indication that Harold was on the beach. This walking stick had many useful purposes and became one of his trade marks.

Harold was a key figure in the post war development of the Warrnambool Surf Life Saving Club. His involvement saw the Warrnambool Club develop into one of the major clubs along the western coast of Victoria. For his unselfish efforts and his active participation in lifesaving the Warrnambool Club granted him Life Membership in season 1951-52.

'Stevo' continued to work strongly within the movement and took his place on the Board of Examiners (V55) in 1954. This State role did not reduce his active involvement in local lifesaving, where he continued in the position of Secretary / Treasurer — a position in which he gave 27 years of extremely valuable service.

Harold Stephenson

Harold's physical condition precluded him from much of the manual work during the construction of the Clubhouse in the 1950s but he was present at most working bees and was always happy to do what he could. He was, however a power of strength in the administration side of the project.

In the years leading up to the National Titles in 1963 Harold Stephenson, along with Ron Blackney, Bruce Owen Harold Johnson and Wes McLear, spent many long hours, as Organising Secretary, preparing the submission. Following the announcement of the venue of the Titles at Warrnambool, he helped prepare for one of the most successful and spectacular National Championships ever to be held up to that time.

A report in the Warrnambool Standard on Monday, March 11, 1963 had the following statement by the then President of Surf Life Saving Association of Australia, Judge (later Sir) Adrian Curlewis, " The 1,175 competitors in this carnival will now go back to all over Australia and speak of Warrnambool in the highest terms ....As President of the Association and having taken part in and watched surf carnivals for over 43 years, I would say this is one of the best organised and best conducted in the history of the Association."

Harold was elected a Life Member of the Victorian State Centre in 1983 in recognition for the work that he had done for Life Saving not only within Victoria but within Australia.

Harold must be given credit for purchasing one of the cheapest surf boats ever acquired. Warrnambool Club, following Harold's visit to Sydney in the early 1950s, decided to purchase its second, second-hand Aeroplane Jellies surf boat for the equivalent of $340. This boat was named Doug Kemp II and was used successfully for many years by the club.

Stan Stevens

Following the decision to purchase yet another surf boat of a newer design in the mid sixties, Harold purchased the Doug Kemp 11 from the Club for one shilling (10 cents). He stored the boat for many years and, following his death in 1985, Harold's family donated what is probably the last Aeroplane Jellies to Flagstaff Hill Maritime Museum in Warrnambool. Work is underway to restore this surf boat.

'Stevo' and Pat were always ready to offer hospitality to members of the life saving fraternity. Over the years they made many close and personal friends who shared their enthusiasm for surf life saving.

Harold 'Stevo' Stephenson was one of the key people behind the development of the Warrnambool Surf Life Saving Club. He was a true gentleman and friend to all and his name will always be synonymous, not only with the Surf Club, but also with Surf Life Saving and the city of Warrnambool.

Stanley Gordon Stevens

Stan Stevens was born in Warrnambool where he has spent all his life. After leaving school Stan worked for a local sports store and later worked at the Warrnambool Woollen Mill. From here he graduated to the cinema industry and managed the Drive In and later the Capitol Theatre. In season 1942-43 young Stan Stevens joined the Warrnambool Life Saving Club. Being interested in personal fitness from an early age it was only logical that Stan would seek out some form of activity that would allow him to pursue this personal goal. Little did he know at that time what an involved commitment he was making to life saving in Western Victoria.

The Warrnambool Club at that time consisted mainly of older men, young women and teenage boys as the War was at its peak. The young men were in the services and the swimming public of Australia was being protected by the young ladies who were 'at home' and the even younger 'men' who had not yet reached the age of enlistment.

There were no organised patrols due to the shortage of members. Those who were available met at the beach mainly to play beach cricket or to learn the various methods of rescue and release as set down by the Royal Life Saving Society. They were ready to perform any rescue should they be called upon. Surf Life Saving had been delayed in coming to Victoria due to the War and its presence was not to be experienced until 1947. Up to then the Club was affiliated with the Royal Life Saving Society.

Stan's thoughts on the time: "The club's equipment consisted of one reel and a first aid kit. This reel and those hours of training, however, were put to good use as a number of minor rescues were performed along with a major effort on 27 January 1943, when two young lads got themselves into difficulties. Fortunately for these two boys, the life savers were at the beach that day and the rescue was performed by the then Club President (Don Roberts) and some of the ladies. I was at the beach that day and recall the incident."

Stan gained his Surf Bronze Medallion on 24 January 1948 (No: 25097), at the age of 19. He went on to gain his Instructor's Certificate just twelve months later, the certificate being number 3505. By the end of 1949 Stan had been awarded his Examiner's Certificate and over the next 45 years he utilised each of these awards in a most positive manner for both Surf Life Saving and for Warrnambool.

Every credit must be given to Stan Stevens for introducing surf boats into the Warrnambool Club. His attention was drawn to an old boat sitting on the beach at Little Manly, NSW, following a surf carnival at Bondi in 1949. He goes on to say: "I was able to 'negotiate' a purchase price of £10 ($20) with the South Narrabeen Club, the owners of the boat. This took some doing and we all had a great time doing it. All I had to do then was to convince Warrnambool that this was the way to go. But, by April of 1949 the decision had been made and the surf boat was on its way."

Alongside the famous Doug Kemp, Stan also played an active part in the training of his fellow life savers for patrols and competition. He was involved himself in a range of activities and held State Titles in the Beach Relay, Senior Surf Boat and March Past. This latter event was to again involve Stan, and the Club, in an historic achievement when Warrnambool won 10 consecutive State Titles in March Past [1983-93]. Stan Stevens was the coach of every team. At one stage he was coaching two March Past teams — one all ladies and the other all men. Both of these teams consistently finished first and second at most carnivals.

During the early 1950s the club was extremely active in constructing the 'new' clubrooms. Stan was involved in this development alongside the other members of the club at the time but Stan was also one of the driving forces behind maintaining Warrnambool's high standard of life saving skills. In his active years as a lifesaver, he held the position of Club Captain 1948-49 and 1963-64, Chief Instructor 1953-54 and 1956-57 and District Supervisor. He also coached Rescue & Resuscitation Teams.

In recognition of Stan's contribution to the Warrnambool Surf Life Saving Club he was installed as a Life Member in 1955 and the Victorian State Centre recognised his contribution to Life Saving by granting him a Life Membership of the Association in 1973.

Being always involved, Stan held the positions of President from 1958-59 and Assistant Secretary for some years with Harold Stephenson. He also was the Captain of Life Savers Brown Premiership Basketball Team. To add to his involvement in Surf Club activities, Stan has held the position of President of the Mile Swim Committee since 1959, the year of its inception.

Stan goes on to say: "Some of my fondest memories of the early days were the beach cricket games in the early 1940s. One of the greatest thrills at that time was the annual 'end of season' trip which was undertaken by the Club. The night before the big day I could hardly sleep. Everyone had been told to be early to the bus as they would wait for no one. Prior to turning in on the eve of the trip I would check and re-check that I had my gear and that my lunch had been cut and was ready for the morning.

Bright and early next morning I was up and ready to go to the departure point. When all of those who were participating had boarded the bus, away we went, waiting for no late comers. We all knew the destination well in advance but the thought and the expectation of what the day may bring was the thrill to which we all looked forward. And the destination — the mouth of the Hopkins River by bus!

As the years rolled on, trips were to become part and parcel of the club's itinerary. As is the case today, every carnival, bar the one in Warrnambool, was a major excursion for the club. The members in those early days were not so fortunate as to own a car so the means of transport was always a concern. Buses were sometimes used or car pools were organised but the greatest fun was to be had on the back of Harry Johnson's semi-trailers. The surf boat, the few boards and the reel along with many of the members were loaded on the trailer and away we went. Fortunately, the law at that time turned a blind eye to our means of travel. But there is no way of really describing the fun that we had and I'm sure that there are many of the older members who still recall those wonderful fun packed days when we travelled to a carnival."

Prior to the present club being built there was an old pumping station located about half way along the current entrance drive to the club-rooms. At that time this location was partially hidden by the sand dunes and the scrub but it did serve as a storage area for the first surf board belonging to the club. This first board was a 14 foot Mulchay Board and is still in Stan's possession to this day. Regarding the craft Stan recalls: "When I reminisce about those early days I often recall our journey to Bridgewater Bay where the club's ski had to be lowered by rope down the face of the sand dunes so as to catch the waves that rolled to shore at the eastern end of the bay."

The pump house had been used in the early days to pump sea water to the old city baths. Because the old clubhouse was not the securest building in the beach area, it was also prone to flooding at high tide and in the winter it was decided to house the 'new' board in this building. It was also about this time that the club purchased its first 'double ski', a craft about the size of a kitchen table.

The writer can recall watching Stan in the early fifties riding his surf board into shore while catching a very even wave. As he rode into the beach he performed a headstand on his board and continued on his pathway to the beach. He made it look so easy.

Stan continues: "Winter time also saw the high tides that allowed water to wash over Peterborough Road into the lake or mud flats as they were in those days. One of the exciting moments experienced by us at that time was being caught on the swings or on the Eastern Wall when the high tides trapped us. Also walking along the pier with the waves crashing over the top was an experience.

Club social activities were considered important. The dances which were held in the clubhouse (the old tea rooms on the beach) were great fun. The members were expected to prepare for the evening and one major task was carrying the piano across from the main kiosk, operated by Jens Flaherty, to the clubhouse. Of course the return trip had to be made following the dance. These dances were quite popular at the time and much fun was had by all."

Another of the social functions which began in the 1950s and was still occurring in the 1960s was the BBQ in the tea-tree at Thunder Point. Secreted away from the eyes of the public were a number of areas which were accessible by foot and car. These areas were ideal for various clubs, including the lifesavers, to hold their 'barrel' and BBQs in the summer evenings and sometimes in the autumn or spring. Even winter invited the thirsty participants to the arms of the tea-tree. Many songs were sung and stories told and as the evening drew on so did the stories and tales that were told. One must recall that the licencing laws stated that hotels had to close at 6 pm, the time of day when things were starting to happen."

Graeme 'Horror' Hazeldine

Graeme John Hazeldine was born on 8 September 1938 in Stawell, Victoria. The family later moved to Sale and then to Warrnambool where Graeme attended Secondary School.

Graeme first joined the Warrnambool Surf Club in the early fifties during the period that the Club House was being constructed by members. He was seen as a hyperactive young fellow who was always involved with anything that was happening. It was about this period that he was christened with the nickname 'HORROR'.

As a cadet in the fifties Graeme was quickly recognised as a person with great competitive potential. Unfortunately, not being fully qualified at that time, he was unable to compete at surf carnivals. So keen was he to 'have a go', and against the rules of competition, the then Club President, Ron Blackney, 'condoned' his taking part in a board race at an interclub carnival. Horror was given strict instructions that on no account was he to finish in the first three places. When Ron saw Graeme holding third position during the event and eventually finishing in that position he was a little concerned to say the least. As the judges approached Graeme to ascertain his name, Ron swooped down, stating that this competitor was Gil Harris (another prominent club member at the time) and quickly removed Horror from the area.

Things didn't appear to move quickly enough at the surf club for Graeme and, after only a short time, he left to follow other interests. He returned in 1961 and gained his Bronze Medallion (No: V1017) on 26 November in that year.

Club members at that time believed that the best competitive years had passed Graeme by. However, after rejoining, he rediscovered his ability in the board and ski area. In season 1963-64 he beat fellow club member George Day who was considered to be one of the top Victorian competitors at that time. This was to be the start of a new era competitively for 'Horror' as he went on to become well known throughout the movement.

Graeme Hazeldine

Over the following years he became Club Champion on seven separate occasions and was selected as Clubman of the Year in 1977. Graeme's dedication, involvement and support of the club was recognised with Life Membership in 1974.

Graeme's competitive ability can be demonstrated by the fact that he held 22 State Titles which included success in Long Board, Malibu Board and Ski as well as March Past titles on 12 occasions. Interestingly, Graeme was State Title holder in Iron Man in 1968. Following this success he received a letter of congratulations from the City Council. In the February prior to Graeme's passing, he was actively trying to reform the March Past Team for 1995 but the old brigade did not have the same energy or enthusiasm that he displayed.

On 16 November, 1975 'Horror' gained his qualification to drive the IRB — the 'Rubber Duck'. On many occasions he would be at the beach with his able helper, daughter Jane, to make sure all was in readiness for what ever might eventuate. He was always first to offer his services particularly if nippers were involved.

The combination of 'Horror' Hazeldine and Tony Ryan as 'Judges in Boat' at many Surf Carnivals and special events will always be recalled particularly by the Warrnambool members. Many a story could be told of these two. 'Horror' also became one of Bob Anthony's 'Mongrels' but it is uncertain as to whether this was a position to which he was appointed or one he adopted.

One cannot talk about Graeme Hazeldine without mentioning the Warrnambool's Club's Mile Swim. With the exception of three occasions out of the first thirty six swims, Graeme not only competed but prepared all the buoys and ropes, set the course and assisted with the running of the event. He saw personal success once only, in 1982.

'Horror's' membership of the Board of Examiners was somewhat of a mystery. He attended and officiated at most Carnivals, was active in competition for most of his life and was always first to find out the results of the March Past even to the extent of looking over the shoulder of the official compiling the results and instructing him on what to do next.

Those who came in contact with Graeme quickly recognised his individuality, his uniqueness. He certainly gave the impression that he was prepared to tackle any situation which confronted him. Some say he was a larrikin, others suggest a con man but to life saving and Warrnambool he was just 'Horror'. Take him or leave him!

Peter O'Rorke, OAM.

Peter John O'Rorke OAM

P J O'Rorke joined the Warrnambool Club in 1959. He was born in Lake Bolac and attended Secondary school at St. Joseph's in Geelong where he developed a reputation as a pool swimmer with much ability.

Warrnambool Club's swimming record was limited to but a few members until Peter O'Rorke arrived on the scene in the late 1950s. At the first State Titles, under the auspice of the new Victorian Branch of SLSA of A, held at Torquay in 1948, Warrnambool's Peter Johnson won the Junior Surf Race Championship. In 1950-51 season a Junior R&R team from Warrnambool took the State Title.

When P.J.O'Rorke 'Rorky' arrived at the Warrnambool Club it was thought that this was a great opportunity. Within two years (1961) he became the first swimmer from a country club to be selected in a State Team to compete at the national Titles. Prior to this most Victorian swimmers resided in Melbourne or Geelong. He went on to represent Victoria in 1962 and 1963.

Peter O'Rorke specialised in surf races and belt races at inter-club and interstate Carnivals and was always prepared to assist younger members of the club in this field. He encouraged the reformation of R&R and was considered the key member. Rorky became an instructor and a member of the Board of Examiners as well as carrying out his prime responsibility as a member of the beach Patrol at Warrnambool. Peter held a number of Committee positions, including that of Secretary, over a number of years.

The Warrnambool Club recognised the contribution that Peter gave to the club and elected him Life Member in 1968. He was also made a Life Member of Victorian State Centre in 1979. Peter still officiates at club carnivals and has officiated at the national titles for the past years.

Peter holds a unique record with the Warrnambool club in that he has competed in every Mile Swim since its inception in 1960.

Interestingly, Peter married Margaret Johnson, the daughter of Life Member Harry Johnson who had given great support in the early years.

Wes McLear

Wes joined the Warrnambool Surf Life Saving Club at the early age of 13 and qualified for his Bronze Medallion on 24 January 1948 at the age of 19, (No: 25089).

The same season saw him competing for the first time in the Victorian Championships, the first held by the then newly formed Surf Life Saving Association of Victoria. Wes has competed or officiated at every Victorian Championships from then until 1992 when he and his wife, Eril retired to live in Noosa in Queensland.

He has won many Victorian Titles, Senior Boat 1950-51-57; Beach Sprint 1952; Musical Flags 1952-53; March Past Titles 1957-58-60 then seven more when the Warrnambool Mens' Masters Team was reformed in the 1980s. He represented the State as a member of the Relay Team in 1949 and the Surf Boat Crew in Perth in 1950. He was chosen to carry the Victorian Flag in a colour party at the head of a March Past Parade at a Carnival held at Bondi in February, 1954 before Her Majesty the Queen.

On the administrative side of the Club, Wes has made his presence felt, being President 1956-57 Season, Vice President, Boat Captain, Registrar and then was awarded Life Membership of the Club in 1956 for services rendered. Wes gained his Instructor's Certificate in 1962 and joined the Board of Examiners not long after. He carried out many examinations in the western area and carried out carnival duty mainly in the boat area until leaving Victoria. He was made a Life Member of the State body in 1977 in recognition of his outstanding service to Surf Life Saving in Victoria.

The formative years of Surf Life Saving in the Western District from 1947 into the 1950s saw the expansion of membership of the Warrnambool, Port Fairy and Portland clubs, this initially being dependant on the few qualified Instructors and Examiners from Warrnambool and Portland.

The South Western District Superintendent, Doug Kemp of Warrnambool, played a major part in training and examining squads in the early days with assistance later from Stan Stevens, Harold Stephenson, Ron Blackney, Wes McLear, Barry Hill of Warrnambool, Jack Ingles of Portland and many others.

The area was also helped by visits by Examiners from the state body. Some names that come to mind are Harry Windmill, Noel Emselle, Harry Pittard, Ron Hussey and others who made periodic trips to the west to qualify new members to help swell the club numbers and make the area self sufficient.

The Warrnambool club has been the strongest club in the west over the years generally with the most stable membership and, as outlined in the club history, has helped the other clubs in various ways over the years. Notable events being were assisting Port Fairy in the early 1950s; helping Portland to reform and shift to Narrawong and then later to Bridgewater Bay; helping with the formation of the Port Campbell Club in 1962. This interaction between the clubs has forged many friendships that have stood the test of time and though many years have passed, some of these early members never forget 'the good old days'.

Wes McLear

A popular event started in the 1950s was the Three Day Carnival held on the Australia Day long weekend in January when clubs from all around the State travelled to compete at Portland, Port Fairy and Warrnambool, from the Saturday to Monday. This was a real test of endurance because where today's competitors tend to specialise, then you would have a go at everything, like drawing the Belt in the R&R, then jump into a Surf Boat, Board Race, Beach Sprint or whatever, three days in a row.

It was fairly testing, but so were the legendary 'Bun Fights' (refreshments) after each Carnival where the host clubs would put on a free barrel and try to outdo each other with the quality of food provided. Many a 'tall story' and bawdy song would be remembered and many inter-club friendships were made as club members enjoyed the hospitality at these weekends.

The Warrnambool Club was responsible for much of the interest and encouragement in the formation of the Western District of which Harold Stephenson was the inaugural Secretary. The growth of the surf movement in the area can be attributed to the work of the branch members from each club at this time.

The close friendships of the Warrnambool men from these early days and the common bond of their dedication to Surf Life Saving has endured for some 50 years. Even with the sad loss of some, with the evolution of time, those left who saw the start, such as Stan Stevens, Wes McLear, Harold Stephenson and Ron Blackney, look back with a lot of satisfaction to the formative years of Surf Life Saving in the State, and to its expansion into the impressive body it is today. They can assure young members of the Association that if you 'put in' and enjoy it, that surf lifesaving will not only be a service or sporting organisation but can become 'a way of life'.

Bruce Owen

Bruce Owen

Bruce Owen joined the Warrnambool Surf Life Saving Club as a junior and gained his Surf Bronze Medallion on 28 December 1952, four days after his sixteenth birthday. This first award was to be followed by the Instructors Certificate No: 1783 in 1962 and his Examiners Certificate in 1970. From the early days he developed an interest in ski paddling and quickly progressed this ability into a very successful competitive career.

Ski paddling was an art form with Bruce and his skill was recognised by his success as Club Champion in seasons 1954-55, 1959-60, 1960-61, and 1962-63. Success was also experienced at interclub carnivals culminating in his winning the Victorian Single Ski Championship in 1961, 1963, 1964, 1965 and 1966. He gained selection in the State Team seven times from 1959-1966.

Probably amongst his greatest moments were the Single Ski Race in the interstate competition at Moololaba QLD in 1959 and Warrnambool in 1963. In 1964, Bruce gained 2nd place at the Australian Championships in the Single Ski Race at Collaroy.

During his early involvement with ski paddling Bruce, using his expertise as an engineer, is given credit for the development of the rudder concept which is widely used today. This ongoing involvement in craft has seen Bruce serve as the National Craft Officer for six years and after a two year break, returned to that position.

Ski paddling has not been Bruce Owen's only active involvement in the competitive area of surf life saving. Over his years as an active life saver Bruce was a notable Surf Boat sweep and was part of the Warrnambool March Past teams in the 1960s. He took regular part in all club championships and carried out his patrol duties in a most capable manner.

Bruce also contributed to the management of the club by holding the position of Club Captain on eight occasions: 1960-61, 1961-62, 1962-63, 1963-64, 1964-65, 1965-66, 1968-69, 1969-70 and 1990-91. In season 1970-71 Bruce was elected President of the club and served in that position until 1979. He was made a Life Member in 1965 for services to the Warrnambool Club and to life saving. Bruce was also awarded a Life Membership to the Victorian State Centre in 1986.

The Warrnambool Club building was also an area of interest to Bruce and he actively took a leading involvement in the various extensions that the club has undertaken. The latest involvement by Bruce in this area was the construction of the patrol centre at The Warrnambool beach.

The competitive years are still part of Bruce Owen's involvement as he regularly competes in the Masters Competition both within Australia and overseas. He was successful in the World Masters Single Ski Championship for the 55-59 years age group as well as holding four Australian Masters Double Ski Championship with Dennis Green for the same age group.

Bruce Owen continues to be actively involved in Life Saving and ski paddling representing his club nationally and internationally. He maintains more than an interest in the Warrnambool Club as well as officiating at State and National Surf Life Saving Carnivals.

These are a few of those Warrnambool men who have contributed so much, particularly in the formative years.

"Go! . . ." To the 1956 Olympics

By early 1949, only 18 months after the Victorian State Centre's formation, its leaders were confident that the fledgling organisation could now spread its wings and fly. Five clubs were affiliated — Torquay, Warrnambool, Portland, Point Lonsdale and Lorne — and, flushed with its successful first state carnival and participation (but not successes) in the National Titles, it could already claim that the future of a Surf Life Saving movement in Victoria looked bright. Yet like any community organisation hoping to attract membership, it needed to set goals that were, at best, both attainable and inspirational.

One long term goal it set at that stage was the 1956 Olympic Games almost as soon as the International Olympic Committee announced in April 1949 that the Games would be held in Melbourne. The aim would be to try and hold a National Titles and even an International championship event in Victoria during the Olympic Games — perhaps even to have a carnival chosen as the 'National Sport' component of the Games — as a way of promoting the movement to the state and to the world.

Securing the 1956 Olympic Games for Melbourne was nothing less than a international 'coup' brought about through the indefatigable efforts of Melbourne Lord Mayor, Sir Frank Beaurepaire, whom the State Centre had nominated as its patron in the first and second Annual General Meetings in 1947 and 1948. Although Beaurepaire, a former champion swimmer and Olympic Games medallist, declined the offer due to his other commitments, he nevertheless wholeheartedly supported the work of the surf life saving movement and had donated a reel as a championship prize in the first state carnival.

Gaining an 'Olympic' Surf Carnival for Victoria

The euphoria of Victorian sports men and women in having the Olympic Games held in Melbourne spilled over at a Surf Life Saving Association meeting held in Sydney a few weeks later, on 10 May 1949, which Victorian President 'Sprint' Walker and Secretary Jim Wall attended. A proposal to hold the first International Surf Life Saving Conference and Carnival in Victoria during the period of the 1956 Games in Melbourne was floated around the table, undoubtedly by Queensland delegate and Victorian Superintendent Allan Kennedy whose vision for the surf life saving movement saw all countries following Australia's lead.

Allan Kennedy's earlier vision, that of a truly national surf life saving organisation in Australia, was already a reality.

At a meeting of the Association held in Sydney two months earlier, on 10 March 1949, agreement was reached to create a National Council of state delegates to replace the Association's Head Centre in Sydney as the main controlling body. The date set for the inaugural meeting of the National Council was 10 December that same year.

Later in May 1949, Head Centre Secretary George Millar wrote to Victorian State Centre Secretary Jim Wall, asking "... whether you consider that your State Centre would be in a position to conduct the first International Surf Life Saving Carnival during the 1956 Olympics" in order to have the proposal fully discussed at the State Centre's June meeting. Jim Wall's letter in reply, dated 7 July 1949, stated that "your letter was considered at the last meeting and agreed (to). It would of course be necessary for us to obtain the assistance of other states in the conduct of the carnival so that the desired success can be accomplished."

The next move by State Centre was to apply for membership on the Victorian Olympic Council. This body was set up by Frank Beaurepaire in 1948 to co-ordinate Melbourne's bid for the 1956 Olympic Games. After the April 1949 announcement in Rome that Melbourne was the successful bidder, it became the Olympic Games planning committee and was evidently the body to join if the Surf Life Saving Association's proposal for surf life saving events as part of the planning for the Olympics were to be realised.

The response, in a letter from the Victorian Olympic Council in August 1949, stated they were "refusing its application because there were 'professionals' in the surf movement", a reference to council-paid lifesavers on some beaches in Queensland and New South Wales. This rebuff was not well received by Victorian State Centre members, but there was little they could do about it. The next attempt was to apply for membership of the Amateur Sports Club of Victoria which was represented on the Council. A similar refusal based on the same reason was received. However a few years later, in August 1953, as planning for both the Olympic Games and the surf movement's International Surf Life Saving Carnival firmed up, the State Centre was able to get closer to this Games Committee through the side door, as it were, by a cross affiliation with the Victorian Amateur Swimming Association which had membership on the Games Committee.

Building more clubs a priority

The Olympic inspiration, however, was only one part of the mosaic. Underlying it was the realisation that the State Centre could only earn its place in 1956 if it put in the groundwork first. And while in 1949 the Melbourne '56 Olympics was a great goal to look forward to in seven years' time, the immediate job in hand was to build an organisation that was big enough to cope with running such an event as an International Surf Life Saving Carnival.

That this early vision of participation in the Olympic Games played a role in furthering the surf life saving movement in Victoria— albeit only minimal at the beginning but assuming more importance as the time drew near— is born out by the growth in clubs and membership between 1949 and 1956: from five clubs and a membership of 304 (144 active[1], 160 associate) in early 1949, the number of clubs in late 1956 jumped to 15, with total membership increasing to 1174 (662 active, 512 associate). The clubs which formed between these years were:

1949: Port Fairy, Sorrento-Portsea
1950: RAAF College
1952: Anglesea
1953: Apollo Bay
1954: Barwon Heads
1955: Point Leo, Seaspray
1956: Lakes Entrance

The tales of how each club started are best enshrined in their written histories which describe in greater detail the local circumstances and the host of remarkably dedicated personalities that combined to bring them into existence.[2] Yet from the point of view of State Centre it is interesting to review those early developments which illustrate how active and energetic State Centre's officials were in carrying out the State Centre's role as co-ordinator of the various clubs and even instigator of new clubs on some occasions.

Ocean Grove

After the first Victorian Championships in March 1948, the next club to form was at Ocean Grove, on 18 November 1948, in time for the 1948/49 season. State Centre President Sprint Walker and Secretary Jim Wall visited members of the Ocean Grove Progress Association to arrange the foundation meeting. The Progress Association played an important role in its formation, as did the Royal Life Saving Society who donated a reel from the former Rippleside Life Saving Club (near Geelong). The majority of the members who joined the new Ocean Grove Surf Life Saving Club came from the Eastern Beach (Royal) Life Saving Club at Geelong. Unfortunately, due mainly to its key committee members relocating after only one season, the club went into recess for a few years and did not re-form until 25 March 1953, again in conjunction with the Ocean Grove Progress Association. In the meantime the beach was patrolled by the RAAF College Surf Life Saving Club.

Port Fairy

Port Fairy, which first formed as a Royal Life Saving Club in 1930 but was not yet active after the wartime break, re-formed in late 1948 as a Surf Life Saving Club with the assistance of Warrnambool Surf Life Saving Club, following visits there by State President 'Sprint' Walker and State Superintendent Allan Kennedy. The new club then affiliated to State Centre as the Port Fairy Surf Life Saving Club on 3 March 1949, but likewise "nothing happened after that", according to the report to State Centre. It re-formed again on 19 September 1951.

Anglesea

An attempt by State Centre to start up a club at Anglesea was made in late 1948 but failed through lack of interest, or rather, lack of encouragement from the local Progress Association. In August 1948, State President 'Sprint' Walker visited Anglesea, and after talking with residents and members of the Anglesea Progress Association, arranged for a meeting to be held there on 10 October 1948. 'Sprint' hoped there might be people around who were involved in the former Royal Life Saving Club which was started in 1929 but had dissolved in 1932 when the Lord Somers Scout Camp relocated to Somers in Westernport Bay. It appears that not many people turned up for the meeting and the response from those who did was less than encouraging, being content to rely on the reel on the beach which the former Anglesea club had left there. Unlike the Ocean Grove Progress Association who formed the nucleus of their Surf Life Saving Club, the Anglesea Progress Association members seemed less enthusiastic about becoming involved in State Centre's life saving activities, despite the growing popularity of the beach. This stand-off with State Centre continued over the next couple of seasons.

In July 1951, State Centre received a letter from the RAAF College stating that their College Surf Life Saving Club would be interested in conducting weekend patrols at Anglesea beach if the Progress Association were agreeable to this proposal. State Secretary Jack Williams forwarded this generous offer to the Progress Association and was amazed at the response. The Progress Association refused it on the grounds that "we have arrangements already made for this purpose. Some of the life savers have residences at Anglesea and are available all the summer." "Who?" scribbled State Secretary Jack Williams across the bottom of their letter, then wrote at the top of the letter as his comment for all State Centre members to note: "This is a beaut knock in the eye! Can you beat them! We should certainly reply pointing out their folly in declining the offer of trained lifesavers. Wonder what's behind it?" The only arrangement of which State Centre members were aware was still the old reel on the beach. The RAAF College then went to Ocean Grove, whose Surf Life Saving Club had folded after only one season.

In November 1951 a dramatic surf ski rescue of three people in rough seas at Anglesea by June Baker, a young teacher who had fortunately brought her ski along for the day was enough for local residents to bring the issue to a head. A public meeting called on 20 January 1952, by-passing the Progress Association, promptly formed a surf life saving club with June's father, David Baker, becoming the first president.

Sorrento-Portsea

Sorrento-Portsea followed next in 1949 after a spate of drownings and near-drownings at the Sorrento back beach in 1948. Here, as at Anglesea, the local Ocean Park Trust, comprised mostly of local business people, considered that the reel on the beach and the watchful eye of the proprietress of the cafe overlooking the beach who could ring the police or fire brigade in a time of distress were sufficient aids for those "stupid people from the city who get into trouble. You would not find local people going into the surf when a heavy sea is running!"

Once again, other locals chiefly with holiday residences, tried to by-pass the Ocean Trust and contacted the Royal Life Saving Society who had a life saving club at Portsea on the front beach facing Port Phillip Bay. Royal Life Saving Secretary Ernie Pleydell stated he had tried a few times to start up interest in a club to patrol the back beach but without success. With the Surf Life Saving Association now in existence, the prospect was brighter. State Centre officials decided to broaden the support needed to establish a club at the back beach and contacted Flinders Shire councillors and those members of the Sorrento-Portsea Citizens League, most of whom were prominent in Melbourne business and social circles, who had earlier sent a petition to the Royal Society asking that a club be formed there. With shire backing including an offer of financial support to build a clubhouse on the beach, and as much local enthusiasm that fellow resident Milton Napthine could muster, the foundation meeting at a local cafe to form the Sorrento-Portsea Surf Life Saving Club was guaranteed a successful outcome, with Napthine being elected President. In its first year the club recorded 34 rescues (4 with line, 29 without line and one with a board) achieved by its nine active members, all locals. Amazingly, the club also had 97 associate members signed up in the first season and had enough money in the bank to begin constructing a clubhouse in 1950.

RAAF College

The history of the next club to join State Centre, the RAAF College Surf Life Saving Club (1950-1959), started with a long letter to State Centre dated 30 December 1948 from Squadron Leader Lou Spence, RAAF College, Point Cook, requesting assistance with instructors to put the cadets through their Bronze Medallion. "The College intends to run yearly camps on the surf for two weeks somewhere each February for (military) training and wants the cadets to gain Bronze Medallions also," Squadron Leader Spence wrote, adding that he had obtained a Bronze Medallion with Tugun Surf Life Saving Club in Queensland in 1939 and wanted a refresher course too. He asked could that be done at the first camp proposed at Waratah Bay on 31st January 1949. "I propose to knock the rough spots off them and find a qualified instructor to give the air cadets a final polish. Can you help?" State Centre replied it would be delighted to assist.

The outcome of this training exercise and others over the next year was that a Surf Life Saving Club was officially formed at the College in 1950 and affiliated with State Centre at its Annual General Meeting held on 1 November 1950. The RAAF Club expressed interest in supplying patrols for the south Torquay beach "with assistance from the Torquay club", but after discussions with state centre, began patrols at Ocean Grove, filling the gap left by the collapse of the Ocean Grove club. In April 1953 the RAAF club requested a transfer to Portsea, but in the 1954/55 season were allocated a patrol area "one mile west of the (revitalised) Ocean Grove club".

The not-to-be-Navy Club

Perhaps inspired by the RAAF College Surf Life Saving Club, their friendly service rivals at Flinders Naval Depot (HMAS Cerberus near Hastings in Westernport Bay) conceived the idea of forming their own surf life saving club, unbeknown to State Centre members until a letter arrived dated 9 August 1952 (but not received by them until 9 October). "Our club," wrote R/Cook M.A.Mancer, Honorary Secretary, "wishes to make an application for membership in the Victorian State Centre. I would have written to you sooner but we did not select the club officials until the 29th of last month, thus holding up this application. Our club wishes to operate from Portsea beach as it is the nearest beach to us. ...Our club will carry the name of 'Navy Surf Life Saving Club', the club colours being blue and gold. Our club officials are as follows:

Patron: Rear Admiral Sir John Collins.
President: Commodore Harries (HMAS Cerberus).
Vice-President: H. Young.
Hon. Sec.:R/Cook M.A.Mancer (ex-member of North Steyne)
Chief Instructor: REM Solomon, S.R. (ex-member of Kirra, QLD.).

Something that will stand in our way is the lack of equipment. ...I'm sure that if you could help us in any way, all those in the club will greatly appreciate it, because we are not getting any help from the Navy."

State Centre members were delighted. Here was another prestigious club 'on a plate', as it were. Handbooks and copies of the Annual Reports were forwarded for the Navy club members to familiarise themselves with the organisation and rules. A problem presented itself in the Navy club's choice of colours since they clashed with those of Torquay and Ocean Grove, both with variations of blue and gold. The Navy club's choice of operating at Portsea beach would have to be worked out with the Sorrento-Portsea club also.

But as these minor problems were being discussed by State Centre members, another letter arrived from the Naval base less than a month later, dated 2 November 1952, stating that "the Commodore of the Depot (Cdre. Harries) has decided at last that there is to be no surf life saving club from naval personnel. It was a shock to us, as well as you, and very regrettable as things were beginning to be more optimistic. ...I'm sorry to put you to so much trouble and uncertainty. I remain, yours regretfully, REM Murray Douglas." It was a shock indeed to State Centre. The whole episode was over almost as quickly as it had begun. The Naval Surf Life Saving Club did not even get to the stage of a formal application being completed, so there was little that could be done except file the correspondence.

Apollo Bay

Next came Apollo Bay, formed on 25 January 1953, following a letter received by State Centre in late November 1952 from the Apollo Bay National Fitness Council who declared they intended to form a club. This followed an attempt earlier that year after a highly publicised drowning of a prominent Melbourne businessman the previous September (1951) to form a surf life saving club, at a public meeting called for 12 January 1952, but which came to nothing. Like Anglesea, a Royal Life Saving Club was established in 1922 but folded during the late Depression years of the 1930s. The Apollo Bay committee submitted two proposals for club colours —navy blue and gold as first choice or red with two navy blue bands fore and aft across the cap - and were the first club to have their first preference refused by State Centre which also had to take into account the colours used by clubs in other states as noted in the National Register of Colours.

Barwon Heads / 13th Beach

Barwon Heads Surf Life Saving Club, which formed on 2 January 1954 with 10 members (C.J.King as Secretary), presented State Centre Secretary Jack Williams with a demarcation problem relating to the Surf Life Saving Association's 1942 agreement with the Royal Life Saving Society over control of the beaches: open sea for the Surf movement and still water including rivers and Port Phillip Bay for Royal Life. Williams wrote to Royal Life that "... he was sure the area involved could include patrolling part of the Barwon River near the mouth thereof which could be construed as an area coming under the control of your Society". Royal Life Secretary Ernie Pleydell replied on 26 March (1954) that the matter had been put to the Executive of Royal Life who had passed the following motion: "that Surf Life Saving Association, Victorian Centre, be given permission to patrol the Barwon Heads river", thereby covering all angles. The club colours requested by the new club were royal blue, red and white, which was granted.

However the Barwon Heads club functioned for only one season. Almost six years passed before a new club formed on the beach, on 17 October 1961, this time known as Barwon Heads 13th Beach Surf Life Saving Club, locating itself further along the beach, about one and a half miles on the Torquay side which had become popular with surfing enthusiasts, and opposite the 13th hole of the Barwon Heads golf course from which it derived its new name, with new colours red, white and green.

Point Leo

Point Leo Surf Life Saving Club was formed at a meeting held on 1 April 1954 at the Progress Hall in Shoreham. The prime movers in its creation were Alan Forster and Dick Ellis, both from the Sorrento-Portsea Surf Life Saving Club, and champion swimmer John Marshall who had just returned from studies in the United States and was keen to move into surf activities. This trio first made approaches to the local Foreshore Committee, highlighting the fact that Point Leo is the closest surf beach to the city and would be enhanced by having it pat-rolled by a surf life saving club. After gaining the Foreshore Committee's support, they then formed a deputation to State Centre, even requesting a loan in order to commence work on a club house as soon as possible. State Centre members were only too delighted to agree, proud indeed to have John Marshall involved in the surf movement. Geoff Raws was elected President at the formation meeting, with Alan Forster elected Secretary. It chose club colours of orange and navy blue. Training started immediately on developing their first Bronze squad for the 1955/56 season, a highly successful one for the new club in terms of building its clubhouse and repaying the loan from State Centre in its first season.

Seaspray

State Centre's first association with Seaspray came via correspondence in 1949 between Rosedale Shire and the Royal Life Saving Society. A letter from the shire to Royal Life, dated 4 February 1949, said that residents of Seaspray consider that a second reel should be provided on the beach because "... this part of the 90 Mile Beach is very popular and some thousands of people visit it in summer". Royal Life Secretary Ernie Pleydell replied to the shire that "...this section of the beach is now controlled by our sister organisation, the Surf Life Saving Association," then forwarded this correspondence to State Centre Secretary, Jim Wall. Although Wall and fellow State Centre members thought this letter could provide an opening to starting up a club at Seaspray, it was really beyond their organising capabilities at that early stage of development — not to mention the limitations of their petrol rations —which was concentrating on reviving clubs along the western coastline. All that could be done was to offer a reel, which Wall explained to the shire was available at a cost of £26.

In the following years, Seaspray residents and beach users evidently kept up the pressure on their shire councillors about the need for a club to patrol the beach. Following a public meeting there in April 1955 about the possibility of forming a club, the Seaspray Surf Life Saving Club was formed on the 28 July 1955 at the Sale Mayoral chambers, with support from the shire and the Sale Amateur Swimming Club, and plans were made to build a small club house on the beach at Seaspray. In their first patrol season later that year, it was noted in the club records that "they used a reel which was a relic of the original Royal Club" — whether or not it was the 'first' reel referred to above or the 'second' reel bought in 1949 remains one of the club's mysteries. That reel, nevertheless, takes pride of place in the club's central room today.

Lakes Entrance

The Lakes Entrance Surf Life Saving Club was formed at a meeting at the Mechanics Hall on 3 November 1956, due chiefly to a three-way effort involving local residents, State Centre and the energies of Dick Ellis and his fellow Point Leo club members. Attempts made by State Centre members as early as 1947 to revive the former Royal Life Saving Club came to nothing in the following years. A response by Fred Lyne, Secretary of the Lakes Entrance (Royal) Life Saving Club, penned on 7

February 1947 to State Centre Secretary Jim Wall's letter informing former Royal Life clubs that they could now affiliate with the newly formed Surf Life Saving Association of Victoria, stated "the Lakes Entrance club is now dormant owing to members enlisting in the forces. However we hope to re-form the club before next season".

The former club was first formed in 1931 and was active on the 90 Mile Beach and on the shore of the Cunningham Arm. When the club finally re-formed in 1956, State Centre Secretary Jack Williams commented in the Annual Report that "it was most gratifying to at last see this club formed and affiliated after several approaches to local people over the past years," adding "with the formation of this club must be associated the names of Dick Ellis, Jack Hopper and Alan Drydle".

Consequently at the start of the 1956/57 season, when the two big carnivals scheduled to take place during the 1956 Olympic Games in late November and early December were approaching — the National Titles and the First International Carnival — the number of clubs in Victoria stood at 15, a threefold increase in just seven years.

Rescues

In line with the requirements of Head Centre in Sydney to collect statistics on the number of rescues achieved by each club each season, Victorian State Centre compiled rescue totals from the returns sent in by affiliated clubs and, after forwarding a summary to Head Centre each year, printed this summary in the Annual Reports.

The following summary from 1947/48 to 1955/56 seasons show not only an increasing number of rescues in line with the growth in clubs forming but also a remarkable growth in patrols having to provide first aid on the beaches. Other interesting features from these figures show:

- the increasing number of rescues with reel and line;
- the number of resuscitations carried out, for example, of the 24 rescued in the 1947/48 season, eight required resuscitation. This was relatively high in comparison to the 1955/56 season of 109 rescues but only 11 people needing resuscitation.
- boards and skis not entering into the statistics until the 1948/49 season, and then not being used a great deal until the mid-1950s.
- rescues by surfboats came into consideration in the 1949/50 season, with two rescues being effected. The greatest number of rescues by boat crews was seven in the 1954/55 season.
- of the total 46 rescues recorded state-wide in the 1950/51 season, 34 came from Sorrento-Portsea club which had only seven active members at the time — a remarkable feat! In the following season this club effected 36 rescues with 12 members.

First Club Efficiency Awards

State Centre announced to clubs in 1949 that it would like them to compete in the national Lord Nuffield Gold Cup Efficiency Competition, which was awarded to the club with the highest percentage of Bronze Medallion holders, the best kept equipment, the most junior members and the most Instructor's Certificates gained in the season. Points were also awarded for completion of patrol sheets and the standard of the club's first aid equipment. The competition was administered by the Board of Examiners.

Only a year later, in 1950, State Superintendent Phil Bennett was pleased to report that "the interest taken by all clubs in the Nuffield Competition was very pleasing to the Board. Equipment, patrol sheets and attendance at carnivals showing a vast improvement. We are very pleased to announce that Milton Napthine has kindly provided a trophy for the coming season". The purpose was to localise the competition to ensure that a state club was rewarded for its efforts.

Titled the Napthine Efficiency Trophy, it was won in its first season of operation, 1951/52, by Torquay, then in the following seasons by Point Lonsdale.

First Changes of the Guard

The first Board of Examiners comprising Allan Kennedy and Sprint Walker, also Les Errey and Joe Henke - both from Royal Life - worked hard within the three clubs that made up the State Centre in the 1946/47 season: Torquay, Warrnambool and Portland. Among them 37 Bronze Medallion, four Instructors Certificates and two Examiners Certificates were achieved. The first two examiners were 'Sprint' Walker and Phil Bennett.

In early 1948, the Board of Examiners was enlarged to include Jim Wall (State Centre Secretary) and Doug Kemp (Warrnambool), with Phil Bennett being appointed Deputy Superintendent to Allan Kennedy. Throughout the 1947/48 season three more clubs formed: Point Lonsdale, Lorne and Sorrento/Portsea and the number of Surf Bronze Medallions issued was 54 plus 22 to Royal Life Saving members who took advantage of the opportunity to gain a surf medal. Five additional Instructors' Certificates were gained by members in each of the clubs.

Victoria's first Superintendent of Examination and Instruction, Allan Kennedy returned to Queensland in mid-1948 but continued to make periodic visits to Victoria in his role as Superintendent throughout 1949 and 1950. Kennedy handed over his baton of authority in 1950 to Phil Bennett (Torquay), his protege and first Deputy Superintendent. Kennedy had seen great potential in Bennett from the first day they met in 1946 when Kennedy put Bennett and the first Bronze squad at Torquay through their paces.

Kennedy's role in starting up the Victorian State Centre itself and in its early successful development cannot be underestimated. If anything he was the Australian Surf Life Saving Association's living dynamo during this period. As well as being Queensland Superintendent on top of his role as Victorian Superintendent, he managed the Association's interstate and national teams, promoted his concept of a truly national body which was established as the National Council in 1950, then turned his attention to creating an international surf life saving organisation which was eventually formed during the first International Carnival held at the time of the 1956 Olympic Games. In 1954 he was transferred to England where he quickly set about establishing the English surf life saving movement.

By 1949 the Victorian State Centre's Board of Examiners was in its stride, with a few new faces joining in the 1949/50 season such as Harry Pittard (Torquay), Graham Beck (Torquay), Bill Thomson (Lorne) and Arthur Burge (Sorrento-Portsea) but who would continue the traditions and style set by Kennedy for many years.

State Centre's first treasurer, Roy Parker of Torquay club, fell ill in early January 1949 and was replaced by Milton Roberts from the same club.

Jim Wall, State Centre's first Secretary and an indefatigable organiser and worker for both Torquay, of which he was a founding member in 1946, and the State Centre itself, decided to hand over the reins as Secretary in early 1950, "owing to pressure of business", as Sprint Walker explained. Indeed, Wall's demanding position as Manager of the Tyneside Foundry as well as the increasing demands of a growing state-wide organisation for which he was executive officer responsible for all the correspondence and a great deal of the organising of carnivals and interstate teams was becoming a pressure that needed to be resolved. It was time, he felt, for new blood at the state level, but he still maintained his other state positions such as delegate to National Council, even taking on the task as Deputy Superintendent. With a young growing family, Wall also felt he would like to spend more time with them at Torquay, his club, but his release from the onerous duties of State Centre was seen by the club as their opportunity to increase Wall's club duties. He was a popular choice to be voted in as Club President in 1949, a position he held and enjoyed until 1963. State Centre acknowledged Jim Wall's achievements and the contribution he had made to Torquay and in setting up and running the State Centre by making him the State Centre' first Life Member, in late 1950.

The Secretary's role was undertaken by Jack Williams from Portland Surf Life Saving Club where he had been its Secretary and one of the first group there in 1947 to obtain the Bronze Medallion. In 1950 Williams was transferred to Melbourne by the Bank of New South Wales (now known as Westpac) for which he worked, and as State President Sprint Walker aptly expressed it, "Portland's loss was the Association's gain".

Victorian State Championships 1948-1956

At the time when the first Victorian Surf Championship carnival (later to be known simply as the State Titles) was conducted at Torquay on Sunday 7 March 1948, the events and the rules governing each event had already evolved over 40 years from the early days of surf life saving carnivals conducted on Sydney beaches. [3]

But unchanged, yet new to Victorian surf beaches, was the exciting spectacle of such carnivals: the huge staging arena of the surf breaking onto the open beach against a backdrop of a blue-black sea until it meets the more expansive canopy of the overhead lighter blue sky; the competitors on the yellow sandy beach in their variety of contrasting team colours ready to pit themselves and their equipment against each other in surf conditions that could either be kind or cruel; the thousands of spectators spread around the sand dunes overlooking it all, happily picnicking and listening to the racy commentary reverberating from crackly loudspeakers high above them whilst barracking for family or friends or just anyone down below.

The early state championships proved highly successful fundraising events both for the club which hosted them and for State Centre. Spectators were charged a small entry fee into enclosed areas on the sand dunes. Programs were on sale. Food and drinks were sold from the refreshment tents and marquees set up for the occasion. During events, club supporters carried blankets among the crowd for spectators to throw in donations.

Another benefit for the surf life saving movement came from the publicity generated before and after each carnival. Ralph Dean (Torquay Club), who was elected Publicity Officer at the formation of State Centre in 1947, excelled in this field, turning his hobby of home movie film taking into recording all the events at each championship, editing them into a short watchable film and taking his promotional movies to clubs all around the state to arouse interest in surf life saving. Another source of publicity for Ralph Dean in his "leave no stone unturned" campaign was the media, then consisting of newspapers, magazines and radio stations which he effectively fed photographs, news items and results, with Geelong and Melbourne media only too happy to send along their own people to report on the major events. The high sporting and community profile that surf life saving achieved after only a few years in existence is attributable in great part to the work Ralph Dean undertook in his role as publicity officer. While private enterprise sponsorship was non-existent at these early carnivals and in the early years of the clubs, donations of trophies etc by individuals, many of whom were prominent in business and community affairs, were encouraged in order to increase the value of the prizes. Then, closer to the time of the 1956 Olympic Games, this groundwork paved the way to the type of sponsorship the Association still enjoys.

In the following years, new events were added as well as some of the above events changing their titles. In 1949, the second Victorian Surf Championship was conducted at Warrnambool, on 27 February. Separate races for single and double skis were introduced to replace the ski race of the previous year. Other innovations were a Flag Race (sometimes called 'Musical Flags' in the programs of the day but now known as Beach Flags) and the Pillow Fight which, while not an event that earned points, quickly became one of the most entertaining events.

The third Victorian Championships were conducted at Torquay, on 12 March 1950, and was the first occasion that a Senior Surf Boat event was held. The three competitors were Torquay, Warrnambool and Coogee (NSW) "...whose enthusiasts went so far as to tow a surf boat by road all the way to Torquay so that they could compete in the Championships", as the Annual Report for that year summed up their herculean effort along the primitive roads of the day. It was not wasted since the Coogee team won the event, with Warrnambool second and Torquay third. This carnival was notable for other highlights also: the participation of a state team from Tasmania; a stream of cars on a fine Summer's morning all the way along the Geelong Road from Melbourne to Torquay that brought the number of people watching the carnival to around 10,000; a fierce storm that broke out around 1 pm sending them all scurrying home again in the wet and enough for State Centre to collect on its rain insurance. The 1949/50 season was also the first year that State Centre appointed its first honorary Gear Steward, Frank Innes from Torquay.

In the 1951 Victorian Championship carnival, conducted also at Torquay on 11 February, a new event called a Ski and Board Rescue event was introduced and won by Owen Yateman and Arnold Goetz from Torquay who beat their only competitor in another Torquay team of Brian Beck and Eugene (Titch) Cullity. A team from Henly in South Australia competed in the carnival, and the new Secretary of the National Council, Ken Watson, attended on the day and "... was very impressed at the manner in which the carnival was conducted, particularly after considering the very heavy surf and the difficulties experienced at the latter part of the day from high tide", as Victorian President Ainslie 'Sprint' Walker commented in that year's Annual Report. Watson's first impressions of the beach at Torquay and organising abilities of the Torquay club members gained State Centre a powerful ally when a vote was taken at National Council a few years later on Torquay becoming the venue for the National and International Carnivals to be conducted as part of the 1956 Melbourne Olympic Games.

Portsea was the chosen venue for the 1952 Victorian Championship carnival to be conducted on 25 February. A Novice Surf Race was a new event. The prestigious R&R event was now in two parts, one Senior and one Junior.

1952 Victorian Championships were relocated and finally completed at Jan Juc Beach (then known as Torquay back beach).

For the first time the Pillow Fight event became a points scoring event for the winner and his club and this was won by John Grover of Sorrento-Portsea. Unfortunately for both competitors and spectators, ".... a colossal sea was running at Portsea, which is a beach on which very heavy surf can roll," commented the writer in that year's Annual Report. "We had tremendous problems in attempting to lay the buoys, and meritorious service was given by the boat crews in our efforts. However, it was eventually not possible to do so and the water events were abandoned and the carnival was carried on with the beach events only." The water events were transferred to Torquay for the following Sunday, but "here again the problems of heavy surf were encountered" and were then transferred to the next Sunday at Torquay when "fortunately we were able to complete the series on that day". This shuffle did not weaken the dedication of either competitors and spectators: State Centre officials estimated that over the three days some 25,000 to 30,000 spectators were in the galleries.

Torquay again hosted the Victorian Championships in 1953 (22 February) with around 15,000 in attendance. It was opened by former champion cyclist Hubert (Oppy) Opperman, who owned a house at Torquay and had become the area's popular Member of the House of Representatives in federal parliament. "A record sum was collected and this amount could easily have been doubled if more collectors had been available," commented State Secretary Jack Williams, but adding proudly "the March Past was a stirring spectacle and almost reminiscent of the larger NSW Carnivals". A Junior Boat Race was conducted for the first time with Warrnambool beating Sorrento-Portsea and Torquay third.

The 1954 Championships were held at Ocean Grove on 14 March and was again opened by Hubert (Oppy) Opperman, MHR. Organisation on the day was undertaken by the Ocean Grove club and the RAAF College club, "under the guidance of Ralph Dean". Unfortunately they did not reckon on the number of cars that eventually arrived and because of the lack of parking space, police were turning cars away from the area. New events that year were the Novice Board Race and the Novice Skis. Ocean Grove was again the venue for the 1955 State Championships.

This time the increased capacity for parking was sufficient, but heavy rain about 1.30pm drove thousands away. "Fortunately we were insured, which resulted in our receipts outweighing expenditure for the day," as State Secretary Jack Williams noted.

Hard going in the Australian Titles 1948-1955

Victoria's participation in its first few Australian Titles was characterised by 'good efforts' in the face of top competition from the more experienced states but few prize-winning results. But the experience itself showed the Victorians the high calibre of the 'Aussies', as they were commonly called, and just what was needed in the way of dedicated training to achieve a major prize. Being chosen as part of the Victorian state team was an achievement in itself, however, and club members who participated recall their experiences — both sporting and social — in the Australian Titles with pride. A complete list of Victorian competitors and results is recorded in the appendix. The highlights of each year are as follows.

1949 at Bondi, NSW: No placings by Victorian competitors.

1951 at Scarborough, WA: Vic Tantau (Torquay) 5th in Australian Surf Board Championship and 3rd in Interstate Carnival; Torquay 4th in R&R; Mick O'Donnell (Torquay) 5th, 7th and 5th in Surf races; S. King and D. Shepherd (Warrnambool) 3rd in Senior Double Ski.

1952 at Woolongong, NSW: Point Lonsdale 3rd in Junior R&R; composite R&R team achieve 4th in the interstate competition. Victoria's Superintendent Phil Bennett was chosen as Deputy Referee for the titles, and Jim Wall, former State Secretary, was chosen to be the General Commentator for the period.

1953 at Newport, NSW: Both composite and senior R&R achieve 4th in each event in the interstate competition. The Junior R&R came 3rd.

1954 at Southport, Qld: Pt Lonsdale 3rd in Junior R&R; an upset for the Pt Lonsdale Senior R&R who were leading until they were eliminated on "a mis-understanding of the commentator's comment and ceased paying out the line to Laurie Gunn and he was unable to reach the buoys" in the interstate competition.

Interstate and International representation

Olympic representation by surf life saving club members was proudly acknowledged by State Centre from the beginning. In the 1948 Olympic Games, three Torquay members in Dick Garrard, wrestling, Les McKay and Col French, Water Polo and Arthur Burge, water polo, from Sorrento-Portsea, John Marshall, swimming, Pt. Leo, represented Australia in their respective teams.

The 1952 Olympic Games at Helsinki saw Dick Garrard, John Marshall and Col French participating once more, with Peter Bennett (Torquay) joining French in the water polo team. State President 'Sprint' Walker also travelled to Helsinki to watch the Games and to introduce himself to a number of the officials whom he would be meeting when the Games were next held in Melbourne in 1956.

Brian Whiting from Torquay was chosen as member of the Australian team for the 1953 Ampol Tour to Hawaii. A major event — the New Zealand and Southern States Championship — was held at Torquay on 31 January 1954 in front of a large spectator crowd of around 10,000 people.

Harry Pittard
1917- 1980
'Established our most important rescue equipment'

During 1946, Harry came to Surf Life Saving from the Melbourne Swimming Club along with those other early Torquay men. His close friendships with Graham Beck, Peter Bennett, Doug Boyd-Gerny, Jim Farrell and, of course all those first men to arrive at Torquay just after the war, were to establish his path in Surf Life Saving.

Harry Pittard

Harry had played in the 2nd eighteen at the Fitzroy Football Club, later taking up umpiring with the VFA.

Harry had been enlisted in the RAAF and was for some time employed at the Government Aircraft factory at Fisherman's Bend where he worked on a number of experimental programs during and towards the end of the war. He then transferred to Dunlop and it was during his time there that an IRB ('rubber duckie') was loaned to Surf Life Saving Victoria for testing.

That experimental and development period was instrumental in establishing what is today our most important item of rescue equipment.

Harry was part of those very competent early Torquay R&R teams and also competed as a sprinter and in Beach Flags. He was the Honorary Secretary of the Board of Examiners from 1950 to 1961 and Hon. Registrar from 1950 to 1956 He attended every carnival for many years judging both R&R and March Past along with many other duties. Harry was honoured by SLSV and the Torquay Club with Life Membership. He served as President of Torquay SLSC from 1973-75.

Harry Pittard was a man who could not have done more for Surf Life Saving.

Harry was awarded a Citation of Merit from World Life Saving. His wife Esta always supported Harry, and his two sons, Michael and Tony, both gained their Bronze Medallions at Torquay.

Milton Napthine
'A champion for the cause'

Born in 1908, Milton surfed at Portsea from the early 1930s. In those days, surfers had to break their way through the crown land fence and cut a track to the beach on the north side of 'Hughies Reef' from the present club house site. The other original surfers included Milton's twin brother Cliff Napthine and Burdette and Keith Laycock.

Milton Napthine

All of them went away to the war (1939-45) and on returning they continued to keep a lookout at the Portsea back beach for swimmers in difficulties.

On one occasion Milton rescued four people. It was then suggested that he speak with Ainslie 'Sprint' Walker, the founding President of Victorian State Centre, and subsequently the Portsea Surf Life Saving Club was formed in 1949 with Milton Napthine as President.

Milton did not do his Surf Bronze with the first squad but went on to achieve his Bronze Medallion on 21 December 1952, at 43 years of age.

His instructor was the Portsea Club's second Club Captain, Rex Sargeant. Milton gained his Instructors Certificate during the 1954/55 Season and became a member of the BOE in 1955/56.

He continued as President for the next 23 years, standing down in 1972 and was honoured by a special gathering of many people at The Kooyong Lawn Tennis Club.

He was made a Life Member of Portsea SLSC in 1962 and Victorian State Centre in 1962.

During the International and Australian Carnival held at Torquay 1956, Milton took on the job of managing accommodation and catering at the Melbourne Showgrounds, for which he received a specially inscribed gold medal.

He was also instrumental in starting the State Efficiency Competition Trophy. The trophy was awarded to the club with the most awards gained by their members in a season. Later it was called the Napthine State Efficiency Trophy in his honour.

In private life, Milton was involved with the VRC. He held a world-wide patent on betting boards which are still used today at every race meeting in Australia and in other parts of the world.

Milton remains patron of the Portsea SLSC Foundation, and has served for may years with the Royal Humane Society of Australia.

In the Olympic spirit -
Hosting the International and Australian Surf Championships at Torquay, 1956.

During the November/December period of the 1956 Olympic Games held in Melbourne, two surf carnivals were held at Torquay beach that drew a crowd as large as any of the Olympic events conducted in Melbourne.

On Sunday 25 November 1956, more than 70,000 people filled the stands and sand dunes at Torquay to watch events in the first International Surf Life Saving Championships. The following Sunday, 2 December, 15,000 spectators returned for the 1956 Australian Surf Life Saving Championships. What they saw on each day was a combination of events in both championships with around 2,000 competitors overall — a spectacle unequalled to this day.

For competitors too, it was a 'once-in-a-lifetime' experience that brought together 116 clubs from around Australia and provided a record breaking number of competitors for some events, for example, 101 surfboat crews, 389 entries in the surf races, 158 single ski, 68 double ski, 32 march past teams and so on.

The carnivals also provided new cultural experiences for some members of the international teams: "Our first Australian surf carnival was an almost overwhelming experience," the manager of the South African team, Gabie Botha, wrote in his report. "Two and three events were conducted simultaneously such as surf boat, board and sprint events. The water was extremely cold and later proved to be a slight handicap to a few team members," he added. Equally surprising to the visitors was the publicity given to events in the media. "Despite the surf being very calm, headlines an inch and a half high in Melbourne newspapers proclaimed 'Olympic Sun Gods' who "thrilled with daring surf boat riding!"

That the whole event was a resounding success —both sporting and social as well as increasing the profile of the surf lifesaving movement itself — was acclaimed by everyone.

Behind it, however, was a three-way organisational effort of the Victorian State Centre, National Council and the Torquay club itself that pre-occupied them almost totally in the years leading up to the 1956 'Olympic' carnivals.

Torquay gains two titles

The 1949 agreement by Head Centre (Surf Life Saving Association of Australia) that the Victorian State Centre could host an international carnival during the 1956 Olympic Games was ratified by its succeeding body, the National Council, in 1950 and, as the years progressed, was never in doubt. However in 1953 a Victorian proposal to combine the 1956 Australian Championships with the international event in Victoria (prior to a beach location being chosen) met with some resistance. National Secretary Ken Watson informed Victorian State Secretary Jack Williams in a letter dated 15 October 1953 that a majority of Federal Council was not in favour of holding the Australian Championship so early in the year (that is, in early December - they were normally held at Easter) but were only willing to hold an international carnival at the time of 1956 Olympics. A year of intense lobbying by Victorian President Sprint Walker and State Secretary Jack Williams followed.

During this time the Victorian State Centre called for nominations from clubs wanting to host the carnival. State Centre decided (on 25 October 1954, following the recommendation of a sub-committee of five who allocated points for a range of features and facilities at each nominated location) to allot the carnival to Torquay — ahead of the four clubs which had applied: Torquay, Lorne, Ocean Grove and Sorrento-Portsea— because of its "possibility of surf, width of beach, access from Melbourne, tides" and other factors related to providing facilities for the large number of spectators anticipated, such as parking, toilets and refreshments.

Perhaps a factor in Torquay's favour came from a reply dated 18 October 1954 from the Meteorological Branch of the Department of the Interior to a letter sent by secretary Jack Williams asking them to advise on possible winds and surf conditions at Torquay in two years' time for the proposed World Carnival on 2 December 1956. "Most likely," predicted the forecasters, " the wind will be less than 7 miles per hour from the south west in the morning with a chance of 10 miles per hour in the afternoon; the surf is likely to be maintained by a south east swell and the probability of good surf on 2nd December is quite high." (Perhaps intrigued or buoyed up by this crystal ball gazing, Jack Williams wrote to the Ports and Harbours Branch a couple of months later asking about high and low water tides for the same day in two years time. "High water on that day, at 11.11 a.m., will only be 80% of what it could be and is classified as a 'low high water'," came the cryptic reply.)

helped tip the balance in Victoria's favour in the Council's decision on when and where to hold the National Championships. The motion put to Federal Council: "that Victoria could conduct both an International and Australian Championship Carnival" was carried, much to the gratification of the Victorian delegates. Victorian secretary Jack Williams reported also he had received confirmation from the Royal Agricultural Society, in a letter dated 11 November 1954, that approval was granted to the Association to use the Showgrounds as an accommodation venue for an expected 500 to 1,000 competitors and that there was no charge involved except in making good any damages that might occur.

However the decision to hold both carnivals at Torquay re-opened a sore point among the clubs which had nominated but lost to Torquay. As Ken Pollard relates in his History of Torquay: "In earlier discussions there had been talk of holding one carnival at Torquay and one at Lorne (if Victoria was successful in gaining both carnivals). When it was announced that Torquay would conduct both carnivals, Lorne made a number of attempts to be allotted one and at State Centre meetings many heated discussions ensued. Point Lonsdale backed the Lorne submission that a new ballot take place. The logistics of setting up two beaches, moving tiered seating and the extra travelling time involved saw sanity prevail and in July 1955 it was again confirmed that both carnivals would be at Torquay".[1] At the same time Lorne was brought into the picture by arranging a mid-week 'Picnic Carnival' there for the visiting overseas teams, on Thursday 29 November 1956, in between the two major carnivals at Torquay.

The other attempt by State Centre and later by Head Centre to have the sport of surf life saving recognised by the Australian Olympics organising committee as the 'sports demonstration' exemplifying an original and uniquely Australian sport did not succeed. Federal Council's application, made in 1952, was rejected in July 1954 in favour of Australian Rules football.

Preparing Torquay Beach

In late July 1955, National Secretary Ken Watson and Chief Superintendent Vic Besomo visited their Victorian State Centre colleagues and Torquay club members to discuss preliminary organisation of the two carnivals. It proved a hard working weekend: on the Saturday morning an inspection of the proposed accommodation facilities at the Royal Melbourne Showgrounds; then a drive down to Torquay in the afternoon to meet with Sir Thomas Maltby, Victorian Minister for Public Works and associated representatives from state and local government bodies that might become involved in any 'improvements' to the Torquay beach and dunes that might need to be undertaken to allow 40,000 to 50,000 spectators to watch events; this was followed by an evening meeting with members of the organising committee at Scott's Hotel, which had become the normal meeting venue for State Centre meetings. The next day, Sunday, was spent visiting Sorrento-Portsea club and Point Leo club, with the latter club taking responsibility— a short time later—to look after the welfare and reception arrangements for visiting teams and competitors. The Sydney visitors went away most impressed with the thoroughness of the organisation already undertaken and committed.

BULLDOZERS ALTER CREEK OUTLET

The outlet of the Torquay Creek across the beach sands was changed by bull-dozers yesterday. The new mouth is located near the Bluff and the diversion will leave a greater area of beach front available for the conduct of the international surf carnival to-morrow. The tractors were provided by the Forestry Commission.

No go for Olympic logo

The Olympic organising committee however were not so helpful in granting the use of the Olympic logo to the Association who wanted to use it to publicise the 1956 Carnivals. "I have to advise that the use of the 5-ring Olympic Symbol by anyone or organisation other than those directly affiliated with the Olympic Games is strictly forbidden by the International Olympic Committee," wrote Edgar Tanner, secretary of the Australian Olympic Federation to National Secretary Ken Watson in September 1955. Tanner also chided the Surf Association for conducting its so-called Olympic Carnivals on a Sunday: "The Australian Olympic Federation and the organising committee for the 1956 Melbourne Olympiad should, in accordance with usual practice, have continued the Games on Sundays, but sought permission from the International Olympic Committee to leave the Sundays free in accordance with British tradition. Your Association's action in taking advantage of this is not appreciated." Ken Watson wrote in reply to what he termed "a most insulting letter" that most rescues had been effected on a Sunday — it was no day of rest for Australia's volunteer lifesavers!

Joint planning underway

Following the July visit by National Secretary Ken Watson and Chief Superintendent Vic Besomo, which confirmed that all the preliminary planning was in place, it was time to move on to the actual planning of the carnivals themselves. A distinctive Australian and International Carnivals News Bulletin was devised by Ken Watson to go to all surf life saving clubs in Australia. Bulletin No 1, dated 30 September 1955, outlined the arrangements already made in relation to accommodation, travel etc and called on all clubs to start making early decisions about participating in the carnivals: the closing date was set for 4 April 1956. Over the following months in the lead up to the carnivals, these yellow bulletins proved a valuable means of keeping clubs informed of progress and generating more interest in the carnivals.

On the Victorian front, the increasing workload on State Centre members and on everyone in the Torquay club itself called for some rationalisation. The demands of organising, in

1956 CARNIVALS:
Bulletin N o.1
30th Sept. 1955.

1956 AUSTRALIAN CHAMPIONSHIPS.

Clubs and their members must make early decisions regarding participation in the 1956 Australian Championships being held during the Olympic Games period in Melbourne. Set out below is preliminary information which Clubs, Branches and State Centres will find useful when considering leave from employment, financial commitments and other aspects.

1. Venue and Dates. - The Victorian State Centre has recommended and we (following a visit to Victoria on 30/7/55) have endorsed Torquay Beach as the venue of the two surf carnivals:-

(1) Inter-State (and probably International) - Sunday 25th Nov. 1956.

(2) Australian Championships - Sunday 2nd Dec. 1956.

Torquay is about 15 miles south of Geelong which is 45 miles southwest of Melbourne.

2. Olympic Games. - The Opening Ceremony is on Thursday, 22nd November, 1956, the competitions start the following day and continue day and night, except for Sundays, until the closing Ceremony on 9th December, 1956.

Surf Club members must make their own arrangements about admission to the various sessions of the Olympic Games. Most reserved seats have already been sold, but tickets will be available each day of the Games for admission to unreserved areas.

3. Accommodation and Meals. - Accommodation at or within 100 Miles of Melbourne during the Olympic Games will be at a premium and almost impossible to secure. With this in mind the Victorian State Centre has arranged on behalf of the Association for 1000 surf Club members to stay at the Melbourne Show Ground, which is adjacent to Flemington Race Course and about 3½ miles from the centre of the city.

The accommodation will be in the Halls of Agriculture and Manufacturers, and each surfer will be provided with a bed, mattress, blankets (4 or 5), bedside table and a small wardrobe (6' high x 21" x 18" with hasp and staple for which members can supply their own locks). Ablution, toilet, banking, post office and safe custody facilities will also be available.

A suitable and substantial breakfast will be provided at the Show Ground each day, but members will have to make their own arrangements for other meals.

The Surfers' Show Ground Camp will open at 9 a.m. on Wednesday, 21st November, 1956, and the first meal will be breakfast on Thursday 22nd November. The Camp will close after breakfast on Monday, 3rd December, 1956.

The inclusive charge for the full period, for Bed and Breakfast will be £12.12.0 per member and there will be no variation or concession charge for those who may only require the accommodation for a shorter period.

Applications for this Surfers' Show Ground accommodation must be submitted through State Centres to reach National Council (in Sydney) not later than March 31st, 1956 and the full charge of £12.12.0 per member must accompany each application. Other applications will not be considered

4. Discipline & Behaviour. - Each Club must appoint a senior official as Manager who will be able to control members and ensure that there is no vandalism or unseemly behaviour. The Show Society have made available these Show Ground buildings and services which is a wonderful gesture and we are sure that our members' gratitude will be shown by a total absence of damage or destruction of buildings, exhibits and installations.

5. Camping Grounds. - Some clubs have it in mind to camp or use other accommodation near Melbourne or Torquay for the period. The Association is of course unable to give and assistance in this regard but does warn clubs and members concerned that early and definite arrangements should be made. The Torquay Camping area will not be available until after 2nd December, 1956, but the camping grounds at Anglesea (9 miles), Barwon Heads (10 miles) and Belmont (11 miles) are reasonably close to Torquay and are adjacent to surfing beaches.

As with hotel and other accommodation there will be a terrific demand for camping facilities and services within 100 miles of Melbourne, and any clubs with this idea in mind should finalise their arrangements (not forgetting the problem of food supplies) quite early in the year.

6. Officials for Carnivals. It appears that about 30 Carnival officials from States other than Victoria will be needed and the matter of financial assistance will be determined at the National Council's Ann ual Meeting in November, 1955.

7. Surf Carnivals. Bus transport will move competitors from the Show Ground to Torquay and return for the two Sunday Surf Carnivals both of which will start at 10 a.m. and finish about 4.30 p.m.

The Inter-State and International Contest will be held on Sunday 25th November and will include "Open" events to cater for members not selected in the International or Inter-State teams. The Australian Championships will be run off in heats where necessary and finals on Sunday 2nd December.

Entries for all events will close with State Centres on 31st March, for despatch to reach National Council by 4th April, 1956. (Juniors at the date entries close will be eligible to compete at the Carnivals as juniors in Nov/Dec). Posters setting out the programmes and calling for entries will be distributed about mid-December, 1955.

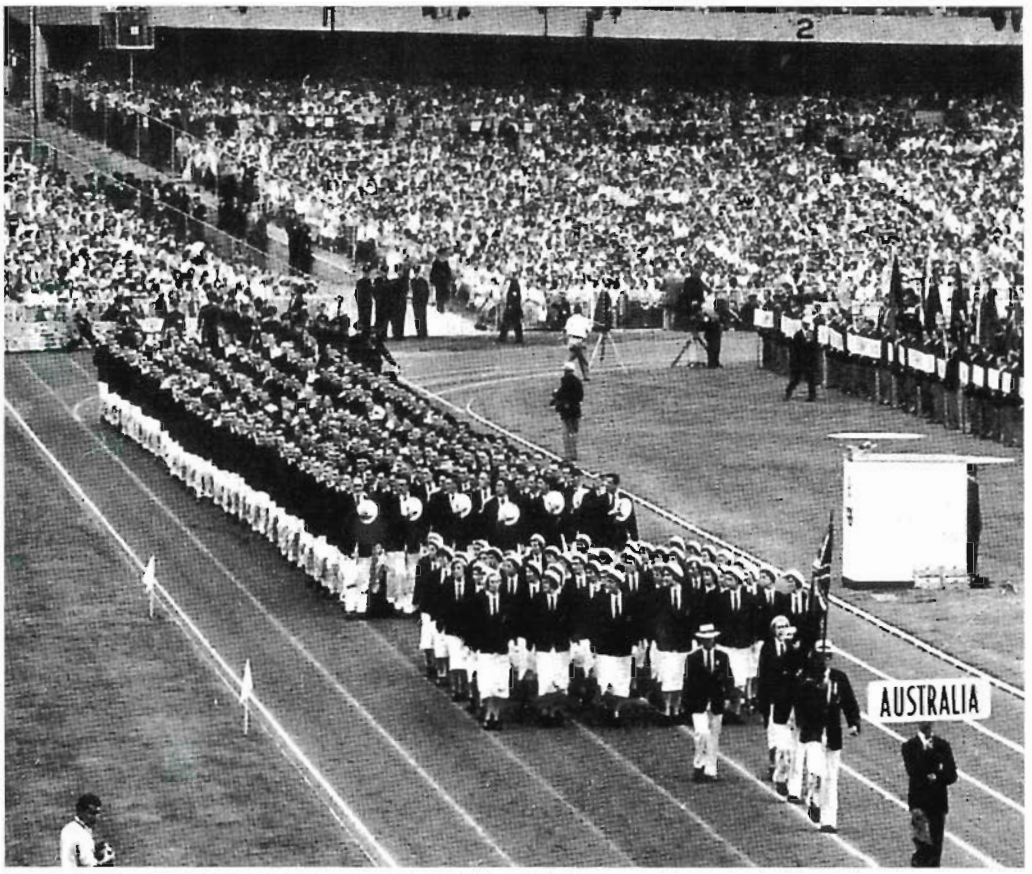

Entries and cheques from Individual Clubs and Branches must pass through State Centres, be certified as correct. One cheque only for full ammount must accompany all entries from State Centres to National Council.

Further detailed information concerning matters at present receiving attention with respect to the Show Ground Camp and the Carnivals, will be communicated in future bulletins.

one's spare time, two major carnivals needed both dedication and some sharing of the load if members were ever to perform their day jobs well and have a home life, a point that was keenly felt by state secretary Jack Williams who handled all the administrative work up to early 1956.

At first the Torquay club formed an Organising Committee, chaired by club president and former state secretary Jim Wall and whose members were all Torquay club committee members, but with state centre secretary Jack Williams and president 'Sprint' Walker also on the committee.

However it soon became evident that this group could not do the lot, so to speak, and that some areas of the whole project needed specialised attention. Consequently three more committees were established by State Centre in early 1956 to take charge of the most important functions: an Accommodation Committee to run the camp at the Showgrounds; a Transport Committee to be responsible for buses going from the Showgrounds to Torquay, as well as liaising with Torquay club for parking arrangements on carnival days; a Welfare and Reception Committee whose job would be to arrange all the extra-curricular activities and functions for the overseas teams as well for visiting local competitors and officials.

The Accommodation Committee was chaired by Milton Napthine and its members were Graeme Patrick, Alan Drydle, Ron Hussey and Ken Allen.

The Transport Committee was chaired by Dave Riley, with members Jack Meehan, Bruce Tayler, Malcolm Hall and Graeme Patrick. The Welfare and Reception Committee was comprised of all members of the Point Leo club, with Alan Forster as chairman.

Program for the 1956 International and Australian Surf Championships, Torquay.

In late 1956 an Area Control Committee was established by Torquay club to organise the gates (five paying gates, a competitors' gate and special vehicles entrances), attendants, ticket selling and cash handling, programs and reserved stands.

While the establishment of these committees took the pressure off Torquay club, who had enough on their plate organising the beach site to accommodate the expected influx of competitors and spectators (although many Torquay members joined the specialist committees in addition to working in their own club) it soon became evident that someone was required to oversee and co-ordinate the total project from the Victorian end. National secretary Ken Watson undertook the carnival organisation in terms of team entries, selection of officials, order of events and major sponsorships in much the same way as Head Centre had arranged most Australian Championships in the past, but this time with the added responsibility of organising the international teams and incorporating these events into the program. This was no small task. It was the first time in the Association's history that carnivals of this size were to be held with international competitors. In order to give Australian team members the opportunity of competing against their international compatriots, it was decided to integrate the International team competitors into the Australian Championships events. In addition to the small number of events for overseas teams only, the overseas teams were allowed to start one team in the semi-finals or finals of team events, and up to three individuals in semi-finals or finals of individual events.

Carnival Co-ordinator appointed

The Victorian State Centre chose Torquay member Graeme Patrick in July 1956 as the Honorary Organiser with the task of "co-ordinating the overall organisation for the carnival and camp arrangements", as announced in the July Carnival News Bulletin.

Graeme Patrick had been in charge of public relations in the original Torquay-based carnival organising committee since early 1955, and went onto the other committees: Accommodation, Transport and Reception. In effect, Graeme still continued with his role as chief publicist whilst taking on the added responsibility — still voluntary and part-time — of chief organiser. This was no mean feat. It involved attending all meetings associated with the carnivals: State Centre; the Torquay carnival committee; the specialist committees of Accommodation, Transport and Reception as well as becoming the main point of contact with National Secretary Ken Watson. Also attended to were the numerous decisions related to costs associated with suppliers and dealing with those tricky situations when things did not seem to happen in the time expected. On top of that — if all of the above was not time consuming enough in terms of paperwork and discussions with the many people involved —was the task of being responsible for the VIP invitations list, the very essence of ensuring the widest possible publicity would be given to the carnivals. In this respect the carnival was most successful.

In attendance on the opening day were the Prime Minister Mr Robert Menzies, Victoria's Premier Hon. Henry Bolte, the High Commissioners of Ceylon (now Sri Lanka), New Zealand, USA, as well as surfing legend Duke Kahanamoku from Hawaii who first visited Australia in 1915 and introduced the surf board to Australians.

Re-shaping the Torquay beach

Meanwhile on the Torquay front there was a great deal of work to be done. The priorities were to provide an enclosed area in which an expected crowd of more than 50,000 ticket-paying spectators could be seated and to open up as much beach as possible for events in front of the clubhouse. Involving local councils and government departments responsible for foreshores was required for the necessary planning permissions if any alterations to the beach were to be authorised. Torquay members also hoped that any of this work might be done free of charge as part of these organisations' own contributions to the Olympic effort. The City of South Barwon and the City of Barabool both provided grants for this development.

The meeting in July 1955 on the beach at Torquay between national and state officials with the Minister for Public Works and local government representatives resulted in agreement on what was needed, namely some heavy construction work to grade and tier the cliff face and to build a sea wall close to the clubhouse to prevent erosion. Other minor works such as road surfacing or regrading were also proposed. Sir Thomas Maltby, the Minister for Public Works, gave the impression that his department would be only too happy to undertake the project once the council plans were finalised and on his desk. However in December 1955 he wrote to State Centre refusing to fund the work, stating that on the estimates presented to him by the councils it would cost £50, 000 to terrace the cliff face and this amount of money was not in his budget.

Somewhat deflated after all these unfulfilled promises, but nevertheless undeterred, Torquay members persevered with their plans and set about the task of having the work done one way or another. Jim Wall's persistence with the Public Works Department finally paid off later in 1956 when the department made available a small grant to build a sea wall 22 metres long in front of the club house. The massive work involved in terracing the dunes, much of which was necessary to accommodate the tiered seating being sent down from Sydney was undertaken by gangs of club members in October 1956, following a pep talk by club secretary Brian Whiting the month previous where he stated "... it was alarming to see such a small amount of interest being taken in the completion of our duties!". Then, as Ken Pollard relates in his Torquay Club history, "...they (set to and) levelled the top of the cliff near the clubhouse. Toilets, in the form of trenches, were excavated at the base of the sand dunes".

The report from Torquay at the end of that month (29 October 1956) was most encouraging to the national and state officials:

" The tiered seating has been erected, 14 bays to hold 936 people.*

 The cliff has been bulldozed to give a good surface under the stands.*

 A post and wire fence was being erected and would be covered in hessian.*

 The toilet blocks were in.*

 The wall in front of the clubhouse was up.*

 The whole place is bustling with activity, but the surface of the beach is not in a favourable condition; we hope it is restored naturally."*[2]

Other arrangements in hand were the parking arrangements; assisting teams with accommodation locally; the amplification system to be supplied and operated by a local regiment of Army Signallers (8 HAA Regt Sig Tp Geelong), five large marquees for catering to be supplied, erected and manned by members of the RAAF College (plus four other volunteers for any duty nominated), and the services of the Geelong West Highland Band, a regular favourite at surf carnivals along the district's surf beaches.

Setting up the Showgrounds camp

On the Showgrounds front, the committee approached its planning and running of the camp "along military grounds" as it later admitted in its final report on the success of the arrangements. In its search for bedding it utilised the military, along with the migrant hostels, after receiving support from Harold Holt who was Minister for Labour and National Service and Immigration. Committee chairman Milton Napthine discussed with Harold Holt in May 1955 the need to obtain a considerably large quantity of bedding to provide for an expected camp of up to 1,000 local and international competitors and from there was put in touch with officers of Holt's Department to sort out the requirements. An order went in for 1,200 bedsteads, 5,000 blankets, 500 folding camp tables and 1,000 small wardrobes, only to receive a reply that "...the equipment for migrant hostels may not meet the standard envisaged by your Association and we request you go and see it". A short time later the committee halved its estimate for the camp, on the advice of national secretary Ken Watson, but in September the Immigration Department replied that it was unable to supply the beds or the wardrobes: the best it could do was supply 2,000 blankets, 400 bedside tables and 100 wash basins.

In the meantime, while the search for beds went on, the committee attended to other details such as catering, laundry and dry cleaning facilities, identification cards, time-tables, functions and entertainment: even the provision of banking, phone and mail services. The need for eight extra showers at a cost of £300 became a point of contention between the Royal Agricultural Society and the Association, with the matter only being resolved with Association grudgingly paying to have them installed. By June 1956 and with only five months to go, the bedding situation was finally resolved - again with Harold Holt's assistance - through the Air Force supply depot at Victoria Barracks who provided 350 folding beds, 200 sheets and 400 pillows. A detailed camp program was sent to all clubs in late 1955. A month prior to the carnivals, 316 bookings had been taken, a little down on expectations but large enough as it turned out.

Carnival organisation

Officials for the carnivals were selected in March 1956. From the 91 examiners around Australia who made themselves available, 58 were chosen, of which 33 were from Victoria.

Competition officials included Phil Bennett (Torquay) as Assistant Referee to Vic Besomo National Superintendent; Harry Pittard as one of the three Referee Stewards; Alan Forster was chosen as one of the three announcers; J. Tucker, Eric McGee and Harold Stephenson as three of the four Result and Beach Telephone Stewards; Clinton Shiells as the Cap, Costume and Equipment Steward, and Alan Coulson, Alan Drydle and Ken Sutherland as the three Marshalling Area Stewards.

Officials for the water events included Bob Brydon, Deputy Referee; Syd Wookey as Starter and Doug Kemp as Check Starter; Graham Beck and Alwin Cairney were the Starters in the Boat; R&R judges included Frank Innes, Gordon Dann, Jack Hopper, Bill Tyrell and Jack Meehan, with Jock Smith, Harry Windmill and Eric Chapman among the R&R Timekeepers.

In the Beach Events and March Past, Harold Johnson, Milton Napthine and Laurie Gunn were Marshalls, with Jack King one of the two Starters. March Past judges included Alan Drydle, Laurie Gunn, Jack Hopper, Frank Innes for equipment, Bill Tyrell for wheeling, Jack Meehan, Harry Windmill, Eric Chapman and Gordon Dann for steadiness and discipline.

For the Boat, Board and Ski event, Victorian officials were James Engel as Check Starter, Clinton Shiells as Assistant Referee and Ron Hussey as one of the three judges.

With 116 clubs competing and record numbers in each event, a full dress rehearsal was proposed at Torquay on Saturday 17 November. This gave those teams involved a good workout and valuable practice, while it also provided officials and Torquay club members an opportunity to fill any gaps that showed up in the organising.

Confirmation of competitors in the overseas teams: Ceylon (later to be renamed Sri Lanka), South Africa, New Zealand and Hawaii, plus a sole representative from Great Britain (Michael Martin, from the newly formed Bude Surf Club) arrived early in 1956. This allowed time to publicise teams to the Australian press and radio stations, also to the television stations that would be making their appearance on the scene in time for the Olympic Games. A late entrant was a team from California representing the United States (although Hawaii was also part of the United States). It was with pride that the Association could state in its press releases: "Australia is the originator of saving life in the surf. Demonstration teams have travelled to all these countries and our methods have been adopted and practised".

In addition to the "Olympic" carnivals at Torquay, the Association had also arranged earlier in the year to extend the International Competition to allow the overseas teams to visit other states, notably New South Wales and Queensland. Two more International Carnivals were arranged after the Torquay events, one at Maroubra on 8 December and one at Collaroy the following week. The 1957 Australian Championships were to take place at Easter as usual, at Bondi. The Victorian team to take its place in the two consequent International Carnivals and in the Australian Championships was to be chosen immediately after the Torquay carnivals — another added incentive for Victorian competitors!

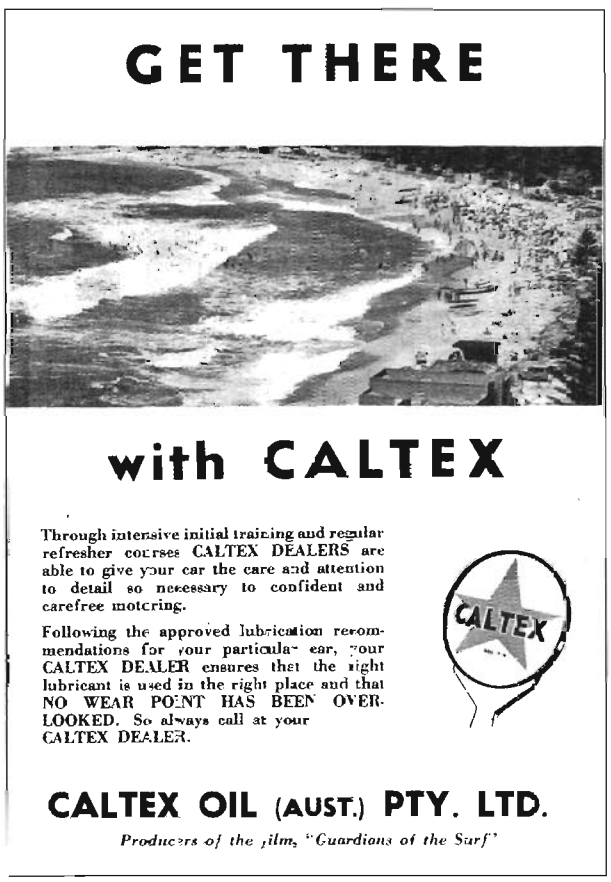

With everything co-ordinated for the carnivals and with excitement building overall in the community as the Olympic Games opening in late November drew near, a major sponsorship row erupted that threatened the goodwill which the Association was starting to build up among the business community. The Atlantic Oil Company (Caltex), which had publicly and proudly announced itself as a major donor to the carnivals by way of promising boats and reels as prizes, withdrew its sponsorship upon hearing that the National Council had also accepted a much publicised donation of £5,000 from one of its rivals, Ampol. At the same time it accused the Association's national president, Judge Adrian Curlewis, of 'double dealing'. Curlewis defended the right of the Association to choose its sponsors on its own terms and tried to play down this 'misunderstanding'. Fortunately the incident proved a storm in a tea cup and did not deter any of the other contributors such as Speedo who supplied sets of costumes for all the overseas competitors, British Nylon Spinners who supplied lines, Pelaco who gave a sports shirt to every overseas competitors, and Ford and General Motors who supplied cars for the officials for the duration of the Games. This type of sponsorship was in its infancy and the incident with the oil companies served as a lesson for formulating a more cohesive approach to businesses in the following years.

By October 1956, with the two carnivals a little more than two months away, office space was rented at 200 Queen Street in Melbourne in order to set up a Carnivals Office from which to co-ordinate the whole organisation. Organiser Graeme Patrick moved in his (by now) voluminous records and paperwork. A typist, Gladys Gilbert, came in full-time to assist, and it became a dedicated 'hothouse' of organisational and public relations activity. Perhaps it was this move that inspired Graeme Patrick to pen this lyrical opening to one of his press releases:

"The restless sea which crashes its rolling waves onto the long stretches of sunbaked sand of Australia's lush coastline, every weekend lures crowds of enthusiasts to surf and sunbathe.

Riding the tumbling, sparkling waves with nonchalant mastery on boards, skis, rubber floats, boats and with the body itself, you will see the surfer at any one of the beautiful Australian beach playgrounds. The breath-taking slide down the giant rollers provides the thrill of a lifetime.

This is the coastal heritage and national sport which Australia enjoys in its leisure time.

But the sea can be angry and treacherous and is always a threat to the unwary.

Surfing could never have become the safe and healthy recreation of this nation but for the selfless devotion of the members of the Surf Life Saving Association of Australia in safeguarding the beaches.

Members keep fit and constantly train in the rescue and resuscitation work and further this by meeting together at Surf Carnivals which also provide a spectacle of pageantry and thrills. This great service to the community and Australian way of life will be displayed at the Surf Carnivals to be held at Torquay beach during the Olympic Games on the Sundays November 25th and December 2nd."

During the week, teams and officials and their gear streamed into Melbourne, many heading for the showgrounds, others to stay with friends or family. Last minute preparations were under way at Torquay. State centre officials were kept busy meeting and greeting the overseas teams as well and interstate and local teams and were busily engaged in a stream of welcoming functions. All that remained was the great opening day itself, and, with good luck, hopefully great surf and sun on the day.

Sunday 25 November: International Surf Carnival

After a cloudy dawn broke over the still waters at Torquay, the first of a long line of spectators "crashed the gates from 5 a.m. onwards", as State Secretary Jack Williams wrote later in his report. It was the start of an extraordinary day's events.

The early morning rush to be at the beach before the 10 o'clock start saw cars and buses bumper to bumper along the 12 mile road from Geelong to Torquay, with conditions not much better on the 45 mile road from Melbourne to Geelong. The 40 police on traffic duty near Torquay were soon reinforced by extra police brought in to handle a threateningly chaotic situation, but, together with the Torquay club's volunteer traffic team, it was handled smoothly if slowly. Expecting around 15,000, officials were amazed at the growing crowd, eventually extending up to one and a half miles (3-4 kilometres) to the left of the club house as people packed the cliffs for a grandstand view. The golf course was used as a car park. By late morning as the last of the eager spectators arrived, attendance was put at 50,000 for what was later called by an Argus reporter "...the greatest surf spectacle ever seen on an Australian Beach" (26/11) and far in excess of the crowd that had turned up for the Royal Tour Carnival in Bondi in Sydney in 1954.

The crowd and the large number of competitors — 1,700 in all and particularly in the March Past comprising 32 teams (384 men) alone — both contributed to the event as a 'spectacle' but the weather and water conditions were far from the summer ideal that was expected.

The still sea barely rose to a ripple throughout the morning and passing showers soon had the crowd moving and ducking for cover. While the relatively calm sea disappointed those competitors who relied on a little help from the surf, (boat crews in particular), it provided good conditions for the pool swimmers and ski paddlers. The afternoon brought increasingly strong gusts of wind but better surf and sunny breaks in among the rain squalls that threatened to clear the beach. A fast rising tide in the early afternoon forced officials to move events forward an hour before losing the beach. As spectacular as the March Past was, rain during the event did not help the view of both spectators and judges.

Yet in spite of these conditions the expectations of the crowd and competitors on being involved in a unique event that brought together the best of the overseas and local teams were met handsomely.

The results were:

Belt Race: 1st New Zealand, 2nd South Africa, 3rd USA.
R & R: 1st New Zealand, 2nd New South Wales, 3rd South Africa.
Surf Race: 1st Peter Garrett (NZ), 2nd J. Jarvis (NZ), 3rd T. Brown (Sth Africa)

Beach Relay: 1st Hawaii, 2nd South Africa, 3rd USA

Sunday 2 December 1956: Australian Championships

Storms during the week played havoc with the beach, washing away sand and uncovering rocks in the swimming area. Tractors were brought in, courtesy of the Forestry Commission, to cover up the rocks and restore the beach for the Sunday carnival. In spite of the forecast for further stormy conditions, 15,000 well rugged-up spectators arrived to watch the carnival. Organisers were disappointed in the turn-out compared to the 70,000 on the previous Sunday — in fact they had determined to improve their crowd handling skills —but conceded that this was a fair number given the weather conditions and that many people did not want a repetition of the 'crawl' to Torquay they had the week before. State Secretary Jack Williams, however, ascribed the lower attendance to the way each carnival was described: "Undoubtedly the word 'International' was a greater attraction at this particular time than the word 'Australian' and attracted the much larger crowd on the first day," he reported to State Centre.

A boisterous wind and choppy conditions in the morning at least promised good surf but then the wind dropped to leave only ripples. Events continued in squally rain in the afternoon, diminishing the enthusiasm of the spectators, and when a thunderbolt struck during the last event it cleared the beach completely. From the competitors' viewpoint however, it was a most competitive and memorable day's action, with New South Wales teams and individuals winning most of the events.

For Victoria, John Marshall (Point Leo) came second again to Brian Hutchings (Bondi) in the Senior Surf race (third in the event behind Leon Coetse of South Africa but Coetse's placing did not count in the Australian Championship); Torquay were placed 6th in the Senior R&R; Point Lonsdale also 6th in the Junior R&R; Lorne beltman Jim Fountain came 3rd in the Senior Belt race.

Formation of International Council of Surf Life Saving

Mid-week between the two carnivals, and to coincide with the first International Surf Carnival, representatives of each of the visiting overseas teams— New Zealand, South Africa, USA, Hawaii, Ceylon (now Sri Lanka) and Great Britain -- and of the Australian Surf Life Saving Association met at the Showgrounds on Wednesday 28 November 1956 to form the 'International Council of Surf Life Saving'. Like the carnival itself, the establishment of this body was the result of considerable planning by the Australian Association in the years leading up to the carnival at Torquay.

President of the Australian Surf Life Saving Association Judge Adrian Curlewis who was elected Chairman of the meeting, then a little later elected unanimously as the Council's first President, spoke "on the need and desirability of having an international organisation to co-ordinate the activities of the work of surf life saving throughout the world" and that this Council should be formed "for the advancement of the science of surf life saving".

Delegates then agreed that the Council's aims and objectives should be research and experiments to improve life saving methods, co-operating with any organisation to implement these improvements, securing uniformity in the laws, management and control of surf bathing and surf life saving and resuscitation work, and advising on international efficiency competitions.

Resident delegates were elected, among them Allan Kennedy representing Great Britain where he had been instrumental in establishing surf life saving clubs during his stay there on business from 1954 to 1956. The Council's headquarters were established in Sydney and Australia's National Secretary Ken Watson was elected the Council's first Secretary /Treasurer. The first meeting was set down for April 1957, and immediately the South African delegates submitted proposals to discuss the Drager Pulmotor for Resuscitation at that meeting, as did the New Zealand delegates for the Ross Safety Belt and a Portable Life Saving Reel.

It was a solid beginning to what was to become an important organisation in the following years in not only spreading the uniquely Australian methods of surf life saving but in Australia itself adopting methods that were proving successful overseas. Two of these were brought to Melbourne by the visiting teams from Hawaii and America: the short fibreglass Malibu board and the 'torpedo buoy'.

"We reckon we can drag people out twice as fast with this torpedo tube as your boys can with a reel," US team captain Harb Bartels told the press. "Every lifeguard on the Californian coast has one of these tubes. As soon as he sees someone in trouble he just runs into the surf and throws it to the victim. Then he pulls the tube in by the line attached to it and swims in with it. There's no mucking about with a reel and line and a belt. You only need one man instead of five or six." The torpedo tube could also be used in mass rescues, with one buoy able support up to five people. National Secretary Ken Watson commented that the Australians were keen to see it demonstrated at Torquay: "if the Americans have anything worthwhile we'll bend over backwards to adopt it". So confident were the Americans that it would be adopted immediately by the Australians that Ampol's Managing Director, W.G. Wakely, who was also patron of the United States Surf Life Saving Association, offered to donate enough torpedo tubes to equip the main beaches in Australia if the Australians agreed to it. The demonstration was indeed impressive, but with carnival organisation uppermost on their minds and considering the many channels such a change would have to go through to be adopted nationally, a decision was left for another day.

The end result

The two carnivals at Torquay lived up to and in some instances exceeded all expectations in terms of efficient organisation, the high standard of competition, publicity and even financially in that the Association made a substantial profit of more than £6,000 ($12,000).

Winding down the show, tidying and tying up all the loose ends occupied the time of organiser Graeme Patrick and members of the various committees over the following six months. National Council issued specially struck gold medals to a number of members in recognition of their work, including Milton Napthine, Graeme Patrick, Jim Wall, Ainslie 'Sprint' Walker and Alan Forster.

Jack C. Williams
State Centre Secretary 1949-1957

Jack Williams was born in Windsor, Melbourne and as a young man joined the Members of the Melbourne Swimming Club, who in those days gathered at the old St Kilda Baths on Port Phillip Bay.

Jack Williams

He Joined the Wales Bank in 1932 for a lifetime career with the Wales (later known as Westpac Bank) and in 1946 was transferred to Portland where he got involved with the 'Royal Life Saving Club' which changed its name to 'Surf Life Saving' in 1947.

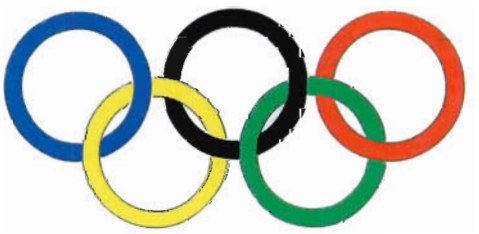

When Jack was transferred back to Melbourne with his job, Ainslie 'Sprint' Walker approached him about the job of State Secretary and was quickly initiated into the Torquay SLSC and elected State Centre Honorary Secretary in 1949 - 1957.

His work as Secretary and in particular with his handling of the transfers of the old West St Kilda Royal club, which became defunct due to the affect of the construction of the breakwater/marina, and is now named A.W. Walker House, forming the SLSV headquarters.

The other major involvement for Jack during his time as Honorary Secretary, was the International and Australian carnivals at Torquay during the 1956 Olympic Games which were held in Melbourne.

Jack was made a Life Member of the Victorian State Centre in 1962, and is now retired and living at Sorrento.

The Olympians
In recognition of our 'Olympian' surf lifesavers

Throughout the fifty years and more of Surf Life Saving in Victoria there have been a number of club member athletes who have represented Australia at the Olympics in water polo, wrestling, swimming, rowing, athletics and even winter sports such as ice hockey and snow ski events.

Surf life saving clubs have a strong competitive element, as well as patrolling our beaches which is the most important and vital aspect of surf life saving.

Members who have strived to great heights and notoriety are very much part of the overview of what surf life saving has been and will be in the future, the make up of a good lifesaver—very much includes the commitment, discipline, dedication, good attitude and physical fitness, particularly in swimming and running.

The following list of athletes was submitted by their clubs. It represents as many names as could be found who have represented their country at the Olympics (with apologies should anyone's name not included).

Bells Beach

Map of Bells Beach

Bells Beach? There probably isn't another surfing break in all of Australia that is so well known or has had so many words written about it, and this is deservedly so. There just isn't another break like Bells [1].

Bells Beach — why write in a book on the history of Surf Life Saving in Victoria about a beach that does not have an established Surf Life Saving Club, is not likely to ever have one, and, including the area in the immediate vicinity, South Side, Winki Pop and Rincon, is regarded as purely a board riding haven?

The history of Surf Life Saving in Victoria, however, would not be complete without recording the huge influence that SLSA members had in developing Bells Beach, board riding competitions and associated commercial ventures in Victoria. The creation of an internationally recognised surf industry in wet suits, boards and clothing can be directly related to the people who came to surf Torquay and Bells — and stayed!

These people were mainly Torquay Surf Life Saving Club members who chose a life style of surfing and to support their surfing 'habit', set up surf related businesses. They have arguably established Torquay as the 'Surfing Capital of Australia' and the beginning of perhaps the most highly regarded surf board riding competition in the world— The Rip Curl Bells Beach Easter Board Rally.

Men with foresight and the determination to decide that surfing was their life and that with some ingenuity and hard work they could combine business with pleasure and create a magnificent life style, and they started their surfing life as members of the local surf lifesaving club.

Doug Warbrick and Brian Singer set up Rip Curl, [the surfing merchandise company?]. They used May Stock's Singer sewing machine to sew wet suits. May was the lady who ran the Torquay haberdashery shop, and later they moved into the old bakery with Max Innis and manufactured surf boards.

Rod Brooks set up the Dive 'n' Surf company and later the Piping Hot clothing label. Rod was a Torquay patrol captain for many years, was five times Victorian board riding champion, Australian Surfriders Association President and World President of that organisation and a director of Quicksilver[2], a surfin goods merchandise company. Rod is on record stating that he would only leave the factory to surf if the waves were over 12 feet[3].

And the Ug boot? John Law and Alan Green used to sit in their car on top of the cliffs and make Ug boots and sell them to the surfers. The company name? Ug Manufacturing Co., or Quicksilver.

Just a small view of the influence of SLSA members on surfing in Victoria and Australia and all tied in with Bells Beach

It would be a brave person to nominate who discovered that Bells was a unique board beach or who rode the first wave there, but it is certain that prior to 1956, and as early as 1947, members of the Torquay Club were in the fore-front — Dick Garrard, Wally Morse, Vic Tantau, Geoff Emerson, Owen Yateman, Jim Bell, George 'Ming' Smith, Peter Troy, Brian Beck and Rex 'China' Gilbert.

The design of surfboards prior to 1956 restricted the surfers (most of whom were SLSA members) in their ability to work the waves as is the recognised technique today. Constructed from marine ply, hollow and 16 feet (4.9 metres) long, made maneuverability a real challenge. The point in front of the surf club at Torquay was an excellent break for these boards but the waves at Bells were too steep and the 16ft boards frequently suffered damage that required costly and time consuming repairs, not to mention a long swim. Nevertheless, board riders at the time were as dedicated as today's and despite the odds, took on Bells at every opportunity.

With the introduction of Malibu boards by the American Surf Life Saving team in 1956, Bells was surfed initially by SLSA members, but interspersed were other enthusiasts who were important in the development of board ridding in Victoria. In the years immediately after 1956 the surfers included Jim Bell, Joe Sweeney, Al Reid, Ross Jenkins, Des Couch, Kevin 'Mumbles' Walker, and particularly, as the 'young apprentices', soon to become the masters, Peter Troy and Terry Wall. Ivan Orbuc was an early Bells surfer with this group who amazed with his awesome loomaroo rides.

The early 1960s was the era when the 'young' brigade really started to make their presence felt. Mostly SLSA members they included Rod Brooks, Maurie Rayner, Peter Hayden, Brian 'Kanga' Lowden, Eddie Beacham, Doug 'Claw' Warbrick, Brian Singer, Brian Poynton, Marcus Shaw, Brian Trist, Tony Olsen, Paddy Morgan, Geoff 'Black Jelly' Reid, and Jeff Watt. These surfers were at the forefront of raising Victorian surfing to a previously unheard of new level.

Getting in to Bells was a feat on its own! Apart from some intrepid motor cyclists like Vic Tantau and Owen Yateman going in around the cliff tops from the Torquay side, the only way to get a car in was along an overgrown pott-holed dirt track that came off the Anglesea road, roughly between what is now Jarasite Road and the Point Addis turn off. The next challenge was to scramble down the cliffs, pre 1956, with 16 feet of surf board attached to you, and after 1956, with the more portable Malibu.

Another way in was via Owen Yateman's 'Yatey's' fishing boat and the famous jazz trumpeter, Frank Johnson, can recall cracking loomaroo waves there with Peter 'Tubby' Wallace, after hitching a ride with Yatey.

Peter Troy 'Boy Troy', whose parents owned the Torquay newsagency, recalls in 1949/50, 'borrowing' surfoplains from Ralph Dean (Ralph hired them to would be surfers at Torquay) and going into Bells on the back of Yatey's motor bike with the 'sidecar' (box tied to the sidecar chassis) stacked with surfos, Graham 'Boof' Bennett on top of the surfos and hanging on for dear life, and Peter on the back of the bike, via the old Jarasite track to Bells and Southside, and cracking 'surfo' waves there.[4]

Peter Troy was to develop into one of the best all round surfers to come out of Victoria. Excelling as a surf swimmer, board rider, winning Victorian SLSA board titles, Victorian Surf Riders Association State titles, board riding competitions all around Australia and on the International circuit, included the Peruvian Surf Championships beating Fred Hennings, junior champion of Makaha into second place, and third, Phil Edwards (California) the then reigning World champion.[5]

The difficulty of surfing the best board beach in the district was a major problem. This prompted Joe Sweeney, a member of the Torquay SLSC, member of the 1956 Olympic Greeco Roman wrestling team and very keen board rider, to raise one pound each from 30 other enthusiasts to recreate the old Cobb & Co road from Geelong to Winchelsea which ran along the cliffs from Torquay, through Jan Juc and on to where the concrete wave stands today before turning off inland. This was in 1960 and from that moment on, the magnificent reef swells were no longer the domain for the few. Bells became open to the World.

It was Peter Troy who, in 1958, organised the Bells Beach Board riders Club and on the long weekend in January 1961, taking advantage of the new track into Bells promoted and ran the first board rally in Victoria. This event was the beginning of professional surfing in Australia! The competitors were all members of the SLSA, generally from Torquay, and the judges, Vic Tantau and Peter Troy set up their card table on the side of the cliff and controlled the rally from there.[6]

Terry Wall, from Torquay, and during the 1960s regarded as one of the best exponents of surfing Bells on the big days was the winner of this inaugural event and Ming Smith, also a Torquay member, became the first professional, winning the 'Wave of the Day' award. His 'trophy', one pound ($2).[7]

After the rally, Joe Sweeney and Neal Inglis sat half way up the cliff track as people climbed off the beach and collected an exit fee, ostensibly to maintain the 'new' road, but as the Barrabool shire council took over the repair work the funds were diverted to other areas.

The day was a resounding success. Word of the event moved north and at the request of two Manly SLSC members who had contested the rally and were keen to return next year for another tilt at the perfect waves, but could not be there in January, Peter set the 1963 meeting for Easter because of the long break. Since then there has always been an Easter Rally.

In 1964 the Victorian branch of the Australian Surfriders Association was formed by a group of surfers in the Torquay area. The eight man committee included Brian 'Kanga' Lowden, President and Graham 'Flossie' Neylan, Secretary, both Torquay Club members.

By now Bells reputation was becoming a household word amongst the board riding fraternity as verified by the following article:

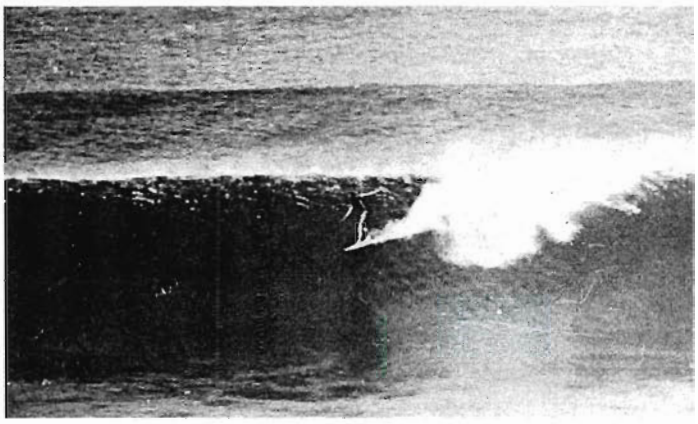

"...Surfing contests come and go and seldom do contestants get the benefit of good surf. I have been to two World Contests and four International Championships, plus innumerable meets in Australia and without reservation the Bells Beach Contest on Easter Weekend presented the most impressive conditions ever. With a fifteen foot ground swell lining up way out to sea consistent power sets rolled up from Bass Strait. Definitely a dangerous sea and beyond the capabilities of the average rider, it was never the less a great test ... It could be a long time before a surf like this will turn up while there are so many good men in the water ..."[8]

The Bells Beach Easter Board Rally was now being run by the Victorian Surfriders Association and in 1970 Rip Curl took over sponsorship, little realising at the time that the event would become the longest running major international surfing contest in the world. Rip Curl was established by Doug 'Claw' Warbrick, Torquay Club's Board Captain for two years, and his partner, Brian Singer, also a member of the Torquay SLSC and both regular competitors in board races at surf carnivals.

"It was through the tradition of consistently good waves that Bells was chosen as the site for the 1970 World Surfing Championships. The first time an International surf board riding championship had been held in Victoria. The contest brought competitors from all over the world and it certainly put Bells on the map internationally."[9]

This event attracted the best surfers in the world including past Australian and World Champions, Midget Farrelly, Nat Young, Peter Drouyn and Wayne Lynch and in 1973, Hawaiian winner, Sammy Hawke took home such glowing reports that the following year Jeff Hackman and Gerry Lopez made the trip.

Victorian SLSA members, and particularly those involved with the Torquay Club from 1956 to 1966 will remember the huge influence that board riding had on Club membership in Victoria, and it is fair to say that Bells was a major contributor to the problem for the drop in numbers so far as the district from Point Lonsdale to Wye River was concerned.

The unregimented and free life style that was suddenly available to young surfers compared to the SLSA members, mainly because of the introduction by the American Surf Life Saving team in 1956 of the extremely maneuverable and easy to transport 'short' surf boards — the Malibu — 10 feet long with a big wooden removable fin — drained SLSA new membership numbers drastically. The new boards also strongly affected the existing membership and if you wanted to find members who should have been on patrol in those days, you only needed to go to where-ever the waves were running, and although during the 1950s and 1960s Torquay was recognised as a top board beach, the lure of Bells was magnetic.

The erosion of Club membership and growing antagonism between board riders and SLSA members, whose responsibility was to ensure safe surfing for the public, was increasing rapidly. Board riders felt that the beaches were open to who ever wanted to use them and would ride their boards where they judged the best waves were. Unfortunately this was generally where the Patrols set up the flagged area and SLSA members and board riders were constantly at loggerheads as to who controlled the swimming area.

Gradually the board riders recognised that boards were not allowed between the flags and with the introduction of the blue flags to define board areas, swimmers became relatively safe. The risk of damages claims, confiscation of surf boards and constant publicity about the danger to swimmers also helped.

With Board riding now an established and rapidly growing sport the SLSA was confronted with a major problem. Membership numbers were not improving and as noted above, SLSA members and board riders were in conflict. What was the solution?

Arnold Goetz, State Superintendent at the time, adopted the attitude that the best way to maintain SLSA membership was to run board rallies in conjunction with the ASA. Despite this idea being contrary to the NSW attitude towards board riders, State Centre accepted a recommendation from the board of examiners to conduct two board rallies during the coming season. The first to be held at Woolamai Beach on 15 December 1963, the second in the Torquay area on 23 February 1964.

Entrants for the events had to be qualified Bronze Medallion holders and although the surf was reported as disappointing, the day was recorded as a huge success on the part of the Victorian State Centre, particularly the inclusion the of ASA members to assist in running the rally.

The Judges were Brian 'Kanga' Lowden and Vic Tantau, both of Torquay and Brian Poynton of Wye River SLSC, a member of the ASA and noted big wave rider. The announcing was carried out by Graham 'Flossy' Neylen a Torquay member and also the Secretary of the ASA. [10]

Results of this historical event were:

Juniors

1st	Terry Wall	Torquay SLSC
	Neil Davis	Torquay SLSC
2nd	Jeff Watt	Torquay SLSC
3rd	Terry Clemm	Pt Lonsdale SLSC
	Bob Johnson	Torquay SLSC

This attempt to entice board riders to join SLSA clubs by running board competitions was not entirely successful but it went a long way to setting up co-operation between the two surfing bodies, the 'old' SLSA, and the 'brash' new comers, the ASA.

Bells is not for the inexperienced or faint hearted surfer and although there have been many close accidents there has only been one loss of life. Tragically, John Pawson, son of the owner of the Torquay Hotel and a renowned big wave rider who had lived and surfed Torquay and Bells all of his life, was lost at Winki Pop in 1983.

In 1973 through the efforts of Lorne lifesaver Stan Cooper, father of champion board rider Gail Cooper, an act of Parliament was passed proclaiming the formation of the Bells Beach Surfing Recreation Reserve, and one of the Reserve regulations states that "No person shall without the written consent of the Committee play, practice or train or engage in any organised game or sport in the Reserve."[11]

The history of Surf Life Saving in Victoria and Bells Beach is a confusion of events and people, all with one common passion — surfing. One group, SLSA members with a job to do but torn between regimentation and free surfing, and the other, board riders who can chase the surf up and down the coast and experience the total freedom and contact with nature that only surfing can give. Who is better off ?

Within weeks of the Malibus' arrival, Sydney board builders quickly followed by the locals — Vic Tantau (Torquay SLSA member and SLSA Victorian Board champion) Jim Bell, Bill Clymer and Bernie Maine (also Torquay members), and many others, started to make boards from balsa, coated with fibre glass. Very soon it seemed that every one wanted to owned a surfboard, the drawback being the shortage of supply of balsa (imported from Sth Africa) because of the sudden frenzied demand.

"The Bells contests in 1986 and 1987 also decided who were the World Surfing Champions with Tom Carroll and Tom Curren being winners.

Bells Beach also captured Rod Brooks, another Torquay SLSC member and renowned big wave rider who set up one of the original businesses, Dive 'n' Surf and later on, Piping Hot, to support his love of surfing. Rod's attitude was that he would surf every day if he could, but he once said — "I won't walk away from the factory to surf unless —we've got a rule it's got to be over 12 feet —then I'll walk away, but under 12 feet I discipline myself".

Neal Inglis was Club Captain of the Torquay SLSC from1961-66. He joined the Club in 1954. His close contact and broad knowledge of the events of this era, particularly Bells, and the evolvement of the iron man through to as we know it today, made Neal the ideal person to write on these two important segments of our history.

Alan Frederick Forster
1921 - 1996
The 'Velvet Voice' of Surf Life Saving

Like many of those returning from World War II, Alan Forster resumed some of the passions of his life. He had played football in the Victorian Football Association (VFA); he then became a League Football Umpire and was generally an accomplished all-round sportsman.

Alan Forster

One of these sports was swimming. Alan was an excellent swimmer from an early age—so it was a natural progression for him to become an accomplished swimming coach and interested in the surf.

Alan had joined the Portsea Surf Life Saving Club almost as soon as it was formed, spending much of his free time on Portsea Beach. However several of his mates through swimming and life saving had become quite interested and then passionately excited by the idea of forming a new surf life saving club at Point Leo.

The formation of the Point Leo Surf Life Saving Club came to fruition in 1955 when Dick Ellis and the late John Marshall and Alan Forster quickly gathered up many very good swimmers around them from the pools. The Point Leo Club quickly gained recognition as a force in surf life saving competition and remains so to this day.

Alan extended his interests in surf life saving to also being involved with the running of the Victorian State Centre of Surf Life Saving. Whilst he was made a Life Member of his beloved Point Leo, Alan also received Life Membership from Surf Life Saving Victoria in 1967. Each of these Life Memberships recognised fifteen years of 'outstanding' service.

During his time at State Centre, Alan officiated at most surf carnivals but always was quick to join in with the after-carnival fun. Alan often used his experience as a broadcaster to give running commentary of each event of the day.

The nickname of 'velvet voice' was most appropriate. He had broadcast the 1956 Olympics VFA Football, World bowls, the Stawell Gift and surf carnivals as well. His other nicknames were 'Father' and 'Chappie'. Here was a gifted person, a great orator, organiser, coach and sportsman and he applied himself with all this to the advancement of surf life saving.

An unusual set of circumstances at State Centre saw Alan perform a most difficult task out of sheer dedication. Founder and President of Surf Life Saving Victoria Ainslie 'Sprint' Walker, ailing and with deteriorating health, continued to occupy the Chair at meetings and no one would have had it any other way. 'Sprint' was loved and revered, and seated to his left was Alan Forster. Alan chaired the State Council meetings from 1963 through until 1968 when a deputy president was elected—George Nutbean, who became the next State President. Alan diligently and meticulously conducted the affairs of Surf Life Saving Victoria in a most professional way dealing with many issues, and controlling sometimes rowdy disputes from the floor. Alan Forster never occupied the Chair, but was acknowledged as the 'Chairman'.

A vast knowledge and a retentive memory made Alan mentor to many. In later years, Alan continued to attend Council meetings and was more than willing to go onto the Board of Directors for the newly formed Surf Life Saving Victoria Foundation.

For his retirement years, Alan played pennant bowls. His decision to eventually move to Yarrawonga somewhat cut off his more than 45 years of involvement with surf life saving. Alan's life was cut short— but not before he had grown many prize-winning dahlias and played a lot of bowls, a game both he and his wife, Joy, enjoyed.

All of surf life saving, along with his wife, Joy and two girls Toni and Fiona, miss him very much.

Into The Sixties . . . And Growth

The high profile given to surf lifesaving activities as a result of the successful 1956 'Olympic' carnivals resulted in a spurt of new clubs being formed in the immediate years following these events. In only six seasons from 1957 to 1963, 12 new clubs were established, almost doubling in size the total number of clubs affiliated to State Centre as well as more than doubling the membership: from 1174 in 1956 to 2468 in 1963. Four years later the Gunnamatta club was founded (1966) followed by Woodside in 1968. The Victorian Association, in terms of the number of clubs comprising it, peaked at that point[1]. Indeed the 26 clubs comprising the Victorian Association in 1968 stayed constant for the next 18 years until some Royal Life Saving Clubs in Port Phillip Bay decided to join the Surf Life Saving Association.

In summary, the clubs formed between 1957 and 1968 were:

1957 Fairhaven (30 November)
1958 Wye River (8 January)
1959 Woolamai (29 July)
1960 Cape Paterson (22 March)
1961 Barwon Heads/13th Beach (17 October)
Venus Bay (24 September)
1963 Bancoora (10 January)
Kennett River (12 January)
Waratah Beach (27 January)
Jan Juc (9 February)
Port Campbell (7 August)
1966 Gunnamatta (17 July)
1968 Woodside (8 November)

The impetus for this remarkable growth lay not only in the springboard of the 1956 carnivals but in a number of changes affecting the social, sporting and cultural life of Australians in the early 1960s.

Fairhaven SLSC

Local action to establish a surf life saving club at Fairhaven beach, between Anglesea and Lorne, occurred shortly after the death of a young schoolteacher, Amy Patterson, who was rescued from heavy seas but could not be revived. Her family donated a surf reel and line in her honour to be kept on the beach in case of any similar emergencies.

However at a public meeting held at Fairhaven on 30 November 1957, local residents from the surrounding district who used the beach regularly - Aireys Inlet, Moggs Creek, Eastern View and Fairhaven itself were joined by holiday makers who camped in these areas on a regular basis and, following a talk on the Surf Life Saving Association by State Centre representative, Don Stewart, took the decision to start up a club on the beach and offer regular patrols to ensure the safety of swimmers there.

Training of the first Bronze squad was undertaken by Bruce Tayler and Tony Lester and was successfully completed at Lorne beach in early February 1958. The following month, on 8 March 1958, a meeting was held to declare the formal establishment of the Fairhaven Surf Life Saving Club at which Henry Sutherland was elected President, local identity Albert Suters was elected Secretary/ Treasurer, and the colours chosen for the club were acqua blue and orange. Planning commenced to hold a demonstration carnival on the beach four weeks later, with assistance from the Lorne club. After the carnival an evening meeting was held at which new office bearers were elected: George Nutbean as President (a few years later George Nutbean became State Centre President), and R. Carr as Secretary.

A reel and line had been placed on the beach at Wye River in 1948 and was stored outside the local store. But following the lead set by Fairhaven in late 1957, residents and campers at Wye River, which is located between Lorne and Apollo Bay, held a meeting on the beach on 8 January 1958 and similarly resolved to establish a surf life saving club there. A. Jefferson was elected President and D. Mitchell as Secretary who immediately informed State Centre of the decision, requesting training for a Bronze squad of eight members plus two more reels and line. State Supervisor Jack Hopper arranged both requests speedily. The colours chosen were light blue with two black stripes down the centre.

Speedy action, too, on the part of members of the new club resulted in the opening of the first clubhouse on the beach only 11 months later, a 40' by 20' wooden building, which was opened by State Centre President 'Sprint' Walker on 26 December 1958. At the end of Wye River's first season there were 19 active members — a fine start indeed.

Woolamai Beach SLSC

With the opening of a new bridge from the mainland township of San Remo to New Haven on Phillip Island in Western Port Bay, land subdivision in Phillip Island developed rapidly from the mid-1950s. It was primarily aimed at holiday makers, with the Woolamai area one of the largest tracts being sold. During summer the flat Woolamai Estate was filled with caravans, shacks and, more gradually, the holiday and permanent homes. The surf beach at Woolamai was one of the features promoted by the developers, who, together with local farmers and residents, were keen to see Phillip Island, with its famous penguin parade, become one of Victoria's most favoured holiday locations.

On 26 July 1958, a meeting was held in the island's main town, Cowes, to establish a surf life saving club at Woolamai beach. Jerry Tanner, Maurice Walsh and Norman Ritchie were the prime movers. It was more than a year later, however, before the first Bronze squad was ready (8 November 1959), but in the meantime members worked towards establishing a club house on the beach. This was helped by a generous donation of £500 by the Cleveland Water Group, one of the main developers, and a nissan hut was in place for the start of the 1959/60 season. The presence of a club house and patrolled beaches proved highly successful from the start in ensuring safe swimming conditions (between the flags) in what has always been a notoriously treacherous surf beach. The club had 15 full members by the end of its first season. In a strange turn of events, a local resident attempted to start a second surf life saving club at Penguin Beach, but without the support of the State Centre. There was little support from others on the island, and within a short period of time, he later joined the Woolamai Beach club.

Cape Paterson SLSC

The Wonthaggi Life Saving Club (Royal), established in 1939, was located on the relatively calm bay beach at Cape Paterson, about 7 kilometres south east of Wonthaggi. During a real estate development in the Cape Paterson area in the 1950s an access road was put through to the surf beach, which is about one kilometre west from the area patrolled by the Wonthaggi Life Saving Club, as an added sales incentive to potential holiday block buyers but which soon became a popular location for swimmers and for the rising generation of young surfers. When former Torquay club captain Clinton (Shacks) Shiells was transferred to Wonthaggi Technical School in 1959 "He couldn't work out why there was not a surf life saving club at this delightful surf beach", as he explained, and so contacted the Wonthaggi Life Saving Club with a proposal to form a surf club. Although initially there was some resistance on the part of club members to this proposal, on the grounds that the club could lose members, there was no denying that the surf beach was likely to become more popular than the bay beach, and the club agreed to help set up the surf life saving club. This co-operation was a turning point in the surf club's formation, and at a public meeting held in the Wonthaggi RSL rooms on 22 March 1960 the Cape Paterson Surf Life Saving Club was born. The colours chosen were azure blue with red stripes. (These colours were changed in 1964 to a red cap with two green and one black stripes, front to rear.) Wal Purvis was elected President and R Clarke Secretary /Treasurer. A small fibro-cement shed was erected later that year in time to commence patrols for the 1960/61 season.

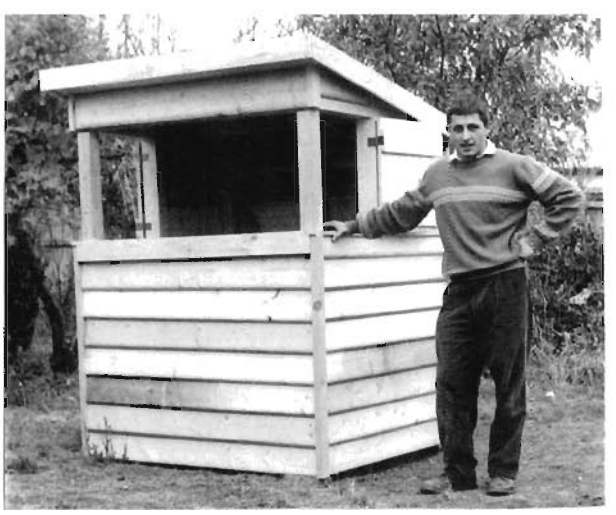

Barwon Heads/13th Beach SLSC

The Barwon Heads Rowing Club formed a Life Saving Club in 1919 and affiliated to the Royal Life Saving Society (to become the Barwon Heads Life Saving and Rowing Club), however its life saving activities lasted only one season: there is no mention of the club in the Royal Society's records after that year. The popularity of this swimming location at the mouth of the Barwon River estuary prompted the Parks and Trust Committee of Barwon Heads to write to the Royal Life Society on 18 January 1954 requesting that the Barwon Heads river outlet and beach be patrolled once more. This request was then forwarded to State Centre Secretary Jack Williams as part of the 1942 arrangement between Royal and Surf whereby the Royal clubs took responsibility for inland waters and Port Phillip Bay and the Surf Life Saving Association would take responsibility for coastal waters. Jack Williams wrote to the Parks and Trust Committee agreeing to help start up a surf life saving club, but nothing happened for the next few years.

However the rugged surf at Barwon Heads began to attract a few members of the Ocean Grove Surf Life Saving Club who, after patrols at their own relatively 'flat' beach, would head off to the challenges of Barwon Heads. This group then considered the idea of setting up a club at Barwon Heads and found backing for the idea from South Barwon Shire Councillor A. Johnson. Formation of the Barwon Heads Surf Life Saving club occurred at a meeting at Geoff Sanderson's house in Meakin Street, Geelong on 17 October 1961, attended by five members of the Ocean Grove Surf Life Saving Club. In choosing the location and the name of the club, the words "13th Beach" were added, a reference to the 13th hole of the golf course only 150 yards (135metres) directly behind the spot chosen to conduct patrols. The location was in front of a small parking spot on the road from Barwon Heads to Black Rock (at Bancoora) and seemed a good compromise between the best available surf and minimal rip along that stretch of beach. Geoff Sanderson was elected club captain, with A.G. Johnson as President and David Anthony as Secretary. The club colours were to be red, green and white. Three Bronze squads were trained in Geelong by Harry Windmill and patrols commenced on 2 December 1962. The following season a small tin shed was built on the beach to house the gear.

Venus Bay SLSC

In 1960 the Venus Bay estate was developed by the Van Cleef Foundation in order to aid research at the Alfred Hospital. This area is located on the Port Smythe Peninsula on the eastern side of Venus Bay, and, as part of the development and to make it more attractive to prospective holiday makers, a sealed road was put through to the previously inaccessible surf beach. The need to have the beach patrolled soon became evident and a public meeting was held in Tarwin Lower Memorial Hall, then a little later a meeting to form the club was held in the Tarwin Lower hotel on 24 September 1961. D. Parker was elected President, K.Young, Secretary and L. Sutherland became the first club captain. The Van Cleef Foundation assisted financially with building an equipment shed on the beach ready for the new club's first season, 1961/62.

Bancoora SLSC

The formation of a surf life saving club on 10 January 1963 at Bancoora Beach, 14 miles (22.5 kilometres) west of the Barwon Heads/13th Beach Surf Life Saving Club and half way between Barwon Heads and Torquay, was the start of an extraordinary year for State Centre. In the following four weeks three other new clubs started, then another in August. A total of five new clubs in only one year marked a high point in the Victorian Association's relatively short existence.

Unfortunately the club's records were destroyed when the clubhouse burnt down in 1987 so only the more general details about its formation are on record. Considerable assistance in forming the Bancoora club was given by members of the Anglesea, Torquay and Point Lonsdale clubs (Harry Windmill of Point Lonsdale in particular), also with the support of the Barwon Shire Council which agreed to remove rocks that were prominent at low tide. The first President was C. Cameron (MLA), with Graeme Long as Secretary and Les Inglis as Club Captain. Three Bronze squads had already undergone training, under the tutelage of club captain Kevin Roderick who had transferred from the Lakes Entrance club, in order to start patrolling the beach in early 1963. Later that year a small clubhouse was built, as the first stage of a proposed larger building, on land donated by the council. Bancoora's chosen colours are yellow cap with two black stripes and one central red stripe, front to rear.

Kennett River SLSC

The formation of a surf life saving club at Kennett River beach, only a few kilometres west of Wye River, was in part an immediate response to a drowning at this attractive but sometimes treacherous beach. District Supervisor Tony Lester had earlier seen the possibilities of starting a club there, however its main population during the summer period consisted of campers and caravanners, thus making it difficult to secure members. The drowning, however, galvanised the few locals, those with holiday houses nearby and regular campers to take on the job in order to secure a safe swimming environment.

A meeting to form a surf life saving club was held in the old school building at Kennett River on 12 January 1963, which was attended by State Superintendent Arnold Goetz and also by some members from Wye River club who were ready to offer support and supplies. Professor Harold Hunt was elected President, with John Skewes taking on the tasks of Secretary/Treasurer.

The first clubhouse was an old mill house, one of a number of residences built for timber workers of a former mill. The club cap colours chosen were red, black and white segment.

Waratah Beach SLSC

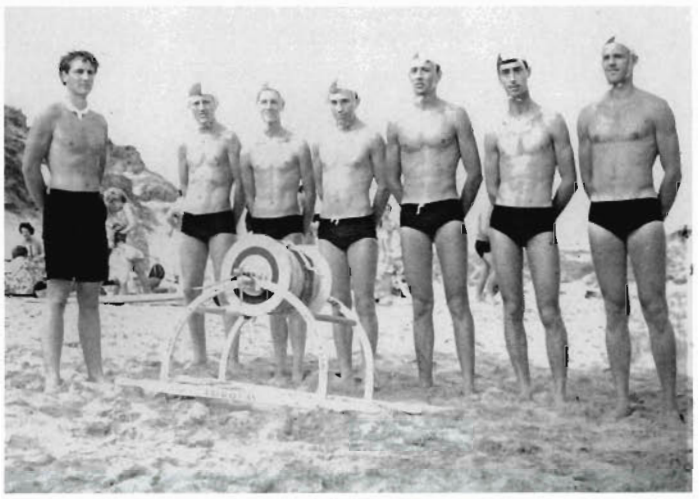

When in 1963 the Waratah Beach Surf Life Saving Club was established, the occasion became the last of the former coastal Royal Life Saving Clubs to be replaced with a surf club. The earlier club was known as the Sandy Point Life Saving Club. It was formed in 1934 but lasted only two seasons until it fell victim to the 1930s Depression. However the club's reel, which was stored in a shearing shed on a farm close by, was taken out and placed on the beach during summer weekends and holiday periods. There was little interest in reviving the club after the second world war, even as a surf club when the State Centre was formed in 1947. Once again it was a holiday housing development behind the sand dunes in the late 1950s that brought more people to the beach and with it the prospect of starting up a club once more.

However a public meeting called by State Centre in December 1962 attracted little interest on the day, but it sowed the seeds. Only a month later, another meeting was held in the local hall, on 12 January 1963, attended by State Superintendent Arnold Goetz, State Centre Secretary Bruce Bowman and this proved more successful, with 38 "prospective Bronze holders present", as Bruce Bowman later reported. The Waratah Beach Surf Life Saving Club was born. Ken Heyward was elected the club's first President, with Norm Gerarty as Secretary/Treasurer. The club's colours were to be sky blue with red stripes. Training for a Bronze Squad was undertaken immediately, with considerable help from the Point Leo club, and patrols on the beach in the same location as the earlier life saving club commenced later that year for the 1963/64 season. The club's gear had to be stored in the general store in the beginning. This was later transferred to a tin garage until the club was able to erect a clubhouse, a task which took a few years to get under way. Finally an A-frame building was erected in late 1968.

Jan Juc SLSC

The Jan Juc beach, adjoining the Torquay beach and separated by Rocky Point and two large rocks called the Haystacks and accessible within minutes by either climbing over the hill at high tide or around the rock pools at low tide, seemed at first an unlikely location for a separate surf life saving club with the Torquay Surf Life Saving Club so close at hand. However the holiday housing developments at Torquay in the 1950s and 1960s soon spilled over to the adjacent area, in particular the Golf Links Estate behind the Jan Juc sand dunes, bringing with them an increased number of people using the wide Jan Juc beach with its appealing surf. Torquay club members were already discussing the possibility of a patrol outpost at Jan Juc but this came to nothing in view of the problems of communication at the time and the difficulties in rough weather of quickly reaching Jan Juc beach by surfboat.

Perhaps the trigger starting a surf club at Jan Juc came in January 1963 following a fatal incident in its sometimes treacherous surf. Torquay club member and champion wrestler Dick Garrard and fellow wrestler Tom Trevaskis paddled out to a man caught in a run out, helped him in but in spite of their best efforts could not revive him. Within days a meeting was called to form a surf club to patrol the beach. Residents of the Golf Links Estate and others came to Torquay club member Joe Sweeney's house on 9 February 1963. The meeting was chaired by Cr. Pettitt of Barabool shire. Considerable discussion took place around the name of the new club, with four titles put forward: Fossil Beach, Barabool, Sweeney and Jan Juc. Finally the title of Jan Juc was adopted on a motion put forward by Dick Garrard and Carl Morris, who was elected as the club's first President. G. Stephen was elected Secretary and Tony Knight elected Treasurer, with Joe Sweeney becoming Club Captain. Club colours were to be pale blue with navy blue panels. The appeal to raise funds for a club house raised an extraordinary amount of £6000 ($12,000) and a two storey building was started on the top of the cliff overlooking the beach later that season and was completed in early 1964.

Port Campbell SLSC

When three members of a family drowned at Port Campbell in early 1963, local farmer Keith Gray who was also a member of the Warrnambool Surf Life Saving Club, began canvassing the area for people interested in starting a club at Port Campbell. This resulted in a well attended meeting of 44 people on Wednesday 7 August 1963 who took up the challenge, especially after listening to Warrnambool club members President Ron Blackney, Vice-President Wes McLear, Secretary Harold Stephenson and Club Captain Bruce Owen who assured them they would receive the full support of the Warrnambool club for equipment and training. John Younis was elected President. Secretary/Treasurer was Ron Street.

Warrnambool instructors started training sessions the following Saturday on the Port Campbell beach. The new club was able to commence patrols later in the year after the first Bronze squad qualified on 8 December 1963. Club colours chosen were white with a black stripe enclosed by two red stripes. Work on a club house did not commence until 1965, but thanks to the local shire it was conveniently located on the foreshore at the corner of Cairns and Tregear streets directly fronting the popular sandy swimming beach which is the only safe beach in the locality.

Gunnamatta SLSC

In 1961 Flinders Shire Council wrote to State Centre advising them of a proposed land development at Capri beach or more popularly known as the Rye back or ocean beach (near Boags Rocks) and the need to establish patrols, perhaps from the nearby Portsea Surf Life Saving Club, at this notoriously dangerous area for the expected growing number of residents and holiday makers. After an inspection by State Centre officials and discussions with Portsea club members, State Centre replied (on 9 March 1961) that "it is not possible for Portsea club to patrol but we urge you to please put up notices saying the beach is not patrolled by a life saving club and is considered unsafe for bathing". The council tried again the following year but the same advice from State Centre prevailed. Portsea club members were needed at their own beach.

As development of the area progressed and the popularity of the beach grew, the council tried once more in 1965 to have a surf life saving established there, calling a public meeting at Rye Hall on 17 July. On this occasion it met with success— just!— with six members agreeing to become the Gunnamatta Surf Life Saving Club. Councillor Ken Dobson was elected President, K. Martin Doe was Secretary and the other members were M. McDonald, Q. McCallum and C. Ross. A letter to State Centre was sent advising them of the result and requesting advice and affiliation, which State Centre gave most willingly to these brave founders. Although it was a small beginning, the club grew quickly to 30 members by the middle of the first season, earning the reputation— still maintained— as the club with the highest number of rescues each season.

Woodside SLSC

Woodside beach, on the eastern end of the 90 Mile Beach close to Yarram, proved a popular destination for the growing generation of surfers in the early 1960s. Among them were a group of Yarram Jaycee members who raised concern at their meetings of the dangers of an unpatrolled beach for the families who made it a popular destination for swimming and board activities and the need to do something about it. The result was a public meeting called by the Yarram branch of the Jaycees on 3 November 1968 to which State Centre were invited to send representatives to talk and encourage people to form a surf life saving club. State Superintendent Arnold Goetz attended, as did former State Secretary and now local district Supervisor Bruce Bowman from Seaspray Club. With State Centre backing and local support from the Jaycee President T. Hurst and Shire President A. McDonald, a motion to form Woodside Surf Life Saving Club was carried enthusiastically. R. Harvey was elected President and H. McLean was elected Secretary. After the training of the first Bronze squads, the first patrols commenced on 25 January 1969.

A new headquarters for State Centre

How State Centre acquired the former West St Kilda Life Saving Club's building for its headquarters, which opened in 1963, is an interesting tale. The differing needs at the time of both the Victorian Surf Life Saving Association and the Royal Life Saving Society were resolved, resulting in a mutually beneficial outcome.

The pressures of running a growing statewide organisation of 18 clubs in the early 1960s - in the same way it had been run soon after its founding with a handful of clubs in the late 1940s - was beginning to tell on some State Centre members. As one delegate to State Centre at the time, Neil Whitaker of Point Lonsdale club expressed the general feeling of other State Centre members: "Apart from the regular monthly State Centre meetings at Scotts Hotel in Collins Street, we were all getting a bit fed up with going here, there and everywhere to meet in people's homes and real problems were developing with our gear stored in over a dozen sheds and places all over Melbourne". Members were starting to voice the need to have a fixed headquarters in a central location, preferably in a bayside area in Melbourne, with a reasonable area of sand to conduct regular beach training programs in R & R and March Pasts for club members and especially for the state teams. Over the years, such programs had been conducted at beaches close to the city, mostly at St Kilda using the facilities of the St Kilda Life Saving Club but only at times when this club did not require them itself.

By the 1960s too, the West St Kilda Life Saving Club building was presenting a problem for the Royal Life Saving Society. A breakwater built out at the eastern side of this beach area created an increasing area of sand in front of the clubhouse. The popularity of the beach declined, as did the once active life saving club which was about to fold. Although the clubhouse was used regularly by other groups - a car club, a dart club and the 14' Sailing Club which was in charge of the pavilion next door - with the permission of the life saving club, the Royal Life Saving Society's problem with the demise of its club was that the Society's lease on the building included a clause to the effect that if there was no life saving club at West St Kilda then the clubhouse building was to be demolished.

Aware of each other's dilemmas on a casual basis as developments occurred, Royal Life Secretary Ernie Pleydell suggested to Surf Life Saving officials that the surf movement was welcome to take over the lease of the West St Kilda club building and make it their own. It would be a shame, he added, if such a community asset were to be pulled down. After canvassing the opinions of State Centre members on this unofficial proposal, it was decided to put together a Building Sub-committee to meet with Royal Life officials who could then formally present their offer. This took place at Scotts Hotel in Melbourne on 1 November 1961. Members present (the Building Sub-Committee) were Vice-President Allan Forster, Secretary Bruce Bowman, former secretary Jack Williams, State Superintendent Arnold Goetz, also Ray Marsh, George Nutbean, Keith Jefferson and Max Horne. Representing the Royal Life Society were Mr Stephens and Secretary Ernie Pleydell.

The Royal Life representatives declared they were "quite happy to pass over the lease[2] without any ties or qualifications if St Kilda Shore Committee will agree, that is, to cancel their (Royal Life) lease and have a fresh one drawn up for the Surf Life Saving Association". They explained that the rental on the building was two shillings (20 cents) a week, electricity was paid by the St Kilda Council, and that the contents of the building would also be passed over to SLSA-Victorian State Centre, who could have sole occupancy since the non-life saving clubs currently using the building could be given notice to quit at any time. They would like a decision as soon as possible, they added, since the West St Kilda Club president was deferring the annual general meeting to wind up the club, pending the surf association's decision. To emphasise the point that this was a total gift, the hand written minutes of this meeting recorded: "We stipulated that we would definitely not be a party to any joint ownership". The meeting then resolved: "that we advise RLSS that we desire to take over the lease of the RLSS West St Kilda clubhouse subject to an architect's satisfactory report and for approval by State Centre and the Royal Life Saving Society. The next move is that Mr Pleydell (RLSS) is to arrange a deputation of two members each from SLSA-Victoria and RLSS to meet the St Kilda Shore Committee and to discuss the arrangements prior to any formal application, and we (SLSA) to immediately contact an architect and ascertain the cost to re-instate the clubhouse to our requirements or the cost of demolishing the existing clubhouse and building a new one".

The first State Centre meeting in the new year (17 January 1962) accepted the report of the meeting with Royal Life officials but decided against immediately agreeing to take over the building from Royal Life. As State Centre Secretary Bruce Bowman explained to Royal Life Secretary Ernie Pleydell who rang the following day "to enquire whether State Centre had accepted the building", members wanted to obtain estimates from three architectural firms on the costs of either renovating or demolishing and starting afresh before committing themselves.

In March 1962 the architectural firm of Best Overend was contracted by State Centre. Members were impressed by the architect's verbal report after inspecting the West St Kilda clubhouse that it was a substantial structure and for a sensible outlay of £2—3,000 on remodelling, the Association would have a building of 25 squares worth around £7,500 ($15,000). Agreement was then reached about the main features State Centre officials wanted their new headquarters to have, namely a large hall to seat up to 150 people, a boat shed to accommodate 10 boats, offices and small meeting rooms, separate male and female toilet and shower facilities plus a kitchen. At the April 1962 meeting, State Centre formally agreed to Royal Life's offer to take over the West St Kilda clubhouse, however the final deal was subject to the approval of the St Kilda Shore Committee. State Secretary Bruce Bowman reported that he had been in contact with Mr L. Pollock, Chairman of the St Kilda Shore Committee and it appeared there were only two matters outstanding before this approval was granted. They had both agreed that extra land needed (46' X 30' to the rear for boat purposes) to be added to the original lease to take in the renovations to the former West St Kilda club. After a phone call to the Law Secretary of the Department of Lands, Mr Pollock stated that this would be granted upon receipt of a formal letter, which the Shore Committee had already sent. The other matter was overcoming any problems in connecting any ground floor facilities to the main sewerage line which was about 200 feet away from the building.

When this question was resolved by the architects, in conjunction with the Board of Works, formal approval from the St Kilda Foreshore Committee was finally granted on 25 September 1962. Town planning permission was granted the following month, which together with the other building permits from Council and other authorities, cleared the path for work to commence.

In the meantime and following approval of the plans drawn up by architects Best Overend[3], which by now was expected to cost around £7,000 ($14,000), almost double the original estimate, the development was put to tender. Ten companies tendered for the work. During an inspection of the building by one of the tenderers, the foundations were opened up in order to judge the amount of work to be done and it was discovered that "the foundations were non-existent and that reinforced concrete beams were needed". This was made known to all the tenderers. When all the quotes came in the costs were seen to blow out again, with quotations ranging between almost £11,000 and £15,000. The lowest tender was accepted on 28 September 1962, with Abbotsford Joinery's bid of £10,754. However the executive was comfortable with that decision since this company had only recently finished alterations on the prestigious South Yarra Tennis Club building. Work on the building commenced in October following receipt of all the relevant building permits.

Funds for the renovations came from various sources. A small amount had been earmarked over the years: "The eventual need for this building was seen by State Centre officers years ago and funds to provide the nucleus of the cost have been set aside year by year. This will still be insufficient and the balance will be obtained by way of a loan," wrote Jack Williams on behalf of the Building Committee in December 1962. Early in 1963, as the renovations reached completion, the Victorian State Government granted State Centre £3,500 for this purpose, in addition to its annual grant of £6,000 which was divided up among the clubs for equipment. The balance of the costs—which eventually reached £13,000 ($26,000)— was raised through a loan, an overdraft facility, from the Bank of New South Wales (later to be renamed Westpac). A generous donation of £100 had been made seven years earlier by Torquay club member Syd Baker to go towards the purchase of furniture for the then dreamed-of headquarters. Syd Baker died before the new State Centre building was started, but in his honour the President's chair was named after him. Ray Marsh from Anglesea Club built the executive table and another member of the executive (state secretary Bruce Bowman) donated over $300 of furnishings for the Committee Room. Donations were also received from clubs to help furnish the centre.

With the building works completed in April, the new State Centre headquarters were officially opened on Saturday, 4 May 1963, by the Minister for Local Government Murray Porter, representing the State Premier, Hon. Henry Bolte. Distinguished guests who addressed the opening were National Secretary Ken Watson, National Superintendent Bob Brydon, Royal Life Society State Secretary Ernie Pleydell and C. Pollock of the St Kilda Shore Committee.

Also in attendance were many of the original founders of State Centre: Allan Kennedy, Joe Henke, Milton Roberts, Jim Wall, Roy Boyce and others, including Denis Conlin from the South Australian State Centre and Les Philips from the Victorian Amateur Swimming Association whose organisation had been most supportive of the surf life saving movement in Victoria over the years. It was a proud moment in particular for State Centre President Sprint Walker and his wife Norma who in just 16 years had seen the fledgeling one-club State Centre born at Torquay become a 16 club state-wide organisation with its own purpose built and prestigious headquarters. "Real success is a rare feat in this modern age," declared VicSurfer shortly after the opening, "and the men (and women) who contributed to this building ...our building, could well have employed the saying 'Success is the measure of a person's will'"[4].

Two small features were noted that members were especially proud to point out on the day: a native garden around the building which would be maintained by the St Kilda Council, and a spare room "until the movement needs a full-time Secretary". Already there was a view to further develop the running of the Association.

Another new surf headquarters was opened later that year. Head Office's new administrative headquarters, 'Surf House' at 62 Buckingham Street, Sydney, was opened by the recently knighted Prime Minister Sir Robert Menzies, on 9 November 1963.

Leadership changes

Changes and additions to the structure of State Centre were made as the Victorian Association grew. By the late 1960s it had to cope with the administrative, training and competition requirements of almost 20 clubs from one end of the state to the other.

An early consideration was given to dividing the state into districts, primarily to provide local examiners but with a view that these districts might develop later into autonomous branches with their own administration and competitions as had happened in New South Wales and Queensland. In those states with large numbers of clubs the State Centres comprised representatives of branches to which the individual clubs were represented. With only a few clubs forming the Victorian State Centre in the formation years of the late 1940s and early 1950s, albeit from Warrnambool at one end to the central area of the clubs along the Great Ocean Road and then to Lakes Entrance in the east, a regional or branch structure was not feasible. However the first steps were taken in relation to forming districts within the Board of Examiners in order to localise examinations.

The first State Superintendent, at the time of the State Centre's formation with only two clubs in 1947, was Allan Kennedy. With three more clubs forming in the following season 1948/49 due to his prodigious effort in travelling the state to put those first Bronze squads through their training, a Deputy Superintendent was appointed— Phil Bennett (Torquay)— which then enabled the executive to establish the first Board of Examiners as provided for under the constitution. During the next season, 1948/49, when Allan Kennedy returned to Queensland, Phil Bennett became State Superintendent and retiring State Secretary Jim Wall became his Deputy Superintendent, the first District Supervisor's position was created, called Western District, with Doug Kemp of Warrnambool taking on the job. At the same time the position of 'Honorary Secretary of the Board of Examiners' was also established and was filled by Harry Pittard (Torquay) in order to handle the increasing administrative demands on the examiners. This team remained stable over the next six seasons when an additional district— Bellarine— was formed in 1953/54 with Jack Meehan (Point Lonsdale) as District Supervisor.

In the 1955/56 season Jack Hopper (Portsea) replaced Jim Wall as Deputy Superintendent and two additional District Supervisors were appointed (to make four): Gordon Dann (Torquay), Alan Drydle (Pt Lonsdale), Alan Forster (Pt Leo) and Doug Kemp (Warrnambool). However in the 1956/57 season which saw a large number of clubs forming in time for the 1956 Olympic Carnivals, there was a 'changing of the guard' and a further division of districts. Founding member Phil Bennett resigned as State Superintendent and was replaced by Jack Hopper, with Alan Drydle becoming Deputy Superintendent. New districts and their Supervisors were: Eastern District Supervisor Dick Ellis (Pt Leo); Bellarine District Supervisor Frank Innes (Torquay); Otway District Supervisor Don Stewart (Lorne); Western District Supervisor Jack Engel (Warrnambool). At the same time a new Assistant State Secretary's position was created and filled by Bruce Bowman (Ocean Grove) to assist hard working State Secretary Jack Williams. The following season Bruce Bowman took over as State Secretary when Jack Williams resigned the position.

During that same season, 1957/58, Jack Meehan (Pt Lonsdale) replaced Alan Drydle as Deputy Superintendent and three personnel changes were made at district level: Alan Forster taking over as Supervisor for the Eastern District, Ken Allan (Pt Lonsdale) for the Bellarine District and Stan Stevens (Warrnambool) for the Western District. The highlight of that season was the first Annual Instructional School held at Lorne to meet the needs of training examiners for the ever increasing call on their services. By this season the number of members of the Board of Examiners had increased to 59 (30 active, 14 probationary and 15 retired) with a work load "that had grown enormously", as detailed in their report for that year:

- 2 members for Australian Championships
- 31 members for the State Championships
- 35 members involved in 12 Interstate Carnivals
- 26 members in 24 examinations.

Two years later (59/60 season) the number on the Board of Examiners had leapt to 82 and, with an upsurge in new clubs forming or about to form throughout the state, it was evident to most people at State Centre and in the clubs that a new and enlarged organisational structure was badly needed. Running a state-wide organisation on the same basis as when it was founded 13 years earlier, namely a monthly meeting (State Council) of club delegates with all the extra work resting solely on the shoulders of the small executive group of President, Secretary, Treasurer and Superintendent, was proving not only exhausting and time-consuming for the small hard working band of volunteers who had to fit in these duties around their full-time occupations but also provided little time to consider the policies needed to guide the Association into the future. Consequently this desire to 'spread the load' and ease the burden provided State Centre with an opportunity to review what was needed and formalise any proposed changes by proposing a new constitution. The constitution adopted during the formation meeting in 1947 was merely a hastily changed version of a Head Centre constitution to suit the occasion and was intended to be tidied up later. Now, in 1960, was the first chance to do so.

Major changes included electing the positions of President, Secretary, Superintendent and Secretary to the Board of Examiners for three year terms instead of electing them annually, and also restricting the eligibility of candidates for these positions to "persons who are permanent residents of the Melbourne metropolitan area (30 mile radius of the GPO)". This latter restriction was not well received by members who lived in the coastal towns, however they soon came to realise the necessity of the ruling and the importance of having the executive meet at short notice when required. The number of Vice-Presidents was restricted to 12, altering the previous arrangement where each club President was automatically a vice-president of State Centre. State Council meetings were also restricted to two delegates from each club plus the District Supervisors as well as the State Centre executive officers. The number of standing sub-committees was expanded from two (Meritorious Awards and Judiciary) to seven, adding Constitution, Finance, Gear Improvement, Suggestions, Purchase and Contracts and Building. The power to appoint other sub-committees was included and progressively more were added to the list: Resuscitation and Instruction, Appeals, Gear Inspection, House, Public Relations, Selection, Trophy, Carnival Venue, Wishart Medal, Life Membership, Boat Advisory. (A 1965 rules change also restricted the numbers on each committee, anywhere between three to nine members depending on the committee.)

Perhaps the most important decision taken in drawing up the new constitution in 1961 was not to split the state into branches but to retain a central administration. Although the opening paragraphs in the Membership section mention that branches or clubs are able to affiliate, nearly all references to a branch structure in the former constitution were eliminated from the new constitution, as is clear from the drafts and from the propositions put to the vote. Undoubtedly this was the outcome of the Secretary's Conference held in October 1960 but also reflected the view that the Victorian situation was different to other states and needed a tight central guiding hand. According to former State Secretary Bruce Bowman, "Everyone agreed that branches would have been too small and would have consumed considerable time in administration".

What was needed at this time was to expand the number of districts within the Board of Examiners to cope with the work and encourage all new clubs and members to gain experiences and rewards as part of a large organisation. The two new districts of Gippsland and Flinders were added in 1961, so that for the 1960/61 season the composition of the Board of Examiners comprised more new faces than old: Arnold Goetz (Torquay) who had been elected Deputy Superintendent in 1958/59 became the new State Superintendent, and the new District Supervisors were: Hec Crooks (Seaspray) in Gippsland; Dick Ellis (Pt Leo) in Flinders; Harry Windmill (Pt Lonsdale) in Otway; Clinton Shiells (Torquay) in Bass; Ray Carey (Torquay) in Bellarine; Barry Hill (Warrnambool) in the Western District. The position of State Assistant Secretary was also revived in 1960/61, with Neil Mann (Torquay) filling the position. State Centre's foresight in restructuring activities in this way undoubtedly contributed to the efficient servicing of those activities in the years ahead.

In the 1961/62 season the only changes in personnel were Peter Troy (Torquay) replacing Neil Mann (Torquay) as State Assistant Secretary and three changes to the District Supervisors' positions: Tony Lester (Lorne) replacing Harry Windmill for Otway District, with Harry Windmill then becoming Supervisor for Bellarine District; and Brian Shortall (Seaspray) replacing Hec Crooks of the same club at Gippsland. Dick Ellis took over as Secretary of the Board of Examiners from long serving Harry Pittard. This was also the first season of the State Centre's journal 'VicSurfer' which was produced by an editorial committee under the leadership of Tony White of Anglesea Surf Life Saving Club.

Few changes to this team occurred in the following two seasons: Donald Roberts (Pt Leo) succeeded Peter Troy (Torquay) as State Assistant Secretary for the 1962/63 season when a new district — South Barwon — was created with John (Jack) Hayden (Torquay) as District Supervisor. In the 1963/64 season

Harold Stephenson (Warrnambool) replaced Barry Hill (Warrnambool) as Western District Supervisor; Gordon Dann (Torquay) took on Flinders District and Bill Finney (Lakes Entrance) became Gippsland District Supervisor.

However the following year, 1964, saw a change in the all important position of State Secretary when Michael Davenport (Fairhaven) took on the task when Bruce Bowman received a promotion and transfer from the Education Department to Gippsland. Don Roberts (Pt Leo) then became Assistant Secretary to join Michael Davenport for the 1964/65 season. Dick Ellis retired as Secretary to the Board of Examiners and Noel Emselle (Ocean Grove) took over the position. With 25 clubs to organise, a new administrative position of Assistant Secretary for the Board of Examiners was created, with Colin Blunt (Torquay) filling the post.

By the late 1960s some 'generational' changes occurred, particularly in the lead up to the approaching retirement of founding President Sprint Walker. Former State Superintendent Phil Bennett returned to the executive in 1965/66 as Deputy President (a new position created) and in that same season Dave Curtis (Jan Juc) took over as State Assistant Secretary from Don Roberts. State Secretary Michael Davenport retired from the position the following season (1966/67) and Colin Blunt took on the task, with Eddie Kidd (Pt Leo) becoming Assistant Secretary. Another returnee in that same season was former State Secretary Bruce Bowman who joined the Board of Examiners as the new Supervisor for Gippsland District.[6] In the 1967/68 season, when Nippers were introduced to the movement, Geoff Hewart (Pt Leo) became the Bass District Supervisor, and in South Barwon district Peter Maishman (Pt Lonsdale) took over from John (Jack) Hayden.

The next season— 1968/1969 —George Nutbean (Fairhaven) was elected Deputy President and a new position of 'Chairman' was created which Alan Forster filled in order to chair the meetings for President Sprint Walker who had developed Parkinson's Disease but who was still actively involved in the organisation. In turn, members desired that Sprint should remain at the helm as long as he desired. The only other change that season involved Eddie Kidd relinquishing the position of State Assistant Secretary to Phil McGibbon (Bancoora).

In 1970 'Sprint' Walker stepped down as President of the Association with which he had been involved so enthusiastically for the previous 23 years, and which he had nurtured to the stage where it had become a major service and sporting organisation in the state. George Nutbean (Fairhaven) was then elected President to take the Association into the 1970s.

The Treasurer's position assumed greater responsibilities and duties over the years since the establishment of State Centre in 1947. Founding Treasurer Roy Parker (Torquay) resigned due to ill health after the first two seasons and was succeeded by Milton Roberts (Torquay) from the 1949/50 to the 1953/54 seasons. Roy Boyce (Portsea) then became Treasurer for the next two seasons, 1954/55 and 1955/56. Max Horne (Pt Lonsdale) succeeded him for a long tenure to the 1966/67 season. Don Heathcote (Lorne) then took on the task from 1967/68 to 1974/75.

Solicitor E.K.O'Donnell had a long association with State Centre as the Honorary Solicitor, from the initial 1946/47 season to 1973. The position of Medical Officer had likewise been held over long tenures: Dr Thomas King from the founding 1946/47 season to 1958/59, followed by the Crankshaw family: Dr Tom Crankshaw to the 1964/65 season when he was joined by his son, David Crankshaw, who then began a long tour of duty from 1965/66 to 1972/73.

The Registrar of a State Centre has the responsibility of keeping a register of all membership records including the whole range of awards from Bronze Medallion through to events winners in carnivals and certification of instructors. This position was not filled until State Centre's second season, 1947/48, when Milton Roberts (Torquay) took on the position. When Roberts became State Treasurer in the 1950/51 season, Harry Pittard (Torquay) took over up to the 1956/57 season when he handed over the books to Graham Beck (Torquay). Two seasons later, Neil Whitaker (Pt Lonsdale) became Registrar in 1958/59. He was followed the next season, 1959/60, by Jim Gallagher (Lorne) who also held it for one season only. Arthur Williamson (Ocean Grove) took on the job in the 1960/61 for what was the start of a long tenure in this important position, until the 1975/76 season.

Ralph Dean (Torquay) was State Centre's first Public Relations officer. His untiring efforts 'spread the word' through the films he took at carnivals and showed to any group he could find. The press releases he wrote and sent out together with his photos played a significant role in capturing the imagination of Victorians and converting them, as it were, to the hitherto unknown surf culture. Ralph Dean was succeeded in the 1954/55 season by Ken Allen (Pt Lonsdale, who in turn handed over the position to Graeme Patrick (Torquay) the following season (1955/56) in which Patrick also become the main organiser for the 'Olympic' and first International Championships at Torquay. Geoff Kinsey (Pt Leo) succeeded Graham Patrick in 1960/61 for two seasons, followed by Michael Rylah (Anglesea) in 1962/63 who held the position for two seasons also. In the 1964/65 season, John Anderson (Anglesea) and Lindsay Fox (Jan Juc) shared the position, after which Lindsay Fox began a three season tenure as Public Relations officer until the 1967/68 season when Kevin Roderick (Fairhaven) took on the position.

Significant Events 1957 to 1970

A number of significant milestones in the development of State Centre, in addition to the above account of its development up to 1970, are listed briefly as follows.

1957/58: First Annual School of Instruction conducted by the Board of Examiners.

1958/59: First full television coverage of a carnival, at the Victorian Championships held at Anglesea on 28 February 1959, by ABV 2. Channel 2 also televised the State Championships the following year, 1960 (Anglesea, on 27 February).

1959/60: The Prime Minister, Hon. Robert Menzies, attended State Centre's Annual Dinner in 1959 (he had also attended the Annual Dinner in 1953).

The first motorised surf boat was trialled by Point Leo SLSC at Capri Beach in bad surf conditions but "outclassed a conventional surf boat in rough seas" concluded the report. It was built by Nichols and Burrows Pty Ltd who donated it as a prize which was won by Lorne SLSC.

1960/61: First Secretary's Conference held on 21 October 1961.

This season saw the introduction of the Expired Air Resuscitation method. State Centre purchased 20 Ambu-Manikins and gave one to each club, urging them to train all active members in their use. In conjunction with this program, and also to lessen public fears about the possibility of contracting tuberculosis from life savers, State Centre declared that all active members must submit themselves to a chest X-ray, in conjunction with the public Chest X-Ray Campaign then being promoted. All prospective active members were to have a chest X-ray before being admitted to club membership.

1961/62: First surf life saving float in the Moomba Parade.

This season saw a growing list of trophy donors, among them BP, Sportsgirl, Caltex, Age Newspaper, Mobil.

1962/63: Point Leo featured in State Centre's Moomba float.

State Centre also participated in the MCG Centenary celebration by arranging an impressive March Past during the first test match.

There were now 22 clubs affiliated to State Centre, of which three featured in the top 10 clubs in Australian for membership, with Torquay No I, Anglesea No 8 and Lorne No 10.

State Centre's journal 'VicSurfer' was launched in 1962, with Tony White, Anglesea, as editor.

State Centre encouraged local equipment manufacturers, for example the 'Letho' reel built by Greg Letho, which was £150 cheaper than the reels which clubs were purchasing from interstate. Three boats built by Mouldcraft "were better constructed and more robust than those of interstate builders", noted in VicSurfer.

1963/64: State Centre entered a display at the Boat Show for the first time.

In place of a float in the Moomba Parade, the Association's activities were represented in a March Past by members from Point Leo, Ocean Grove and Fairhaven.

Following the opening of State Centre Headquarters, a full-time office worker was employed for the first time (Mrs Williams). Bert Edwards, who was caretaker for the former West St Kilda Life Saving Club building (he lived opposite) was retained as caretaker for the State Centre building.

1964/65: The March Past was repeated in the Moomba Parade but with a greatly expanded troupe from Anglesea, Fairhaven, Cape Paterson, Jan Juc, Ocean Grove and Point Leo.

Anglesea reached No 1 position as the club with the largest active membership in Australia: 200 active, 204 'other', a total of 404.

The annual grant from the Victorian Government increased greatly, from £6 000 to £8 000, plus for the first time a grant of £5 000 ($10,000) to be spent specifically on upgrading club houses around the state.

State Centre's public relations activities "reach new heights!", recorded VicSurfer, due to the great work by Public Relations Officers Lindsay Fox (Jan Juc) and John Anderson (Anglesea) who shared the position and the work load that year.

A surfing segment was started on the Channel O (later 10) Sport Show, in which Neal Inglis (Torquay) and Eddie Kidd (Point Leo) featured as commentators.

1965/66: Victorian Government grant to club houses raised from £5 000 to £15 000.

State Centre Headquarters was renamed 'A.W.Walker House' in honour of President 'Sprint' Walker. Heating also arrived in the building, thanks to Public Relations Officer Lindsay Fox who obtained and installed two oil heaters.

1966/67: President 'Sprint' Walker received OBE in recognition of his services to the surf life saving movement.

Torquay SLSC returned to No 1 position as the largest club in Australia with 238 active members (but Anglesea still tops total membership list).

Victorian State Centre was host to a visit by the American Lifeguard team.

The number of sponsors increased greatly to include radio stations 3KZ, 3DB and 3AK, Renault Australia who donated the first Iron Man trophies and Holeproof for donating the clothing for the State Team. State Secretary Colin Blunt praised the activities of Public Relations Officer Lindsay Fox "...whose ability to arrange donations to State Centre never ceases to amaze me", Colin wrote in the Annual Report.

State Centre became an Incorporated Body under the Companies Act in preparation for legislation before the Victorian Parliament aimed at enabling State Centre to hold direct leases of clubs on Crown land. The Act enabled clubs to have more secure tenure and greater freedom over the use of their club houses.

1967/68: There was a fall in active membership numbers for the first time.

State Centre's contribution to the Moomba festivities was to organise a boat race on the Yarra River, which was won by Woolamai Beach SLSC.

Nippers were introduced for the first time at a State Carnival at Ocean Grove.

The first jet surf boat was introduced into the state movement when Barwon Heads/13th Beach accepted one, kindly donated by a local committee.

After another successful year as Public Relations Officer, during which time more sponsors contributed to State Centre and club activities such as CUB, G.J.Coles, Monsanto, International Harvester, and Volkswagen who began sponsoring the Iron Man trophies. Lindsay Fox retired from the position to concentrate on his own business activities. Although the Melbourne press appeared to be losing interest in surf club competition, this was compensated by a growing interest from the radio stations.

1969/70: President 'Sprint' Walker retired after 24 years service.

Saturday competitions started this season.

Woolamai Beach again won the Moomba Boat Race on the Yarra River, with Point Lonsdale winning the junior crew section.

Media coverage of competition began to fall off, especially among the Melbourne newspapers but it was still strong at local level.

There was a significant drop in the number of awards during this season: 220 Bronze Medallions compared to 352 the previous season (1968/69). Overall only 391 awards were made, compared to 498 the previous year.

Land (Surf Lifesaving) Act, 1967

By the early 1960s a number of the older surf life saving clubs, particularly those accessible from the Geelong area, wanted to expand their club houses or to build more solid structures to replace the hastily put together shacks or sheds when the clubs started.

Problems soon arose with the foreshore committees who were apprehensive that expanded facilities might bring 'undesirable practices' in their wake, referring in particular to club proposals to incorporate sleeping quarters in the buildings and to make a larger open area in order to hold social functions. There was a growing concern among clubs that their proposals might be refused by local regulators. In turn, these worries created a feeling among club members that they had little security of tenure over the site of a club house and were dependent on the attitude of individual councils or foreshore committees. What might be granted in one beach location might not be granted on another beach under a different governing body.

Discussions around these issues led to State Centre members approaching the State Government in 1966 for an equitable solution. When a similar situation arose in New South Wales, the government there decided to vest the control of all individual club leases into the hands of the NSW State Centre, thereby by-passing the local authorities. The Victorian Government agreed to introduce legislation to achieve the same effect in Victoria, however State Centre would need to become an incorporated body under the Companies Act in order to be a legally constituted body in which to vest such powers. State Centre's honorary solicitor, Keith O'Donnell, undertook that task early the following year.

The Land (Surf Life Saving) Bill was introduced into Parliament on 21 February 1967. In presenting the Bill, Mr Balfour, Minister of Lands, stated that under the existing Land Act, no land reserved (such as club houses on foreshores) may be sold or leased or have a licence granted. Therefore in order to protect the Government's interests in the grants it made to the State Centre (specifically those grants towards club houses) and in the interests of public safety, the State Centre should be encouraged to preserve and maintain club houses by granting a secure form of tenure over them to State Centre. The Bill proposed that all leases be granted to State Centre, making it responsible to the Department of Crown Lands and Survey for compliance with the Act. State Centre would then have to enter into individual agreements with its affiliated clubs, giving it proper legal control over the clubs for the management and control of each building and for compliance with the lease. The conditions of such leases would include:

- restriction to surf club activities, including social activities and including its use as a residential quarters for patrol members;
- the area involved in each case (except one) to be no more than a quarter of an acre and to cover the club building only. Clubs are not permitted to fence in additional areas of the foreshore but shall not be denied the use of extra land if this is requested for essential patrol duties;
- the lease to be for 21 years;
- State Centre to pay $10 per annum administration fee to the Department;
- an unspecified amount to be paid for or by each club to the respective committee of such foreshores or reserves (or this may be waived by the committees concerned).

The Bill was supported by all parties. During the debate on the Bill, the opposition Labor Party proposed that it might be more generous and provide for a 99 year lease and that the token administration fee could be waived. Some Country Party members were concerned about the Surf Life Saving Association receiving benefits that other groups, such as the Royal Life Saving clubs, boat clubs and motor yacht clubs especially in inland waters did not enjoy.

In reply, the government speakers stated that it did not intend to change the conditions stated in the Bill. As for the concerns about other organisations, proposed studies into Port Phillip Bay may rectify the position in regard to the Royal Life Saving clubs, and the government would respond to other organisations on request. The member for Geelong, Mark Birrell, also assured people that this Bill would not open the floodgates of "undesirable behaviour", as some had expressed. "The life saving community is, in general, a body of sensible people," he said. "The life saving club at Ocean Grove, with which I am concerned, is very quick to react to any unexemplary behaviour which occurs. It has cleaned out the 'bunnies' very quickly."[7]

The Bill was enacted on 3 March 1967. Later that year, State Centre became the registered company of "The Surf Life Saving Association of Australia, Victorian State Centre". A copy of the certificate was received by the Crown Lands and Survey Department on 6 September 1967.

While State Centre was involved in arranging these leases with individual clubs, it also sought to extend its own area around its headquarters building for boat parking.

In October 1967 State Centre wrote to the St Kilda Shore Committee for "Permissive Occupancy of additional land 48 feet seaward and west to Royal Melbourne Yacht Squadron and a drive across the footpath". This was agreed to and a separate lease on this additional land was signed on 12 December 1968.

Membership had declined from a high of 57 in the 1959/60 season to just 11 in the 1963/64 season, due mainly to most of the club's members — who were drawn from the RAAF base in Sale — being transferred. There was also an investigation into the club in the 1960/61 season by a State Centre official (of which Bowman was State Secretary at the time) which 'got them to turn over a new leaf' in regard to patrol duty and administration. Bruce Bowman took on the task as Club Captain for the 1964/65 season, helped repair the clubrooms, and within a year there were 140 members in the club, including 50 active members for the 1965/66 season.*

Mac Greening and Andy Wright

First Victorian winners at the Australian Interstate Championships 1959

Shortly before Easter 1959 the Victorian State Team left to compete in the Australian Champion-ships at Mooloolaba on, what is now the Sunshine Coast in Queensland.

Mac Greening and Andy Wright

In those days a trip to the Australian Championships was a real adventure as well as competition at the highest level of surf life saving. The Victorian interstate team, amongst others, consisted of the veteran Peter Glenn, who at 37 was the State Belt Champion, Bill Knott from Anglesea, Neal Inglis and Dick Knight from Torquay, John (Fizzle) Forsyth from Point Leo and 16 year old juniors Mac Greening from Lorne and Andy Wright from Portsea. The Manager was Bruce Bowman, who at that time was from Ocean Grove.

The team left from Spencer Street Station by train for Sydney, the trip included a change of trains in Albury because of the different railway gauges in NSW and Victoria, and arrived at Central Station at 8.00 a.m. The next day was spent touring the Sydney surfing beaches. For most members it was their first visit to Sydney and to visit the beaches with the magical names of Bondi, Manly, Curl Curl, Tamarrama and Maroubra, where a huge surf was running, was an unforgettable experience.

That evening the team was back on the train for the overnight trip to Brisbane, then by car to the Sunshine Coast. The Bruce Highway heading north from Brisbane was then a single lane road and the road from the highway to Mooloolaba was unpaved. A tropical downpour had turned the road into slippery wet red mud and local tractors were pressed into service to tow the cars through the swollen creeks which flowed across the road without any bridges.

Mooloolaba itself was a small holiday hamlet. A row of shops lined the beach front, there was a picture theatre with lay back canvas hammock type seats and a number of old style guest houses. The State Team stayed in one of these guest houses at Maroochydore and was accommodated in bunk room bungalows at the rear of the main accommodation.

For several days prior to the Championships a beautiful even surf was running with waves up to two metres rolling in straight and even to the beach. In 1959 the Interstate Competition and several non championship events were held on Easter Saturday and the Australian Championship carnival was held on Easter Sunday. It was a far cry from the almost week long series which is today's Australian Championship Carnival.

The beautiful even surf continued into the Easter weekend and on Saturday the State Team contested the Interstate competition against the other States. Mac Greening, the State Junior Surf Race Champion and Andy Wright the Junior Belt Champion contested the Junior Brace Teams race. The field set out for the buoys with the Maroubra Junior Barry Rodgers, who went on to become a surfing great winning numerous Australian Surf and Belt Championships, leading the field. The Queensland swimmers and the second N.S.W. competitors were close behind, with Mac Greening and Andy Wright settling in mid field close behind the leaders. As the field rounded the buoys the beautiful rolling surf was still running, a wave came up and first Mac Greening and then Andy Wright caught the wave, surfed down the front and held it to the beach as it swept them through the field of swimmers. As they ran out of the water to the finishing line both Mac. and Andy were vying for the lead. Crossing the line Barry Rodgers was first, Andy Wright was second and Mac. Greening was third. The second NSW swimmer came in in 6th or 7th place and the Interstate Junior Brace Teams had been won by Victoria.

It was the first time Victorians had ever won anything at the interstate competition at the Australian Championships. The excitement and the confidence gained from this win was a great boost, creating the desire of other Victorian Clubs and individuals to go for gold!

The first Australian Individual Event Championship Title won by a Victorian club did not come until 1965 with the Pt. Lonsdale Boat Crew, another seven years later.

Victoria's Success at the 1966 Nationals

It was our twentieth year of association and what better way to celebrate than to be State champions at the Annual contest, held that year at Coolangatta.

This was the first occasion that Victoria had won outright the keenly sought trophy.

With 25 affiliated Clubs in the State and a total active membership of 1627, selection of the optimum team is often difficult. The State titles being conducted at Lakes Entrance presented to many competitors different surf and beach conditions which challenged their performances.

The selected team was:

Geoff James (Pt. Leo) Captain
Surf teams and R&R
Peter Davies (Pt. Leo), Beach sprint and relay
Peter Francis (Pt. Leo), Junior belt and brace
Richard Greenough (Torquay)
Junior belt, 1st line and brace
Peter Doak (Torquay), R&R and surf teams
Tony Strahan (Torquay)
R&R and surf teams and beach relay
Bruce Morgan (Torquay)
R&R and Senior belt
Rob Elmore (Lorne), R&R and surf teams
Bruce Owen (Warrnambool), Surf ski
George Day (Warrnambool), Surf board
Keith Hodgson (Pt. Lonsdale), Surf boat
Greg Davies (Pt. Lonsdale), Surf boat
Michael Foley (Pt. Lonsdale), Surf boat
Gary Holdsworth (Pt. Lonsdale),Surf boat
John Charles (Pt. Londsale) Surf boat & beach relay

The R&R coach was Eddie Kidd and overall team manager was Bruce Tayler.

Accommodation was arranged at a private guest house opposite the Greenmount end of the beach which rendered a perfect location for uninterrupted training at the beach, 100 metres away.

The competition day was extremely hot so some surreptitious hunting and borrowing of a length of hessian permitted the manufacture of a shade awning which was an asset to the team's fitness.

Mention must be made of the team's achievements. The Point Lonsdale boat crew performed exceptionally to win their race easily. Peter Francis convincingly won the Junior belt race. George Day out-paddled the field and won the surf board race. Peter Doak was victorious in the Open surf race leading home the Surf team and Bruce Owen came second in the Ski race, and in March Past, R&R events the team made third place. The overall count rendered a win of 57 points, ahead of Queensland's 55 points.

Although it is often asserted that the Interstate title is only a 'curtain raiser' for the Australians the next day, our competitors did not 'save' themselves but gave their extreme efforts to achieve the win.

As a final gesture of appreciation, the team stripped their Manager, Bruce Tayler and threw him into the surf— to the cheers of the crowd!

On their return to Melbourne, the team was met on the tarmac by Alan Forster and a large contingent of State Centre and Board of Examiner members. A trio was then rushed to appear live on a current television transmission.

Junior Activities (Nippers) in Victoria

By Bruce Edmonds

Nippers is the common term relating to the involvement of children in surf lifesaving. Whilst 'Junior Association', then 'Junior Activities' have been used as formal titles, Nippers has always been the informal title nationwide.

Junior Activities started in New South Wales during the early 1960s when parents used their beach environment background to provide activities for their children. These groups, separate to local surf clubs, were formed and run under an autonomous Board of Control with their own club rooms, constitutions and funding. This structure led to some difficulties that Victoria was able to avoid. All other states developed various junior structures and programs during this decade leading to the formation of the National Junior Surf Lifesaving Association in 1973. A number of Victorian clubs had junior programs operating successfully at this time, however it was not until January 1981 that Victoria affiliated with the National Junior Association.

During the 1950s and early 1960s a few Victorian clubs conducted 'Learn to Swim' campaigns which were promoted by the Herald newspaper[1] and held over the summer holiday period. Portsea Surf Life Saving Club, however, holds the distinction of being the first Victorian club to instruct ".. junior members (boys only) between the ages of 10 and 14 years in all aspects of Surf Life Saving", according to a notice sent to parents and junior members in 1952. The approach of the 'Learn to Swim' programs was informal and dependent on suitable venues and conditions and the availability of volunteer instructors. No other involvement of children was evident at this time.

During 1965 the Point Lonsdale Surf Life Saving Club and in particular John Turner, Harry Windmill and several others, initiated a surf-oriented junior program that marked the beginning of junior activities. Torquay followed in 1966 after consulting with Point Lonsdale. Over the next two years Anglesea, Portsea and Woolamai clubs established junior programs. Other clubs soon followed. An approach was then made to the Victorian State Centre to have a fledgling Junior Association recognised. State Centre declined on the grounds of its limited resources, being unable to deal with this diversion to its lifesaving activities. A decade was to pass before a state-based Junior Association would be established.

Clubs continued, mostly independently, to develop their own programs that involved surf skills, fitness, games and lifesaving knowledge generally based on senior award requirements. In line with the all-male senior movement policy at that time, female participation was not enthusiastically encouraged.

However some clubs established girls' nipperette programs which ran parallel to the boys' nipper programs. Other clubs progressively introduced junior programs as the benefits of increased family membership and involvement, and a ready-made recruiting source became evident. Most clubs remained isolated through adopting this independent approach and their nipper activities varied greatly with no common skills or awards implemented.

When a majority of clubs started up nipper sections, State Centre soon recognised the importance of encouraging uniform development in accord with the National Junior Association to which all States, apart from Victoria, were affiliated. Following Victoria's affiliation to the National Junior Association in January, 1981, State Centre executive appointed an interim committee in May to plan strategies for the formation of an official Victorian Junior Association which was to operate as a sub-committee of the Victorian State Council.

Frederica Barnett, Ocean Grove, Secretary Victorian J.A.B. 1981-91.

The interim committee consisted of Fred Westfield (Venus Bay), Bruce Edmonds (Anglesea), Ray Johnson (Ocean Grove), Frederica Barnett (Ocean Grove) and John Tremewan (Venus Bay). After extensive planning the inaugural General Meeting was held on 17 September 1981. The interim committee members were elected: Fred Westfield, (Chairman), Bruce Edmonds (Superintendent), Ray Johnson (Registrar), Frederica Barnett (Secretary), and John Tremewan (Education Officer).

With Victoria's Junior Association officially under way, a number of seminars were held across the state with Junior Executive members providing information in regard to awards, programs and administration. All clubs, it was hoped, would progressively become involved and affiliate with the State body. Thirteen clubs affiliated in the first year and almost 1,200 awards gained under the national award system. Two zone carnivals were held at Venus Bay and Fisherman's Beach, Torquay in keeping with a low-key approach to competition. Three members of the Junior Executive attended the National Team Championship held in Tasmania in order to gain an understanding of interstate competitions in which Victoria would be represented in future years.

The second season (1982-83) proved to be one of rapid expansion, with 21 clubs affiliated and 1,450 registered nippers involved in club programs. Regular committee meetings were held with all affiliated clubs represented. The emphasis was on sharing of ideas directed at improving club programs and organisation. Competition continued on a controlled basis with the first combined carnival and two zoned carnivals considered sufficient at this time. The financial support provided by Victorian State Centre and Smith's Crisps was invaluable in the development of competition throughout the early years. Victoria selected its first Junior Team to contest the Smith's Crisps National Teams Championship held at North Narrabean in January 1983. Only 11 and 12 year olds were selected following pre-season trials since it was considered that 10 year olds were not ready for interstate competition. The quality of that first team was quite outstanding, with nippers such as Stuart Fox, Brett

SPECIAL NOTICE FOR PARENTS AND JUNIOR MEMBERS

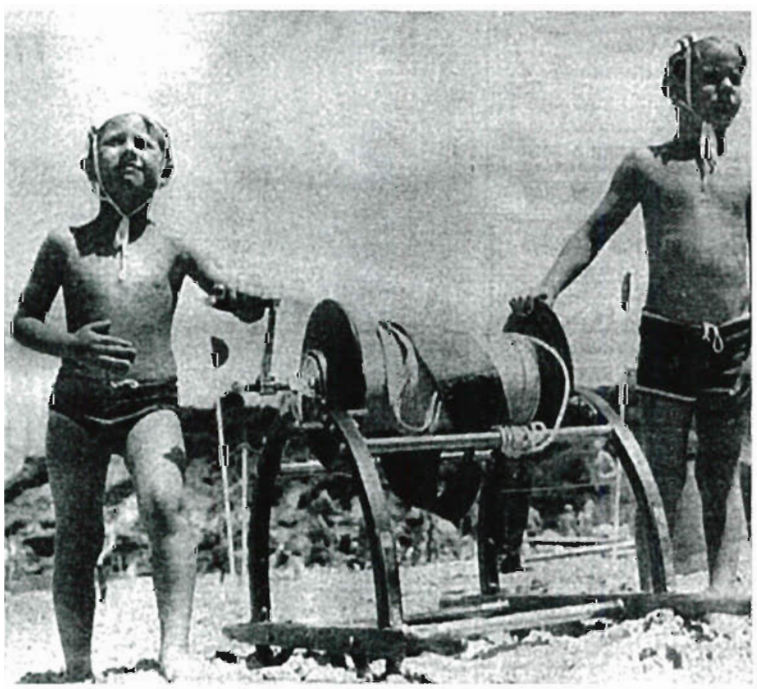

This coming season, fully-qualified instructors will be on hand every Sunday morning and during the Christmas public holidays to instruct Junior Members between the ages of 10 years and 14 years in all aspects of Surf Life Saving.

These Juniors will not be permitted to carry out any of the drill required in the surf, but will be instructed in the Holger-Nielson method of resuscitation, for which there is a certificate given by the Surf Life Saving Association of Australia, and also in all the land drill up to Bronze Medallion standard. This means that should the Juniors pass up to this standard they will then be required to pass only the swimming tests to gain their Surf Bronze Medallions.

The instructors will also demonstrate and teach surfing technique, so that the Juniors may become proficient and capable swimmers.

It is to be hoped that parents will take advantage of this instruction so that their boys will be able to look after themselves in the surf under any conditions.

This notice to all parents of junior members reads of old fashioned phrasing and talks of the Holger-Nielson method of resuscitation. This initiative, common from 1967/68 appeared in the Portsea Surf Life Saving Annual Report 1952/53 Season. This was a first for Victoria. Other states started Nippers much earlier, for example Burleigh Heads, Queensland in 1936.

Tyack, Shane Edmonds, Mark Fraser, Mark Gowans, Andrew Mackintosh and Stuart Morarty continuing on to achieve great success in senior competition.

Throughout the mid-1980s, numbers continued to increase at a steady rate. By 1986, 24 of the 27 clubs had junior programs operating. Judges panels awards were introduced at this time. A total of 1,872 awards were gained during 1985/86 season — the most successful season to date. Total membership showed 1,518 registered nippers between 7-12 years of age: 885 males, 633 females. Another significant milestone was achieved in 1986 when Victoria won the handicap section of the Interstate Teams Championships held at Glenelg, thereby providing a strong indication of progress in a short period of time. The result reflected greatly on the work done by coaches Tony Strahan, Neal Inglis and Les McGrath.

Warrnambool hosted the Smith's Crisps National Team Championship in 1987. Carnival organiser Les McGrath and a hard-working Warrnambool Committee ensured that every aspect of organising responsibility was successfully managed. This was Victoria's first time as a host state and comments were most favourable. Victoria again won the handicap points score. Another milestone was achieved at the Championships held in Manly, New South Wales, in 1988 when Ted Richmond became Victoria's first winner with his success in the twelve year old board race. The following year at Penguin, Tasmania, Victoria achieved a hat trick by again winning the handicap points score at the Team Championship under the coaching of Tony Strahan and Michael Martin.

Further developments during the mid 1980s included the introduction of the 'S' Badge as a compulsory requirement for all competitors involved in water events. Water safety officers also became an official requirement in regard to their number and level of training through annual requalification. A new training manual with a revised award structure was introduced nationally. Victoria continued to select only 11, 12, and 13 year olds in State teams. It is interesting to note that 10 year old events were deleted from National Championships in the late 1980s.

A stable administration during the formative years enabled a continuity of progress. However in 1987 Fred Westfield (Chairman) and Bruce Edmonds (Superintendent) retired and were replaced by Ray Johnson and Tony Strahan. Frederica Barnett continued as Secretary. Colin Anderson, (Education Officer) and Frances Uwland (Registrar) filled other vacancies. Under a new management structure in 1987/88, the chairman (Ray Johnson) became the Director of Junior Activities and held a position on the newly created Board of Directors. The importance of nippers in surf lifesaving operations was now fully recognised.

During the late 1980s, competition activities increased with more carnivals, state championships and the introduction of off-season State-team training squads. Most clubs were by now stocked with nipper-style surfboards, many provided by a local manufacturer, Howard Hughes, which allowed greater development of surf skills.

Further changes to Junior Activities administration occurred in 1989 with vacancies filled by Colin Anderson (Director), Michael Bennett (Education Officer), Barbara Morgan (Registrar) and Bernie Murray (Treasurer). Michael Martin and Howard Hughes took over as coaches of the State team.

By 1991 nipper numbers had risen to 2,000 from 27 clubs. Clubs with numbers in excess of 100 were Ocean Grove (217), Anglesea (206), Point Lonsdale (169), Lorne (162), Torquay (136), Fairhaven (127), Portsea (121) and Point Leo (113). After ten years of wonderful service since nippers were established, Frederica Barnett relinquished her position as secretary and was replaced by Brenton McGee. Leigh Johns (Bancoora) became the state's second individual winner at the Interstate Teams Championship with his victory in the 13 year old beach sprint.

Smith's Crisps continued to provide valued sponsorship to all Australian states' junior activities with specific areas of Victorian involvement being the State Development Team, State Championships, Junior Development Camp and Club Junior Achievement awards. Barbara Morgan replaced Tony Strahan as Junior Superintendent following Tony's five years of excellent service.

A new concept of interstate junior competition occurred in 1992. A Junior Development Program involving interstate teams replaced the previous focus which centred solely on competition. The first program over three days was held at Anglesea.

Instruction covered a wide range of activities and finished with a final day of competition based on team rather than individual events.

Other developments at the time included the introduction of Junior Development Camps, where children from clubs across the State received instruction from senior club personnel. An accreditation course for junior officials was also initiated. A National Surf Education Program was implemented representing the constant improvement to surf lifesaving education directed at the nipper movement.

Mike Lumley succeeded Colin Anderson as Director of Junior Activities in the 1995/96 season. An extension in the competition scene saw the introduction of a 'Kids Construction Iron Nipper Classic' for under 14 male and female competitors, held at selected beaches during the January holiday period. The result is decided on cumulative points over five rounds. Winter competition was another initiative, with events held at the Footscray pool. State Championships are now held over two days and the junior competition calendar now parallels the senior section. Bird's Eye provided the major sponsorship to the Junior Activities section.

By 1996/97 more than 3,000 nippers represented 32 affiliated clubs. Mike Lumley and Barbara Morgan continued as Director and Superintendent respectively. Other office bearers were Bruce McNab (Treasurer), Rick Aitchison (Secretary), Ros McMillan (Registrar) and Bud White (Education Officer).

Over three decades the Victorian nipper movement has made continuous progress without a falter. Numbers have constantly increased and the organisation of the movement, with harmony at both state and club levels, has been commendable. Likewise junior programs have constantly improved in terms of friendly and controlled competition.

This is a remarkable achievement. Many fine lifesavers have gained their grounding at a junior level. The image of surf lifesaving has been greatly enhanced by the nipper program. From a promising start, the visions of the early years are now firmly established. The Victorian Junior Activities Program will continue to make a worthwhile contribution to Victorian Surf Life Saving.

Youth Development

In an attempt to improve the level of competition available to our youth, the J.A.B. and competition board have introduced and conducted several youth carnivals over the past two years.

A youth carnival is a fantastic opportunity for clubs to showcase their juniors and integrate their under 13s into senior ranks for the next season. It is also an opportunity for those 14-and 17-year-olds to have a reality check and compete close to their own age group.

The introduction of youth carnivals has done much, not only for the retention of membership, but for the various age groups to participate with a far more open beach approach.

Since its introduction, retention within these age groups has improved, giving far more confidence as each participant moves into the club's senior ranks.

Vale - Mr Fred Westfield

"It is with deep sadness that we note the passing in 1995 of Mr Fred Westfield, our first Chairman of the Victorian Junior Activities Board. Mr Westfield held this position from 1981 - 1987.

Mr Westfield's strong leadership was an important factor in giving our Victorian juniors a firm stable base from which our ranks have flourished. He got the direction right from the start.

He believed in youngsters in surf lifesaving and was determined to see this section take its vital place in the overall picture of surf life saving.

In stature Mr Westfield was a big man, his voice was big and so was his heart.

His input and no nonsense approach at State and National level for the junior cause earned him respect at these levels.

He put in an enormous amount of time and effort. His leadership encouraged and motivated others.

Our junior movement is tremendously thankful to Mr Westfield for being such a vibrant part of our junior beginning in Victoria. He loved the juniors, their enthusiasm, their potential and camaraderie.

Our thanks to a wonderful man"

The W.A. Wieland Shield

The Wieland Shield perpetual trophy for competition between Victorian Surf Life Saving and an American professional lifeguard team was inaugurated during a visit of the USA team to Australia in 1967.

The trophy itself is oval in shape, made from Australian hardwood and carries the insignia of both SLSV and the USA LA County. The shield was first presented in 1967 by W.A. Wieland after the two days of competition at both Portsea and Ocean Grove beaches.

Then in 1969, State Centre President, George Nutbean during a world trip, met with Los Angeles County Director of Beaches, Mr Dirk Fitzgerald and was subsequently invited to return with a Victorian team to compete in the 1971 International Surf Festival. The offer was quickly accepted and Victoria went about selecting its team. The competition continues to this day.

The idea of a perpetual trophy came from discussions between George Nutbean and the then American Consul General in Victoria, Mr W.A. Wieland. Subsequently, and at Victoria's insistence, the trophy was named the Wieland Shield.

Much of the credit for the early part of establishing the bond and camaraderie that existed between the two bodies in those formulative years, is due to Lindsay Fox who worked very hard alongside George Nutbean covering every angle. Lindsay's role as Public Relations Officer to the Victorian State Centre was always extended to the full, with each trip a resounding success.

Lindsay Fox was followed by Kevin Roderick as Public Relations Officer. Once again we had a man completely dedicated to the cause and the Wieland Shield was very much nurtured with many new friends made along the way.

Much credit is given to both men. In latter years Bruce Owen has looked after and guided the team tours as has George Misson.

Competition for the actual Shield was in the form of a Taplin Relay event held at Redondo Beach during daylight hours which was unusual for Los Angeles where the majority of the competition was held at night under spotlights.

The Relay consisted of two swimmers, two board, two ski and two Dory crew. The inclusion of skis, which was primarily an Australian event and Dory which was primarily an American event, was meant to even itself out.

Whereas, THIS 15-MAN CONTINGENT REPRESENTS THE FINEST OCEAN COMPETITORS FROM 26 LIFESAVING CLUBS IN THE STATE OF VICTORIA, WHICH IS THE SECOND SMALLEST STATE IN AUSTRALIA IN SIZE, HOUSING THE CAPITAL OF THE STATE, MELBOURNE, THE SECOND LARGEST CITY IN AUSTRALIA IN POPULATION; AND

Whereas, THEY HAVE ESTABLISHED AN ENVIABLE REPUTATION BY CAPTURING THREE CHAMPIONSHIPS IN FOUR YEARS, WINNING THE AUSTRALIAN TITLE IN 1970, 1969 AND 1967; AND

Whereas, NOTED FOR THEIR OCEAN SKILLS, THE AUSTRALIANS WILL BATTLE IN STIFF COMPETITION WITH LIFEGUARD TEAMS REPRESENTING LOS ANGELES COUNTY, HUNTINGTON BEACH, LOS ANGELES CITY, LONG BEACH, SANTA MONICA, NEWPORT BEACH, SAN CLEMENTE, SANTA BARBARA AND TWO CALIFORNIA STATE TEAMS IN A SERIES OF EVENTS INCLUDING NATIONAL SURF LIFESAVING ASSOCIATION TITLES, THE INTERNATIONAL SURF FESTIVAL CROWN AND THE TAPLIN MEDLEY RELAY CHAMPIONSHIP;

The expected dominance of US LA County in the Dory US LA County did not eventuate and Victoria shocked the locals at lead up events winning the 'Inter-crew' Title and finishing second in the National 4 x Dory Relay event.

The Wieland Shield Race was close in both the swimming and board legs. Victoria opened up a lead in the ski legs and was able to hold the Americans off in the Dory legs to clinch the Shield. Dory rowing was included in competition in the USA and in Australia through the 1970s and 1980s but was dropped from the competition in 1992. Touring competitors now compete in Dorys for fun but not as part of the official Wieland competition.

The first trip to USA in 1971 comprised competitors, a coach and a manager. Subsequent teams have been reduced in size and also now include educational officers who have contributed a great deal in introducing new ideas and methods to Australian surf lifesaving. The exchange of ideas, research and equipment has been invaluable over the last 30 years.

The reduced competitive size of the team has made selection much harder for the competitors and a very highly prized trip.

From 1990 on, a female competitor has been included along with, on various occasions, female Education Officers.

The Wieland Shield has always been enjoyed by both touring teams. Great friendships have been made. The international flavour of the event is seen as being extremely valuable for the interchange of information and friendships.

Bruce Hilton Bowman
'A distinguished background in life saving'

Bruce Bowman has a distinguished background in life saving.

During his involvement with the Victorian State Centre of Surf Life Saving Victoria, Bruce made quite a significant contribution.

He first became a delegate from his Club to the Victorian State Centre in 1953; was a Vice President from 1955 to 1956 and then State Centre Honorary Secretary starting from 1957.

Bruce was an active member of the Board of Examiners (now the Board of Life Saving) in addition to his Executive role as Honorary Secretary.

During the 1980s, Bruce held the position of Vice President of the Victorian State Centre again making an important contribution to the function of the Council. However his active role as Honorary Secretary was his most productive.

The State Council could not have had a better Secretary. A. W. Walker House had become a reality, he worked closely with Ainslie 'Sprint' Walker and his yellow circulars became famous because of their detail and information.

Bruce became an organising member of the Half Moon Bay and Black Rock clubs 1940, gaining his Surf Bronze in 1950 under the instruction of the late Joe Henke, joining Portsea in 1951, where he quickly took an interest in surf boats.

Leslie Raymond 'Swampy' Marsh
1916 - 1996
One of Anglesea's founding fathers

The Passionate cause of extending Surf Life Saving in Victoria was quickly kindled amongst the fine band of men that gathered at Anglesea after the War.

None more prominent than Ray 'Swampy' Marsh.

Ray and his close mate Eric 'Ekka' Martin, attracted any number of young men around them. Ray and Eric, close mates since they were kids, found their niche at Anglesea, that beautiful sea-side resort on the Great Ocean Road between Torquay and Lorne.

Both were good practical men and fine trade and businessmen, their input being most worthy to firstly the Anglesea Club and then the Victorian State Centre. Eric, like Ray, was a member of the Board of Examiners (BOE), virtually until his passing—his time in surf life saving near fifty years.

But it was Ray Marsh who was a leader. His years in the army and 17 years as President of Anglesea, his more than 20 years as the honorary photographer of Surf Life Saving Victoria, and as a member of the Board of Examiners, just cannot be measured in terms of contribution to surf life saving.

An old movie film taken at Anglesea in 1953 shows 'Swampy' Marsh instructing those very early Bronze Squads in the use of the now defunct Eve Rocker method and, of course, all other aspects of the Bronze Medallion.

Swampy continued to be on the beach right up until his last few years.

He gained his Bronze Medallion in 1952 (No. 13090) then went on to achieve the following:

Instructor's Certificate, 1953;

Life Member Anglesea SLSC, 1959;

President Anglesea SLSV, 1958-75;

Vice president SLSV, 1961-81;

Hon. Photographer SLSV, 1965-91;

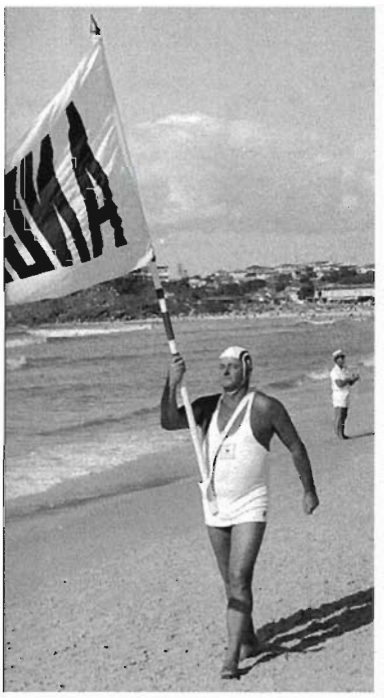

Life Member SLSV, 1971

Hon. Historian SLSV for many years;

Served on the Judiciary Committee for many years;

House committee refurbishment of A.W. Walker House, completed in 1965.

Within the Anglesea community in particular, and indeed surf life saving in general, Swampy is, and always will be,a legend.

Anglesea Surf Life Saving Club Inc.

Formed: A life saving club was formed in Anglesea in 1929, and was affiliated with RLSS until 1931. Little record remains of any activities. Anglesea SLSC was formed, with initial membership of 59 at an inaugural meeting on 20 January 1952, following a public meeting on 2 January 1952, at the Returned Soldiers Hall, Anglesea.

Cap colors: In 1952, bottle green with white quarters, altered in 1953 to bottle green with white hoops, and in 1962 to a white cap with green hoops over each ear.

Ladies Auxiliary formed: In 1952/53, and included: Mrs D.G. Baker, Mrs E. Martin, Margaret Marsh, Margaret Worrell, Betty Thompson, Betty Stanley, Pat Stanley.

First Reel: A reel was located on the beach as early as 1922. In January 1952, a new reel was donated by State Centre.

Surf Boat: In 1955 State Centre offered a financial inducement to the first club to have a boat built in Victoria. The club offered naming rights to the donor of £100, as it had no available funds, but no donor was forthcoming. Mel Campbell stepped in with a donation of £50, and the rest of the money was raised on the beach etc. The boat was named Meldrum, keeping faith with the promise of naming rights, but recognising 'half the money, half the name'.

Memorable Events:

• Successful rescue and resuscitation of an 8 year old boy on 8 January 1961 was commended by then Otway District Supervisor, Harry Windmill. What stands this event out is the follow-up story in which the boy is reported to have experienced restoration of his rapidly failing eyesight. Recent contact with him confirms that, now in his mid 40's, his recovery was permanent. (This event is told in detail in the section devoted to Rescues and Shark Attacks).

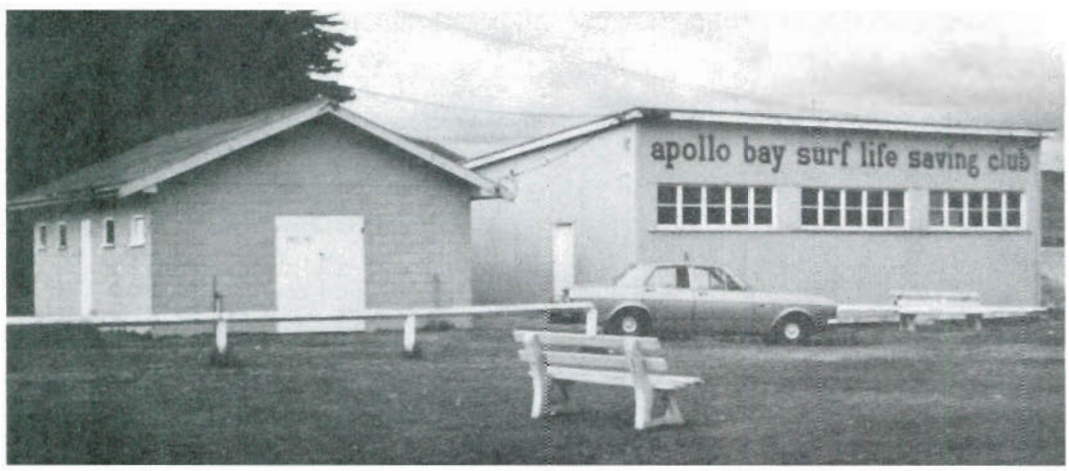

• Club was renowned for its 'bun fights' hosted after carnivals.

Carrum Life Saving Club Inc.

Formed: On 15 February 1925. No record remains of the formation process, but assistance was received from Chelsea and Mentone LSC who staged demonstrations in 1925. The club affiliated with the RLSS in 1930. It is believed the club did not function during the depression years of the early 1930's, but re-emerged later in the decade and re-affiliated with RLSS in 1937 (which is the date recorded by RLSS).

First committee:

Secretary: (1925) J. Wylie. (Other office bearers unknown.)

Affiliation with State Centre: 1994 (initially on a 12 month probation period).

First delegates to State Centre: Gary Patterson (1994).

Clubhouse: The first clubhouse was located at the mouth of the Patterson River when in 1939 Chelsea City Council granted the land. A boatshed was moved from Mentone and reconstructed on site, which with additions, served the club until its sale in 1957. The present clubhouse was built on a grant of land, some 200 metres to the south, largely through the efforts of club and community members. A grand opening, attended by a large crowd, was held 19 October 1961. A thirty-year anniversary of opening celebration was held in 1991, with similar attendance.

Cap colors: Blue cap with a yellow 4-point star on top which is bordered with a red surround.

Ladies Auxiliary formed: The club has always had women members, bronze holders and juniors.

First carnival attended: No record exists of the first, but the club fielded regular competitors in RLSS carnivals, probably from the 1930s forward. First carnival attended under the SLSA umbrella was in 1995.

Memorable events:

As the formation of this club goes back beyond living memory, and that early written records are sparse, it is worthy of note that:

- The club has 'battled' in true Australian tradition, through good and bad times.
- Setbacks include failed fund raising initiatives, memorably the purchasing of pennants and postcards in 1962 for on-sale at a major Scout Jamboree, only to have them delivered to the club after the event! (See postcard below).
- The club has participated regularly in RLSS carnivals from the early days.
- The club has hosted RLSS carnivals regularly.

Rescues: The first recorded rescue dates back to 1926 when the then club secretary, Mr J. Wylie dived, fully clothed, into the Patterson River at its mouth, to rescue a boy, also fully clothed, who was in distress. Wylie successfully brought the lad ashore.

Inverloch Surf Life Saving Club Inc.

Formed: A club was formed in March 1956 with assistance from Wonthaggi LSC, and which took the name of Inverloch LSC The club affiliated with RLSS in its year of formation. The club had 30 members and maintained regular patrols for some years, but with the advent of Venus Bay and Cape Paterson SLSCs, the interest in Inverloch LSC fell away and lifesaving activity ceased. The clubhouse fell into disrepair and was finally removed in the 1970s.

A public meeting in February 1998 demonstrated support for the formation of the present club. The popularity of the beach and its growing hazard due to changing sand conditions were the catalysts in gaining widespread support from the general community. After much hard work, as ever falling on few shoulders, Inverloch SLSC was formed and its inaugural General Meeting took place on 9 August 1998.

Lorne Surf Life Saving Club Inc.

Formed: Although no detailed records remain, a lifesaving club was functioning at Lorne in 1923, when it affiliated with Royal Life Saving Society. It is known that a bronze squad was examined by Joe Henke in 1939, and in 1940 a bronze squad was examined by a holidaying SLSA examiner from Sydney. The club continued to patrol at Easter up to 1941, when all activity ceased for the remainder of the war.

Lorne Surf Life Saving Club was formed at a meeting of 12 enthusiastic members on 21 November 1947, and Bronze squad training began immediately. The early momentum soon fell away, and no activity took place the following season. A meeting was convened in 1950, and the club was revived, with a small core of new members, including three of the original 12. This time the club was successfully launched due in large part to the energy and administrative skills of those early members.

Throughout that winter, members made no less than 14,000 cement cream bricks at numerous working bees.

Mentone Life Saving Club Inc.

Formed: A sporting marriage of cricket and swimming gave rise to the Mentone Lifesaving Club in 1920. Members of Mentone Cricket Club, unable to play on Sundays, turned to the beach for fitness training and recreation. They soon organised swimming events, then their attention turned to lifesaving. A meeting was called in the then Mentone Recreation Hall, out of which the Mentone Life Saving and Swimming Club was formed. Affiliation with RLSS was gained in 1921. Mordialloc Life Saving Club Inc.

Formed: All records of the early years were lost in a fire in 1954. It is known that affiliation with RLSS took place in 1919, the likely year of the club's foundation after the 1914-18 War. A clubhouse was built within 30 metres of the Mordialloc sea baths where many of the early activities took place.

First committee on affiliation with SLSV:

President: Hazel Pierce.
Secretary: Julie Sobell.
Treasurer: Carmel Shanley.
Club Captain: Meg Sparsholt .
Committee: James Evans.

First delegate to State Centre: Hazel Pierce.

Affiliation with State Centre: 1999.

Clubhouse: The original clubhouse adjoining the sea baths, was washed away in the floods of 1933.

The second clubhouse was constructed which served for a further 20 years, until 1954 when it and all of its contents were destroyed by fire.

Members and interested groups set about raising the funds necessary to rebuild. Extensive fund raising efforts finally paid off, and the third clubhouse was completed in time for its formal opening in 1957.

It is noteworthy that in more than 80 years of continuous existence, the club has only had 8 Presidents. Hazel Pierce, the present office holder has been in office for 26 years and was the first female in the Victorian Life Saving movement to hold such a position.

Mount Martha Life Saving Club Inc.

Formed: On 12 August 1986, and affiliated with RLSS that year. Patrols began in December 1986 out of a refurbished shed little bigger than a bathing box. The levels of drive and initiative drawn from its membership has seen this club gain much support from the local and business community, to the point where it now has membership numbering over 700. It operates from a purpose built two-storey clubhouse situated on the beach.

Clubhouse: The green shed, a refurbished Kiosk served as ths first gear shed and Clubhouse until 1991.

In 1991 the club gained access to the former boatshed (pictured below). Condemned by the Local Council as unfit for use, repairs carried out by members saw it pressed into service for two years as the second clubhouse

In 1993 this building was demolished, and a new single storey clubhouse was erected on the site. As the club grew, it became clear that the space afforded by this building was inadequate. With little chance of increasing the floor area by taking up more beach, the solution was a second storey. Funds were successfully raised, and the building was completed in 2001.

Cap colours: Lime green fluoro cap with two separate navy blue stripes, front to rear.

Portland Surf Life Saving Club Inc.

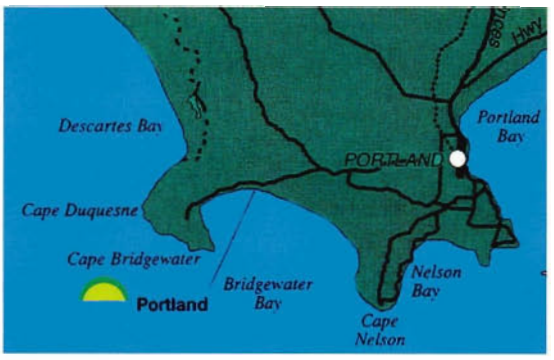

Formed: The history of Portland SLSC is a story of three clubs, three beaches and three eras. The first began in 1931 when the newly formed Portland Surf Bathers and Beach Improvement Association affiliated with RLSS. The name was changed in 1933 to Portland Surf Bathers and Life Saving Club, and it was based on Henty Beach (the town beach), where a clubhouse was built in 1936. The club continued into the war years but went into recess in 1942.

The second era began on 24 September 1947, when the club re-formed and, within a month, became the Portland Surf Life Saving Club. In 1954/55 a decision was taken to move from Henty beach after a public road development required demolition of the clubhouse. The vote was taken to re-locate to Narrawong beach where a new clubhouse was constructed. Activities continued but the club was struggling. Although the club had a nearly new clubhouse, equipment, and money at bank, there was a crippling shortage of members. At a meeting on 29 September 1961 it was decided that the club go into recess until further recruitment was successful.

The third era dawned at a public meeting on 23 March 1964 when the club reformed with assistance from Port Fairy and Warrnambool SLSC's. Beginning where they left off at Narrawong Beach, it soon became clear that changes were on their way. The clubhouse had suffered badly at the hands of vandals, and Bridgewater Beach was gaining in popularity. Patrols began there in 1965 and arrangements for a new clubhouse began in 1968. Strong recruiting in the late 1960s and early 1970s saw the club fully established.

RAAF College Surf Life Saving Club

Formed: 1950, by Cadets attending The RAAF College at Point Cook. Cadets were drawn from around Australia, and elsewhere, and there was general interest in forming a surf life saving club. This was entirely consistent with the RAAF College philosophy of encouraging a wide range of recreational, cultural and sporting activities among its future leaders. As a consequence, the formation of the RAAF College SLSC was encouraged and it duly came into being. Membership was at all times on an honorary basis. J. F. Davine was the officer in charge, and Peter J. Scully the honorary secretary.

Affiliation with State Centre: 1951.

Clubhouse: No clubhouse existed as such. During college term the club began regular weekend patrols at Ocean Grove in 1951, as the beach gained popularity with swimmers although no rescue was recorded in the first year. By 1953/54 the club's patrolling activity had switched to Portsea Ocean Beach.

Cap colors: RAAF blue cap with two maroon and one white strip (central), front to rear.

First carnival attended: Victorian Championships at Portsea in 1951 and participated in various events there, and at Torquay a week later when the titles were completed after postponement of water events because of heavy seas. The March Past team, perhaps not surprisingly, acquitted itself well and became a close second to the winners.

Club newsletter: No newsletter dedicated to the SLSC activities existed, although the club's activities were written up in the college magazine.

First Bronze Medallion squad: 10 members achieved their bronze medal on 26 March 1950, and by the end of season 1950/51 this number had doubled to 20.

Instructor: Details not available.

Examiners: Details not available.

First reel: Obtained from State Centre who also donated a waxed line.

First surf boat: No record exists of a boat, but the club members were resourceful in raising funds for equipment such as skis and boards They gained sponsorship from Kelloggs for a beach enclosure. They were also adept at maintaining and restoring equipment.

• The club, its patrolling, competition and camp activities were rewarding to its many participants over time.

Seaspray Surf Life Saving Club Inc.

He started by getting together a group of local swimmers interested in lifesaving, then donated equipment, including a reel. President: Ken De Heer.

Vice Presidents: Russ White, Phil Sierakowski, Garry McDonald.

Secretary: Sally Mitchell.

Treasurer: Kirsten Jones.

Club Captain: Peter Robertson.

Committee: Martin Dixon, Brian Whittaker.

Together with Inverloch SLSC, Sorrento is the first club to be founded and to affiliate with SLSV for many years. This does not of course, include the many Bayside clubs which have affiliated, but where there is a previous and long history with RLSS.

As the formation of this club took place at the very end of the period covered in this history, it is not possible to relate many noteworthy events. Since the conditions the club must operate in are among the more challenging around the coast, it can be expected that a future historian will have much of interest to recall.

Although the present club is new to the scene, Sorrento ocean beach has seen many rescues, predominately carried out by the neighbouring clubs, Portsea and Gunnamatta. Early photographs illustrate formal life saving activities taking place at this beach as early as the 1920s.

OPEN SEA BATHING.

LIFE SAVING SOCIETY FORMED

For some months past the regular morning bathers along our foreshore have had under consideration the advisability of banding themselves together in an association for instruction in swimming, and in life saving. As a sequel, a meeting to inaugurate the association was held at the Port Melbourne Yachting Club's rooms on Tuesday. The chair was occupied by Mr. A. Nichols, and a large number of intending members were present. The Mayor of South Melbourne (Cr. J. Baragwanath), and Cr. E. A. Wells (chairman of the bathing committee), who had been specially invited to the meeting, also attended. After the chairman had outlined the objects of the society, and the work desired to be undertaken, the election of office-bearers for the first year was proceeded with, resulting as under :—President, The Mayor (Cr. J. Baragwanath) ; vice-president, Cr. E. A. Wells ; treasurer, Mr. A. Allen ; secretary, F. N. Pleass ; captain, C. King ; committee, Messrs. D. M'Coll, D. Edwards, J. Skelton, A. Nichols, W. Hume, J. N. Scott, and C. King.

The Mayor and Cr. Wells both addressed the meeting, drawing attention to the determination of the Council to protect bathers and visitors to the foreshore. They referred to the difficult task the Council had experienced in legislating for the open sea bathing, and expressed appreciation at the willingness of the ratepayers to thus assist in seeing that the regulations as to dress and conduct were complied with.

The Secretary reported that some 200 members were already enrolled. It was the desire of the club to form squads for drill in life saving work and to furnish life lines and a warning bell on the foreshore in case of accident.

South Melbourne Record, 1913.

Formed: The extract above is from the South Melbourne Record in 1913, reporting on the formation of the South Melbourne Life Saving Club on 25 February 1913, as the South Melbourne Open Sea Bathers Club. The origins of this club can be traced back to 15 November 1876, when the South Melbourne Swimming Club was formed at Emerald Hill Baths (later known as Tramway Baths, and later still Stubbs Baths).

Several other swimming clubs were formed and had headquarters at the baths, including Albert Park, and Albert Park Ladies Swimming Clubs.

The South Melbourne Open Sea Bathers Club affiliated with Royal Life Saving Society in 1922. The title changed to South Melbourne Life Saving and Swimming Club in 1927/28, but the club succumbed in 1934/35 during the Great Depression. The club re-formed with a few members under this name in August 1944 after several local drownings. Some assistance may have been given by RLSS and South Melbourne Council. The final change to its present name, South Melbourne Life Saving Club, took place in September 1958. The club affiliated to Surf Life Saving Victoria in 1986 but has maintained it traditional affiliation with RLSS.

Rescues: The earliest recorded rescue dates back to February 1876 when a rescuer entered the water on horseback and succeeded in rescuing a swimmer from a shark attack. Many drownings have occurred on this heavily used part of the bay which attracts many non-swimmers, poor swimmers and the inevitable drunk swimmers both day and night. The club has a long history of rescues in these circumstances.

Warrnambool Surf Life Saving Club Inc.

Formed: The history of Warrnambool SLSC can be traced back to 1918, with the formation of the Surf Bathers and Beach Improvement Association. Membership quickly grew to more than 1,000 out of a local population of 7,000. Affiliation with RLSS occurred in 1919. Whilst the club's primary focus was to lobby for beach improvements, a place for the lifesaving component was found. By 1919, training with reel and line was taking place on the beach (see photo in chapter 3). Lifesaving teams with both men and women emerged, primarily for competition, but beach patrols were carried out as necessary.

On 20 February 1930, Warrnambool LSC was formed at an inaugural meeting at Lyndoch Scout Hall, with 40 male and 27 female members. The two clubs co-existed side by side until February 1933 when a vote was taken to amalgamate both clubs as Warrnambool LSC. The association with RLSS continued. The club maintained its activities up to, and even through the war.

In 1945, a general re-organisation took place, and in 1947, affiliation with State Centre was completed soon after its formation.

Treasurer: R. Armstrong.

Clubhouse: Originally at Warrnambool Beach at the old kiosk, just above (but not safely above) the high water line. The present clubhouse was built in 1954 by club members and public voluntary labour on top of sand dunes to the east of the original. Additions of squash court, storage areas, caretakers flat, gymnasium, and extensions to the lounge room ensued to bring the building to the present day standard.

Surf Carnival A Big Success

Woodside Beach Surf Lifesaving Club's first open surf carnival attracted thousands of people to the beach on Sunday.

Sixteen surf clubs had a total of 250 members competing.

The weather was moderate, but a cold southerly breeze made things chilly.

Anglesea club won the Mobil reel for the club scoring the most points. Point Leo was second.

The Woodside club members did a great job in the duty boat. They were offshore, rowing about, for the whole of the all-day carnival.

The club's women's committee had a "field day" with its stalls.

Officials were pleased with the luncheon provided and with the manner in which the carnival was run.

The development of effective rescue and resucitation methods

"Resuscitation shall mean the preservation or restoration of life by the establishment and/or maintenance of airway, breathing and circulation, and related emergency care."

Definition of the Australian Resuscitation Council, adopted by the Victoria Branch of the Council in its formation constitution on 4 December 1979.

The most efficient methods of saving the life of an apparently drowned person are taught to all active members of a surf life saving club. How to rescue and how to resuscitate — these are the core subjects of the Bronze Medallion which is the primary qualifying certificate enabling a member to take part in beach patrols.

"I saw him a minute ago".
50th Jubilee Dinner Invitation SLSA - SLSV Archives

Choosing the best methods of saving life has preoccupied the Surf Life Saving Association since its formation on Sydney beaches in 1907. At that time, the clubs simply adopted the rescue and resuscitation methods used by the Royal Life Saving Society.

These first methods were devised in England, when in the 1880s "individual swimming clubs took up the matter and gave prizes in excellence in rescue and resuscitation methods, but no combined action was taken until the formation of The Life Saving Society in 1891".[1] With a mission to teach the most efficient methods, the Society adopted a form of army drill, drawn up by William Wilson of Glasgow. It was this military drill aspect that so impressed King Edward VII that he became patron of the Society and allowed the 'Royal' prefix to be used.

Rescue

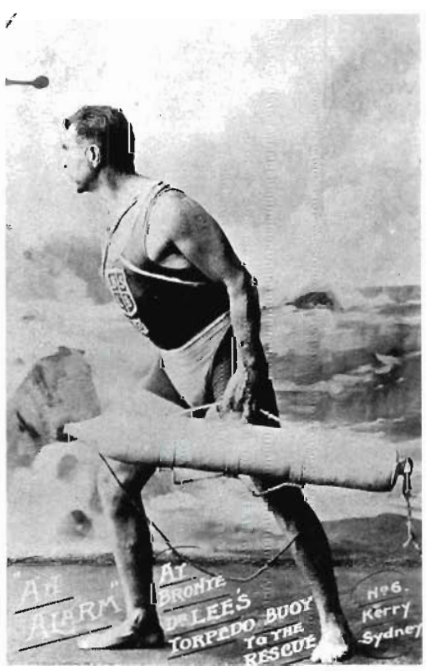

The Royal Life Saving Society's first rescue methods applied in still water conditions —lakes and rivers— to the most common situations the rescuer confronts: the drowning patient is either passive or struggling.

If passive but alert, the patient was told to cling to the neck of the rescuer who swam in frontways. In all other cases, the rescuer turned the patient on his or her back, tried to hold a passive but unconscious patient's head above the water, or pinned a struggling patient's arm(s) around the chest, then used a one-arm back stroke to bring in the patient.

In beach rescues, the same basic principles were taught. However various forms of devices were used in order to shorten the time it generally took to bring in a patient from a strong resistant surf.

Before surf reels were invented, the most common device used was a lifebuoy and line. The rescuer could put the buoy over the patient, lie the patient back and guide the buoy and patient in if the rope was being pulled in at the beach end.

The inventiveness of our founding Australian surf lifesavers soon went to work to overcome the problems of taking a bulky round lifebuoy out into the surf.

The first device was Dr Lee's torpedo shaped lifebuoy, used by Bronte lifesavers in 1906. It was almost a meter long and made from canvass stiffened with kapok. With four rope handles and weighing about two kilograms, it was capable of supporting the rescuer and up to three patients. In a one-to-one rescue, half the buoy supported the patient's chest while the rescuer kicks in or is pulled in.

However in that same year (1906) the surf reel was invented in Sydney and interest in the torpedo tube fell away until it returned via the American Lifesavers' visit in 1956.

Within a few years the surf reel became the established rescue device of the newly formed Surf Life Saving Association. In 1911 it was also adopted by the Royal Life Saving Society for its coastal clubs.

The methods devised for bringing a patient out of the water and taking them up the beach in order to commence any resuscitation method depended on the rescue method itself.

'One Man Carry'. Surf Life Saving Handbook, 14th Ed. 1946.

The Royal Society adopted the 'Fireman's Lift' for a single carry, as did the Surf Life Saving Association. Today it is called the 'One Man Carry'.

Where a rescue is effected by a reel and line team, all members carry the patient out of the water to the shore.

Positioning the patient correctly during this carrying period, as well as placing the patient on the beach ready to commence resuscitation, has been the subject of much research over the years, and depended chiefly on the method of resuscitation to be used.

Resuscitation

Over the past 100 years, several methods of resuscitation have been adopted by lifesaving clubs:

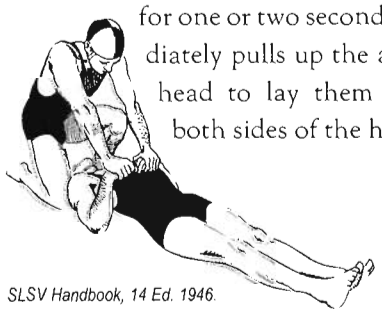

- Sylvester Method (officially to 1903, but still used after that date. In the 1960s a variation called the Sylvester Brosch method was introduced but was phased out after EAR was adopted.)
- Schafer Method (from 1903 to 1952)
- Eve Rocker, alone or in conjunction with the Schafer method (1942 - mid 1950s)
- Holger Nielson (1952 to 1969)
- Expired Air Resuscitation (Mouth to Mouth and Mouth to Nose) (1960)

From 1961, cardio-pulmonary resuscitation (CPR) was adopted by the Surf Life Saving Association only a year after being declared a proven method by the Australian medical authorities.

Resuscitation methods

Sylvester Method: This was devised around 1858. The patient is placed on his/her back. The head is lain backwards for maximum airway and stomach clearance. The operator works from the back of the head facing the patient's feet.

The operator grips the patient's flexed arms just below the elbow joint and pushes them against the side of the chest, holds this position for one or two seconds, then immediately pulls up the arms over the head to lay them extended on both sides of the head.

SLSV Handbook, 14 Ed. 1946.

With no time delay the operator moves the arms back to the chest to repeat the two movements, aiming for around 15 chest pressure/arm lifts per minute. The arm lift action is intended to draw air into the lungs by expanding the chest cavity.

A variation called the 'Sylvester-Brosch' method was introduced in the early 1960s. Instead of holding the elbows and pressing against the side of the chest, the operator grasped the wrists, crossed them and pressed them firmly onto the lower central chest area in order to force air from the lungs.

SLSV Handbook, 14 Ed. 1946.

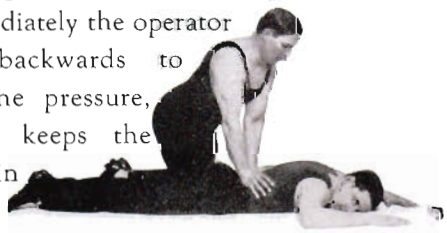

The operator then extended the arms over the head and laid them flat well away from the head (instead of close to the side of the head as in the original method). Only 12 chest pressure/arm lifts per minute were recommended until natural breathing commenced.

Schafer Method: This method was adopted by the Royal Life Saving Society in England (and in Australia and British colonies) in 1903 to replace the Sylvester method "...because of its simplicity, because the patient is laid downwards thus avoiding the necessity of attending to the tongue which was always difficult under the old system".[2]

The patient is placed face downwards. The head is put on one side. The operator kneels astride, or on one side of the patient's legs, facing the head.

The operator puts both hands in the small of the patient's back, thumbs nearly touching and fingers spread out over the lowest ribs. Firstly the operator leans forward to throw weight onto the ribs to expel air, water etc. Immediately the operator swings backwards to relieve the pressure, but still keeps the hands in the position on the ribs.

From 'Swimming' by A. Sinclair, Routledge & Sons, London 1909, p.97.

This back and forth movement is repeated every four to five seconds or around 12 to 15 times per minute.

Eve Rocker Method:. This 'see-saw' method was adopted by the British Royal Navy in 1942, during the Second World War, and was immediately adopted by all armed services and then by the Surf Life Saving Association of Australia.

The patient is placed face downwards onto a stretcher (or a plank), with the head laying down over the stretcher's edge. The stretcher is lifted and centred on top of a trestle. Two operators are required, one at each end.

The operator at the head tilts the head down to a 45 degree angle then, after waiting and watching for a few seconds for any fluid draining out, lifts the stretcher to put the feet down at a 45 degree angle.

These two movements, rocking four seconds head down and three seconds feet down are repeated about nine times a minute.

The aim is to push the stomach's heavy contents against the diaphram as a 'natural' way of expelling air, water etc from the lungs.

The Eve Rocker method was used in conjunction with the Schafer method, which was to be started immediately upon rescue and during the time it took to set the patient on the rocker.

Later the Surf Association altered the movements to 10 per minute for the first 15 minutes, then reducing this to six per minute with head down for three seconds and head up for seven seconds.

CO_2 sparklet was later attached to the Eve Rocker, however the Eve Rocker method was phased out in the mid 1950s.

Holger Nielson Method:

Although first devised in 1932, it did not replace the Schafer method in the Surf Association until 1952. It appeared to combine elements of both the Sylvester and Shafer methods.

The patient lies face downwards, head on side, with both hands placed under the head, thus extending the elbows. The operator kneels at the patient's head, facing the feet.

With fingers spread and thumbs touching, the operator puts both hands on the patient's back, with the heels of the hands at the bottom part of the shoulder blades and applies pressure on the back ribs. The operator immediately releases this pressure then lifts the patient's elbows, raising them up then lowers them, returning to the back pressure. These three movements were repeated 12 times per minute.

Expired Air Resuscitation (E.A.R.):

This method was adopted by the Surf Life Saving Association in 1960, following the Medical Committee's recommendations arising from an International Convention on Life Saving Techniques, held in Sydney on March 11-20, 1960.

Dr Tom Crankshaw[3], Victorian State Centre Honorary Medical Officer, attended, noting in his report to State Centre: "It should be appreciated by all that this convention was not arranged by chance. It was decided that, as there was a doubt in the minds of those associated with the use of artificial respiration regarding the most efficient method to employ (for example, in some methods there may not be any entry of air into the victim's lungs), there should be a thorough investigation."

As an anaesthetist, ("who must breathe for his patient, and for whom 'intermittent positive pressure breathing' is part of the normal stock-in-trade"), Dr Crankshaw stated that he and everyone present at the Conference were impressed with the research of American Dr Peter Safar on the tidal volume of air introduced into the lungs by the various methods of artificial respiration, showing the impressive results of expired air artificial respiration.

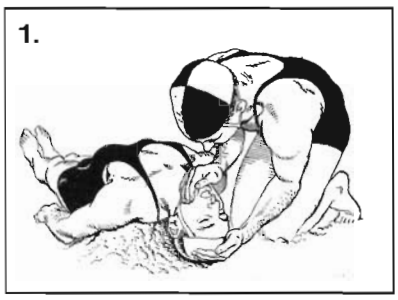

"Expired air artificial respiration, (rescue breathing) mouth to mouth or mouth to nose breathing," wrote Dr Crankshaw, "all mean that an attempt is made to inflate the lungs of the victim by blowing air into the mouth or nose or both."

The first recommendations of the Medical Group, of which Dr Crankshaw was a member, were explained to branches by the Association's Chief Superintendent, Bob Brydon: "In expired air techniques, no definite breathing cycle can be laid down. You should

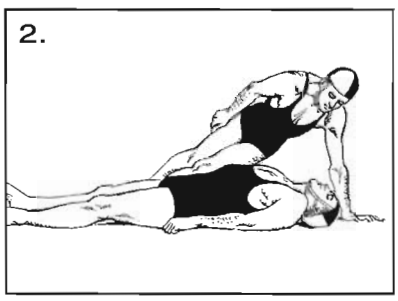

"And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul."
Genesis Chapter 2, verse 7. (King James Bible)

Whilst reading the Bible during his time as a prisoner of war, Dr Tom Crankshaw pondered on this verse and, being an anaesthetist, recognised then that blowing air into an unconscious person could assist with resuscitation, as was later proven when the Expired Air Resuscitation method was adopted world-wide in the early 1960s.

breathe into the patient until the chest rises and recommence inflation as soon as the chest goes down. The first few inflations should be at a fairly rapid rate and should not at any time be less than 10 per minute".

Today the instructions are: Lay patient on back and tilt the head backwards. With one hand lift the jaw upwards and with the other hand seal the nose. Check airway clear and with no airway obstruction, then give five full breaths into the patient's mouth, then check for a pulse. If pulse is found, continue mouth to mouth, giving one breath every four seconds, for a full minute, then check pulse again, etc.

Following the 1960 International Convention, Victorian State Centre recommended changes to drill procedures as a result of adopting the E.A.R. method, also recommending that the Sylvester-Brosch method be adopted as the manual method of artificial respiration (the Brosch modification involved putting a pad under the patient's shoulder blades to enable the head to extend further back) and that all other methods be deleted from the Association's handbook. BEACH "BLOWPIPE" TO SAVE LIVES

THIS new lifesaving "blowpipe" will be introduced to Australian beaches soon, to blow life into the lungs of the near-drowned.

In the picture, Sydney beach inspector Brian Davidson is demonstrating the apparatus on a "patient" at Bondi Beach.

Resuscitation experts say that it is so simple that children could operate it, and so compact that a lifesaver could carry it in the belt of his trunks.

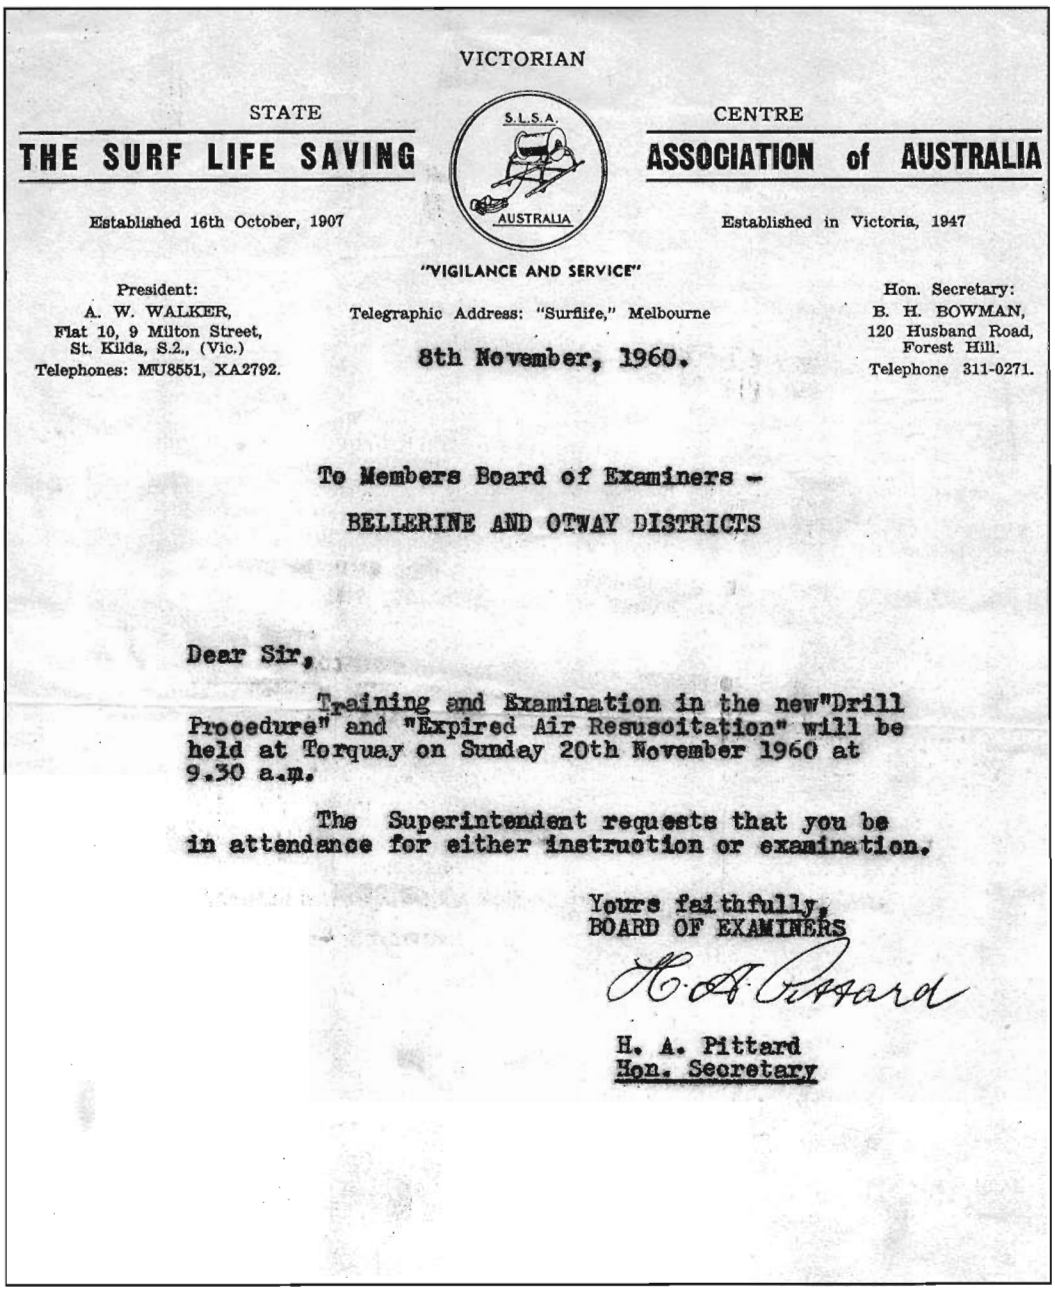

U.S. idea

The blowpipe, made of plastic, was developed in America. Several hundred have been ordered from the American manufacturers by the Australian Surf Life Saving Association.

The pipe is shaped to go over the patient's tongue and into the windpipe.

A mouthguard, which fits neatly over the patient's lips, makes the operation efficient and gives the rescuer a mouthpiece to blow into.

continued also with the Holger-Nielson method, following the Medical Group's recommendations after the 1960 Convention, but the Sylvester-Brosch and Holger Nielson methods were discontinued in 1969.)

Consequently a drill was devised in time for the 1961 handbook for instruction in E.A.R. (and in CPR) for qualifying people for the Bronze Medallion and in re-qualifying all active members. As a result of some concerns raised at the Conference "that there is a very small risk of communicating disease whilst performing E.A.R and the use of masks, filters etc will not lessen whatever risk may be present", the Victorian State Centre recommended "it is not necessary or desirable for members to practice expired air resuscitation on a conscious patient whist training". Fortunately models, called Ambu-Manikins, were available and State Centre purchased one for each club. Masks were used also, but an American variation of using a blowpipe was discouraged.

Surf Men Have One Aim . . .

. . . Bring 'Em Back Alive!

USING a simple, but effective machine called a resuscitation trainer, a group of men meet every Monday night in a city hotel learning the art of saving life by breathing air direct from mouth to mouth.

The machine has plastic bags representing lungs and stomach and the men can watch the reaction of the machine as they go through their training.

The men are members of the Victorian State Centre of the Surf Life-Saving Association of Australia and they've been busy most of the winter making preparations for the summer.

Mouth - to - mouth resuscitation is a centuries - old method revived some years ago overseas, mainly in Europe and America. But last March at the International Life-Saving Convention held in Sydney the method was recommended.

According to vice-president Jack Hopper it's far superior.

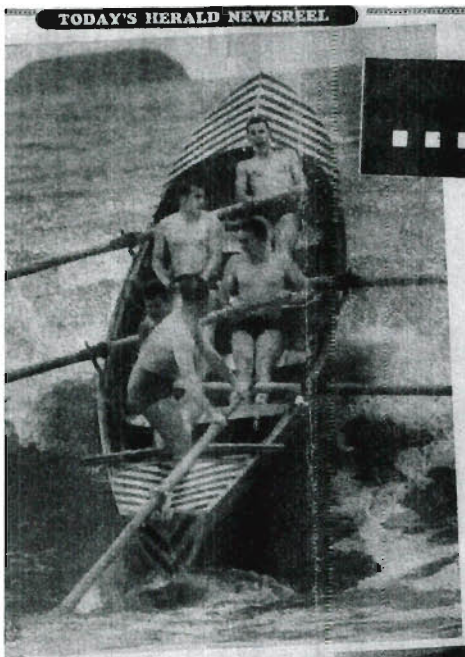

"You don't need any gear and you know immediately when the patient is responding," he said.

In this method the patient's head is tilted back as far as it will go with the life - saver blowing into the mouth, at the same time pinching the nose.

"There are two or three other versions but this is the fundamental treatment," Mr Hopper said.

When the association examiners and instructors pass this latest course there will be classes for the club instructors, who will in turn put their club members to the test.

Every surf life-saver throughout Victoria must pass this new course to re-qualify as members. If they don't they will not be eligible to enter the Victorian titles or for selection in Victoria's team.

SURF LIFE SAVERS of the Point Leo Club put to sea in their boat. By this summer all will be proficient in mouth-to--mouth resuscitation.

TREATMENT is about to begin for this "victim." Hero Noel Jefferson, "out cold," is carried from the "sea" by Gordon Dann, Dennis McMahon, Bruce Hacking.

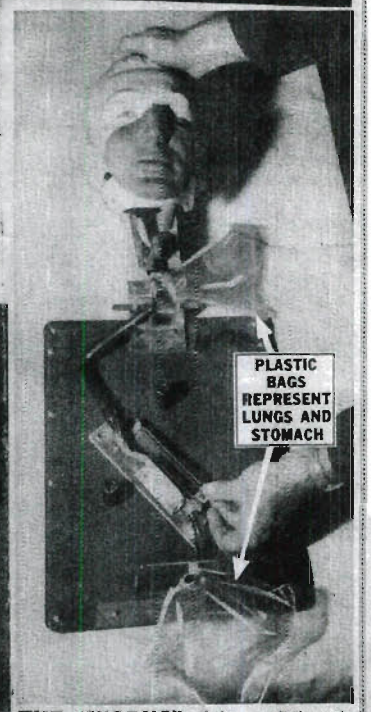

"LIVE" TRAINING is carried out after tests on the machine. Here Norman Luft is about to apply mouth breathing treatment to Brian Dann. Proficiency in this method will save many lives.

"PATIENT" for a demonstration, Michael Davenport, is placed in position by Tony Lester.

"It's Best Method"

Cardio-Pulmonary Resuscitation (CPR): Delegates to the 1960 International Convention on Lifesaving Techniques listened to the findings of recent research on resuscitating people through "closed heart cardiac massage", as it was termed. "It is quite remarkable that a complex medical procedure only described in 1960 should be incorporated into Surf Life Saving teaching as early as 1961, and reflects a great deal of credit on the Association and its medical advisors at the time", commented Dr Ian Mackie, the Association's Medical Officer, in 1997.[4]

The first description came via the Association's Chief Superintendent, Bob Brydon's Report on the 1960 Convention's findings: "Closed Chest Method: In cases of electric shock it is possible to restore circulation by squeezing the breastbone against the vertebral column, when, after inflations of expired air, there is no pulse in a large artery. Then this technique could be added to the expired air technique by squeezing the chest three or four times and inflating again; squeeze the chest three or four times and inflate again. The procedure is to be further investigated before being recommended for general application."[5]

The instructions were more clearly defined a year later in the 1961 Handbook of Instruction and Examination: Single Operator - administer six quick breaths, check carotid artery and if no pulse is felt, administer 60-80 compressions (over one minute), then administer six quick breaths again. Check pulse at carotid artery. If not present, check at radial artery (wrist). If still no pulse, repeat procedure, feeling for pulse every three to four minutes until a pulse is felt or assistance arrives. A two operator method stated that both operations can be carried out independently, with no attempts at synchronisation. The first synchronised procedure was elaborated in the 1968 Handbook.

Over the years the ratio of ventilations to compressions has altered with more research based on its use in lifesaving situations. Today, for one-operator CPR, the recommended rate is two breaths followed by 15 compressions, that is, four times per minute. For two-operator CPR, the sequence is one inflation to five compressions; this sequence takes five seconds and is repeated 12 times each minute.

Mechanical (Oxygen) Devices

Although the Association's Handbooks over the years included sections on oxygen devices that could be useful in a resuscitation, for example the Sparklet Resuscitator in 1946 and using oxygen as enrichment during the use of an Ambu bag in 1961, they were not taught as part of the ordinary examination program.

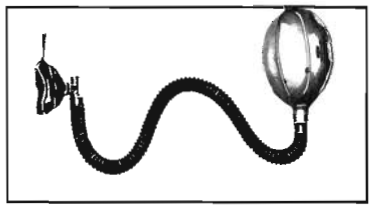

This situation changed in 1969, when instruction in the use of two mechanical ventilators, the Ambu bag and the Air Viva, became part of the Instructor's Certificate.

Shortly after, in 1973 on the advice of the National Medical Panel, 'oxygen therapy', that is, mouth to mask resuscitation and mouth to mask with oxygen techniques became part of the Bronze Medallion curriculum. This followed the National Medical Panel's approval that same year of the Oxy Viva (CIG Medishield) as the only approved mechanical device for the administration of oxygen.

That same year, 1973, an Advance Resuscitation Certificate was introduced "to allow the teaching of intermittent positive pressure resuscitation using the RM Head which delivered 60 litres of oxygen per minute to the non-breathing patient".[6]

However in 1981 the Australian Standards Association declared that the RM Head failed to meet its quality standard, thereby forcing the Surf Life Saving Association to look at alternatives. In 1984 the Medical Panel recommended a trial of the Laerdal bag-mask system. Field trials by clubs were highly favourable and the RM Head was replaced in 1985 by the air bag resuscitator.[7]

In 1991, the Laerdal Aquatic Resuscitator was approved for use on beaches. With a twin regulator, it can supply eight litres of oxygen per minute for therapy or 15 litres per minute for the use of the air bag.

3 Dr Tom Crankshaw was a prisoner of war in World War 2, and in reading the Bible during that time wondered if the statement in Genesis about God "breathing life into Adam" might have relevance to resuscitation techniques, and that "mouth-to-mouth" resuscitation might be a possible method. In the 1950s, he designed an air-way device to prevent the tongue from rolling back when applying mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

4 History of CPR, Dr Ian Mackie, SLSL Ltd, 1997. "The development of modern CPR is based largely on ideas conceived or accidentally discovered many years ago then re-discovered and re-explored after 1950. Artificial ventilation had been described in 1543 by Versalliers, mouth to mouth breathing was described in 1777 by Tossach, open chest cardiac massage was described in 1878, while external cardiac compression was described in 1883. The combination of artificial ventilation and external cardiac compression was mentioned in several standard texrbooks of general surgery published in Germany in the late 19th century."

7 "The Surf Life Saving Association made a major contribution to the development of the MD5 Standards Association document for Portable Resuscitation Devices. This standard became the International Standards Association (ISO) standard. I represented the Surf Life Saving Association on this committee (I was also a member of the Australian Resuscitation Council as well.) This standard effectively ruled out both the Oxy Viva and the RM Heads as patients breathing on their own get no added oxygen (from them)." Additional comment from Dr. David Crankshaw, 1999.

Harry Windmill

'He stands as a monument to all who follow . . .'

Harry Windmill

Henry Charles Windmill, affectionately known as Harry, was an inaugural member of the Point Lonsdale Surf Life Saving Club. At age 14 there was no award, until he gained his Bronze Medallion (No. 26740) on 11 February, 1949. Harry went on to gain his Instructor's and Examiner's Certificates plus a number of other awards over the years. His own Club recognised his contribution initially on two occasions and presented him with Distinguished Service Certificates for both occasions. He later went on to receive that Club's K.D. Allen Award in 1975, Pt. Lonsdale's highest award of recognition.

During his 55 years of contribution to Surf Life Saving, and apart from all his Certificates and Awards, Harry, at Club level held the position of President, Treasurer, Boat Captain, Chief Instructor, State Centre Delegate and was Gear Steward for 15 years.

At State Level over a period of some 36 years, he was State Gear Research and Development Officer, District Supervisor for Bellarine for 18 years, a member of the State Gear Inspection Committee and a member of the Board of Examiners for 40 years.

At national level Harry has had near 25 years in the continuing role of Broadcaster and On Air Co-ordinator for not only the Australian Championships but interstate championships and special events in Australia, South Africa, the UK, USA and New Zealand.

His over 55 years of continuous involvement, commitment and contribution represents the longest continuous contribution of any Victorian Lifesaver with few elsewhere in Australia having reached this achievement.

The highest honour bestowed on any Surf Lifesaver, 'Life Membership', has been given by his Club in 1968, his State in 1970, and Surf Life Saving Australia in the 1977/78 season, for outstanding service of no less than 15 years on each occasion.

Harry Windmill has dedicated a great part of his life to the cause he has loved from his youth. This is also recognised by World Life Saving in granting a Citation of Merit for this distinguished service in promoting Marine and Water Safety and supporting the Humanitarian goals of World Life Saving.

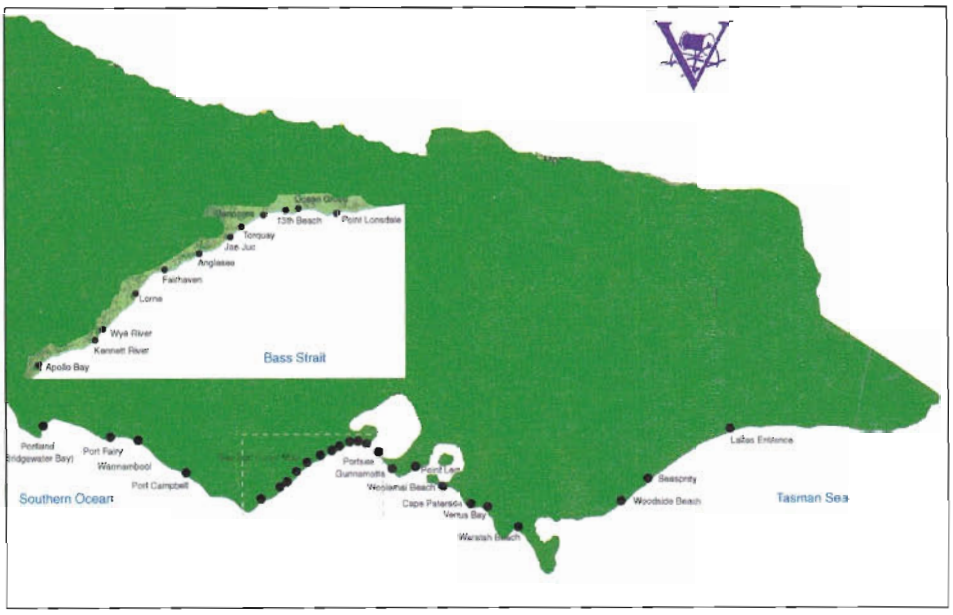

In 1974, Harry was selected as an Education Officer in Surf Life Saving Australia's SLSA National Team to attend the first World Life Saving Congress in the Republic of South Africa; National Gear Development and Research Officer for the season 1975/76.

In the year 2000, to mark the Centenary of Federation of Australia he was one of a small number of Victorians to receive an Australian sports medal.

Henry (Harry) Charles Windmill is the highest example of commitment a club, state or even the national body could ask. He stands as a monument to all who follow.

New Directions in the 1970s

When founding President Sprint Walker stepped down in 1970 after 23 years at the helm, the Association in Victoria ended a remarkable period of growth. Heading into the 1970s, it seemed the only challenge ahead lay in consolidating the gains already made. Membership had risen sharply in the previous few years. Competition in carnivals was keen. The question of secure tenure of land for clubhouses had been solved. The future seemed just a gentle expansion of the past.

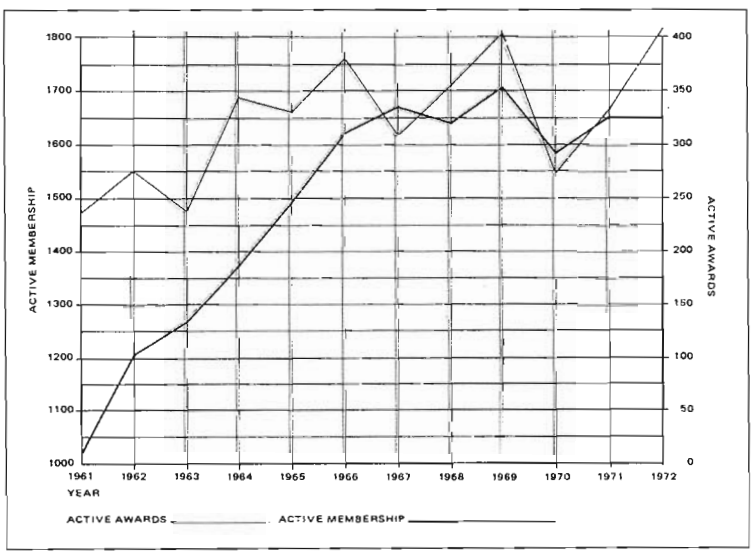

Map of Victoria, showing the 26 Surf Lifesaving clubs, in 1970.

In this context, there appeared to be only two main issues to resolve. One was how State Centre could assist its 26 clubs replace the metal, fibro or timber shacks that served as clubhouses with more substantial buildings more suitable for running up-to-date surf life saving clubs.

The other pressing issue was how to relieve the ever-growing demands on the time of volunteer State Centre executive officers. "Perhaps our greatest problem in Victoria is time," said Victorian delegates to a National Council Executive meeting in March 1970. "The demand on our elected (voluntary) officers becomes greater each year and it is evident that in the future some help of an outside nature will be necessary".

These concerns, however, were swept up — and incorporated — in a technological and social revolution over the next decade that saw major changes in almost every aspect of the surf life saving movement: the reel and line as the basic tool of beach rescues for some eighty years was replaced with surf boards and rescue tubes; engine powered craft (Inflatable Rescue Boats — IRBs and Jet Boats) replaced oared surf boats in patrols and rescues and developed their own carnival program; a helicopter rescue service was started; all clubs became linked by telephone and through a radio network; full-time officers were employed at State Centre headquarters; increased government grants and an ever-increasing growth in sponsorships from businesses led to a major rebuilding program in new club houses; the Nipper program grew to a nationally organised 'mini' movement in itself; and in 1980 women were accepted as equal active members in patrols and competitions. From an efficiently run 'amateur' association in 1970, it was transformed over the next decade into an efficiently run 'professional' association.

Yet by the early 1980s the State Association ended the decade almost 'square' in terms of membership and the number of clubs in Victoria. No new clubs were formed. A declining growth in membership and a corresponding fall off in awards in the early 1970s was only arrested by the Nipper movement and the introduction of women as active members in 1980.

The relationship between State Centre and clubs also went into decline during the early 1970s. In part this was due to a number of changes in leadership (for example, there were three new State Presidents in the seven years between 1970 and 1977, as well as the retirement of other long serving officers) after the relative stability of the Association's earlier period and from inception. Perhaps too it was due to the pressures placed on clubs to introduce the new technologies and their associated procedures. Another reason was undoubtedly the lack of resources State Centre had on hand to service all these changes to each club's satisfaction.

By early 1977, a report from the Western District Supervisor, Greg Miller, was bold enough to record: "All clubs were critical of the Association's lack of innovative leadership. They felt they were doing their bit in maintaining patrol standards but the Association was sleeping on the job in regard to future directions ...and had slipped behind in international life saving standards and were out of touch with contemporary emergency organisations within the state." Further on in the report Greg Miller stated: " A comment from Portland was that State Centre is always laying down the law when we don't need it but never there when we do." He conceded that "...it is easy in most clubs who are having difficulties, as they all do, to see State Centre as a scapegoat..." and that a lot of this grumbling was due to State Centre "...not selling itself or explaining itself to club members who are in the dark about many of its bodies and their operations such as the state medical panel, the IRB Advisor, the Radio sub-committee, the testing of new life saving gear, the role of District Supervisors, the Board of Examiners and so on...".

Then, under the heading 'Changing The System', Greg Miller put forward the direction that clubs wanted State Centre to adopt: "There is a general recognition that the coastline is being used by many people in a nonsurfing capacity and that clubs should be on hand if these people get into trouble". State Centre officials and representatives, aware that this viewpoint was becoming widely held throughout all clubs, turned it into a question to be resolved in terms of determining future policy directions: should they restrict themselves to historically patrolled beaches or extend their services to all areas required?

The answer given in 1978 was to choose the latter approach, namely to develop resources that would expand its services to all areas. It was an ambitious yet feasible policy based on running a sponsored helicopter surveillance and rescue service in a communications link-up with every club house, beach patrol and outpost, each rescue craft on the sea and other emergency service providers. Ten years later, that leap into a future dependant on expensive technology, in particular the helicopter service, left the Association almost bankrupt. The same question was debated once more: restriction or expansion? The answer — restriction in terms of concentrating on core activities and no helicopter service — prevailed in order to return the Association to a sound financial basis once more.

The 1970s decade was an eventful period in the Association's development: exciting, optimistic, full of possibilities based on new devices and technology, and made even more glamorous by carnivals revitalised with new events like the iron man contests.

Following on from the founding president

George Nutbean (Fairhaven SLSC) was elected State Centre President at the Annual General Meeting held on 10 August 1970, replacing the founding and long serving President Ainslie 'Sprint' Walker. Eric McGee (Point Lonsdale) was elected Vice-President.

In the months prior to the meeting, Alan Forster (Point Leo SLSC), who had chaired State Centre meetings on behalf of Sprint Walker due to Sprint's illness, had let it be known he intended to nominate as President. However George Nutbean, who was elected State Centre Vice-President in 1968 (and after 10 years as President of Fairhaven Club, from 1958 to 1967), also declared himself a candidate. A few weeks before the meeting, George Nutbean asked Alan Forster to meet with him to discuss their prospective nominations and the possibility of avoiding an election on the night. According to Alan Forster[1], who was privately supported by 'Sprint' Walker and confident of winning in a contested election, he acceded to George Nutbean's ambition and request not to nominate in order to avoid an election, persuaded by George Nutbean's argument's that he, Nutbean, had the time as a businessman to devote to the position as opposed to Alan Forster's family commitments as well as job commitments as an ABC sports announcer.

It was a decision that Alan Forster later came to regret, however at the time he could not deny that George Nutbean had both the enthusiasm and the organising ability needed to take on the position of President.

Three years earlier George Nutbean headed the sub-committee which organised the visit of a touring US team to Victoria (as part of an all states tour). Two carnivals were held: at Ocean Grove on 25 February 1967 and at Portsea on the following day, which inaugurated the competition for the Wieland Shield, a perpetual trophy for competitions between Victorian surf lifesaving teams and Los Angeles County Californian[2] lifeguard teams.

Mr W. A. Wieland, American Consul General in Victoria, donated the award which was made from highly polished red gum timber.

The success of these carnivals generated considerable enthusiasm to form a Victorian team to visit the United States later in the year. The same sub-committee, which included Public Relations officer Lindsay Fox, State Secretary Colin Blunt and State Superintendent Arnold Goetz made arrangements with the United States for a carnival to be conducted at Redondo Beach, California, on 27, 28 and 29 July 1967. State Centre approved the sending of a team on 15 May.

However fundraising to achieve the $5,000 needed for the trip proved difficult to achieve in so short a time.

With only $2,000 in hand after five weeks, the trip was cancelled on 3 July. The U.S. association also had difficulty raising their promised share of funds to cover accommodation and travel in the United States.

A minor setback was overcome earlier when National Council Secretary Ken Watson took offence at a newspaper article referring to the Victorian team as the 'Australian Team'. Ken Watson wrote to State Centre on 19 June 1967 that "as members of the Victorian State Centre must be well aware — NO APPROVAL OF ANY KIND has been given for any team to visit the United States as representatives of the Surf Life Saving Association of Australia." George Nutbean admitted supplying the article as a way of boosting the fund raising. National Council then advised that all teams needed the approval of National Council for overseas visits, a point that State Centre agreed to for future visits. Later, whilst holidaying in the United States in 1969, George Nutbean arranged for a Victorian team to visit the U.S. in 1971.

Concern at the fall-off in the number of all awards in the 1969/70 season, from a total of 498 the previous season down to 391, including only 220 Bronze Medallions compared with 352 in 1968/69, was attributed to a number of reasons: from young people attracted more to being a 'surfie' than a 'clubbie' through to a growing lack of interest in the media, particularly the Melbourne newspapers, although the Geelong-based press still gave good coverage. On the other hand, the growth in sponsorship was steadily progressing.

The main concerns of the new State Centre leadership were focussed not so much on the clubs and their difficulties in recruiting but on a range of major events needing their attention: participation in the 1970 Melbourne Cup Carnival (which was held at Point Leo on the Sunday between the Derby and the Melbourne Cup (at the Melbourne Cup itself, lifesavers formed a guard of honour); the first International Iron Man competition with participation from USA, New Zealand and all states; involvement in the Australian team competing against South Africa at Point Leo; organising the Victorian team to tour the West Coast of America for the Wieland Shield; plus a range of tests to be conducted on new oxygen equipment, rescue buoys and surf boats.

Good ideas . . . but!

A wave of inventive ideas washed over a number of Victorian surf lifesaving members in the late 1960s and early 1970s in a sudden upsurge in interest in developing new technologies to improve rescue times.

A motorised surf boat seemed a promising idea, especially when one was offered as a prize by a developer who requested State Centre hold a carnival at the Rye back beach (Capri beach) in December 1959. The developer hoped that a surf life saving club would be established there after the carnival, and that this event would help sales. Conditions on the day of the carnival soon highlighted the dangerous nature of this beach of which few were aware at the time.

A great deal of sand which the developer's bulldozers had put on the beach to cover the rocks, also to give the impression of a naturally sandy beach, was swept away. A strong rip was running.

The belt lines in the R&R were about 20 degrees to the beach. Lorne SLC won the boat. It was powered by an air-cooled four-stroke crank-started engine covered by a hatch under a small cockpit. The boat, with five boat crew (four rowers and a sweep) was both underpowered and overmanned and capsized during a demonstration. Any notion of starting a club at that beach was quickly abandoned after the carnival (although later, in 1966, the Gunnamatta Surf Life Saving Club was formed in that area).

A revival of the rocket line was attempted in the late 1960s, but in its more modern hand-held pistol version. These pistol rockets were developed for ships in order to send lines across to another ship and set up supply lines at sea. According to the manufacturer, Schermully, there seemed to be no reason why they could not be used for a shore-based rescue to send a line out to someone in difficulties in the surf. At a demonstration at a carnival at Torquay, Don Heathcote volunteered to be the patient. When his hand went up, a rocket pistol was fired towards him from the water's edge, trailing the line which was coiled in a round canister on the pistol. The rocket, however, misfired slightly and instead of going over the patient's head to lay the line over him, headed straight towards him like a deadly bullet. "My heart was in my mouth," declared Harry Windmill. Fortunately Don Heathcote dodged out of the rocket's way. "After that incident," Harry Windmill said, "we gave away any thoughts of adopting the rocket gun."

Another invention tested was an inflatable throw-ball. This was a plastic baseball size device. When thrown towards a patient, the water dissolved a switch which then inflated the device into a life buoy. Throwing the ball accurately from a moving boat in a heavy surf, or even from the shore, presented a few problems. Development was not pursued.

A backpack reel, conceived by Bruce Morgan and built by Bruce Tayler, seemed promising when first shown in 1970. The idea was to reverse the traditional reel and line procedure whereby the reel is stationary on the beach while the beltman takes the line out to the patient. The Tayler/Morgan invention attached the reel to the swimmer's back, with the line secured to a surf rod which was held by a lifesaver on the beach. This meant that the swimmer laid a stationary line as he went out, thus overcoming the problems of any dragging of the line by the conventional beltman. When the swimmer secured the patient in the drag position, he locked the reel and the line was reeled in from the beach. A marlin fishing rod and a parachute line (a strong synthetic braided light line was needed) were used in the pro-

SURF lifesavers Bruce Morgan, of the Torquay club and Bruce Tayler, of Lorne, have devised a new rescue method.

They demonstrated the equipment at a surf carnival at Gunnamatta beach yesterday.

Both members of the gear improvement committee of the Surf Life Saving Association of Australia, Bruce Morgan conceived the idea of the reel and light line.

The line is attached to the back of the rescuer and he is rushed back to shore with the victim, by a lifesaver who operates a huge "fishing rod."

Bruce Tayler built the rescue gear.

THE ONE that didn't get away. The strain shows as Bruce Tayler uses the "fishing rod" to bring Bruce Morgan and the "victim" to safety. The device worked well at a demonstration yesterday.

totype. It seemed to have promise but needed more development, some people thought, particularly the lock mechanism. A few were sceptical of the whole thing, but Bruce Tayler used it in a successful rescue at Point Lonsdale. However interest in the surf reel was overtaken by the development of the IRB during this period, and the model languishes in Harry Windmill's shed to this day.

At the World Lifesaving Congress in 1974, Victorian delegates watched a demonstration of an aqua scooter. This was an under-water machine, powered by 50cc internal combustion engine that was pull-started like a lawn mower. The lifesaver lay in the water face down while the scooter towed him and a torpedo tube out to the patient and back again. Interest faded when problems such as lack of reliability in starting the machine and sealing the engine emerged. Initial acceptance of the IRB at this time also put paid to the scooter.

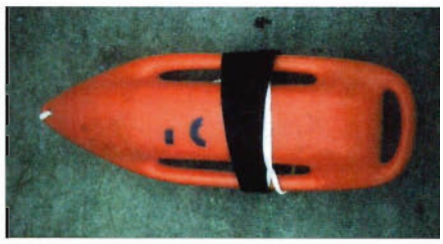

I.R.B. first developed in Victoria

Following the Association's 1965 tour in the USA, where delegates saw lifeguards operating with inflatable rescue boats (IRBs), National Council began investigating the possibility of using them in Australia, and Warren Mitchell was put in charge of developing and recommending boats suitable for Australian conditions. This development became newsworthy, and David Brown of Beaufort inflatable craft sales in Victoria, after seeing a newsreel of boats being tested by Warren Mitchell at Coogee Beach and Avalon Beach in New South Wales, approached State Centre with an offer to lend a Beaufort inflatable craft for similar development work in Victoria. State Centre put the project in the hands of public relations officer Kevin Roderick, who in turn asked Gear Steward Bob Millett to evaluate it and similar craft for use in local surf lifesaving conditions. With a motor borrowed from Outboard Marine Australia, Kevin Roderick, David Brown and Bob Millett, went down to the Barwon River for a first try-out.[3] down the floor. "The top of the keel was actually up against the floor board," Bob Millett explained. "When you pumped the keel up, it pushed it down and made a 'V' into it, thus allowing it to move along quickly. The pontoons at the side came up to a wide square bow, giving it a shovel-nosed shape at the front of the boat."

They put the boat into the Barwon River and motored up the river to get the feel of it. Then they went down the river and out through the river mouth at Barwon Heads and motored across to Ocean Grove behind the wave line, intending to test it against the surf. But at the first wave, it floundered. Its flat front could not break through the surf. Lightening the load by removing a man, they tried again. This time it cracked through, but at the expense of smashing the seat (thwart). Turning around and coming in, they found another problem: "It just would not surf," said Bob Millett. Later, David Brown removed the broken seat completely and gave the boat to Bob Millett and Kevin Roderick to 'develop', that is, to see what modifications might be needed to make it suitable for surf lifesaving work. Harry Windmill (Point Lonsdale) joined the team at this stage and they began experimenting with larger motors ("it was underpowered even with a 20 hp motor), short and long shafts, propeller pitches and other items. "Having rowlocks and oars proved useless," Harry Windmill explained. "About all we could determine at that stage was to settle on a nine-inch propeller," he added.

Harry Pittard lent the group his yellow Dunlop boat for comparative evaluation. "This was a much better boat for our purposes. It had a pointy bow and only three inflatable pontoons: one at each side and one for the front," Bob Millett said. However neither boat had a device to drain water. "We opened up the transom and put in self draining holes in the lower part, with flaps over the back of them," Bob Millett related. "If you got water in, you racked on the power to make the boat stand up on its backside and the water went out real quick!" Other improvements comprised putting an open protector (prop guard) on the propeller (it was encased later on) which was developed by Daryl Barnett (Ocean Grove), also an aircraft micro-switch to create a cut-out or 'dead-man' switch. Harry Windmill and Bob Millett attempted to waterproof the motor by putting a device on the hood of the motor containing flotation balls over the two snorkel tubes that would stop water entering the motor in the event of the boat turning over. They used two squash balls into which they put cerebin, a chemical which liquefied when hot but solidified when cool.

Trying to right an overturned boat threw up another challenge. "So we tied a rope onto the hand holds at one side. This worked well. If the boat went over, you threw the rope over the keel for that person to stand up on the pontoon and pull the rope to tip the boat over," Bob Millett explained. An add-on feature was to put in an inflatable rubber mat on the floor of the boat. In a mass rescue situation, the mat could be thrown overboard for people to cling to while the boat ferried them from the mat to the shore or went after others in greater distress.

At the end of that year's work, Bob Millett took the Dunlop IRB with him on holiday to Queensland, stopping in Sydney to meet up with Warren Mitchell who was evaluating IRBs for National Council. Catching up with Warren Mitchell at Avalon Beach, Bob Millett related: "He had a standard IRB with nothing done to it at all. I watched him going out. A wave hit it, filling up the boat and the next thing they were all in the water and trying to get it righted. After they brought it back to shore, I went to have a look at it. 'Haven't you got a means of self draining,' I asked. "Oh no," Warren Mitchell replied, 'this is the way it is." I then unwrapped my IRB and showed him the self-draining holes we had developed and from that time he did the same.

"At Manly beach a lifeguard/beach inspector I showed the boat did not seem too impressed with it: "It'll never take on," he commented drily. I heard similar comments from some people I took out on it at Greenmount Beach in Surfer's Paradise. But at Maroochydore I had a breakthrough. The club captain remarked, "It wouldn't beat me on a board, though." I said, "Want to try it?" "OK" he answered, "let's get someone as a patient." When the patient was in position, the club captain said "Go!" and took off. My boat was facing up the beach and I had to drag it into the water, turn it around, start the motor, get in and go. By that time he was about half way to the patient. I just went 'swish' past him, picked up the patient and was back to the beach before he had even got out to where the patient was.

When he came back he exclaimed, "Sheee! That's not bad!"

Winning over members to the capabilities of IRBs for surf rescue work proved a more difficult task than developing the boat itself. "Our biggest problem was getting acceptance," Harry Windmill related. "There was considerable resistance from State Centre members who wanted to keep the oared boats. At that time you never saw outboard motors running a surf line. It was a mentality of the fixed line and 'real men use oars' and they said our IRBs should stay on the river." If IRBs became surf lifesaving equipment, many argued, they would supplant the standard equipment of surf rescue work for the past 70 years, in which everyone had been trained and which everyone upheld as traditional symbols of surf lifesaving. So the IRB proponents, like crusaders on a mission, set about to demonstrate their craft wherever they could.

"We showed one off at the National Championships in Perth in 1971, and if anything, it convinced the Western Australians and a number of National Councillors who, a little later, had no hesitation in introducing it to surf lifesaving clubs," explained Harry Windmill. "We arranged with Beaufort and Outboard Marine to supply a new craft and motor in Perth, also with International Harvester to lend us a large utility to carry it around. At the City of Scarborough carnival a week before the National Championships, there was an enormous shore break and the oared boats could not get through to lay the buoys. A group of people had gathered around our boat, looking at it as if it were a toy, when National Superintendent Jack Dearlove asked us if we could do anything with it to help lay the buoys. I replied I needed a crew, so I asked a tall skinny bloke if he was a qualified surf lifesaver. When he said he was, I said, "Right, you're my crewman". Then he blurted out that he had never been in one of these things. I told him, "you soon will be. Get up front, hang on and do what I tell you!" So all day we played duty boat and people said to us later, "Hey, this thing might do something!". Then it was demonstrated at the National Championships in Perth a week later."

In 1973, National Council started preparing training and rescue procedures for IRBs, which by now a number of clubs around Australia were interested in purchasing. "After I sent a report to Sydney on our development work," Bob Millett related, "they asked us to supply information on rescuing people with IRBs. So Harry Windmill and I wrote the first procedures based on how to get someone into the boat and to put the boat in a safe position between waves and so on, also the first examination procedures. These rules have changed very little since." The first draft of these procedures, titled 'Inshore Rescue Craft - Inflatable Surf Rescue Craft Information and Instructions', was sent to State Centres in October 1973. By this stage the 'two-men-in-the-boat' called 'Crew' and 'Driver' was formalised to 'Bowman' and 'Coxswain', with the Coxswain as captain. In place of the experimental blow-up rubber blanket, which was placed on the floor of the first experimental boat for use in mass rescues, the American-designed torpedo buoy[4] was introduced as standard equipment to be carried in the craft. In mass rescue situations, patients were instructed "to grasp rope loops on side of craft". The torpedo buoy was later modified by Victorian member Kevin Roderick, who developed a foam rubber version of the original inflatable buoy.

Ocean Grove was the first Victorian surf life saving club to own an IRB, an Avon Craft, during the 1971/72 season, also purchasing a Volvo Penta motor to drive it. Point Lonsdale became the second club to acquire an IRB, which was donated by the Geelong West Jaycees and Christened on the beach, with a bucket of salt water, on 7 February 1973. Later that year, the Association's first training manual provided a list of Suggested Equipment Required for the Inflatable Surf Rescue Craft': foot bellows, can of WD40, pair of paddles, torpedo buoy, flippers, foot straps, Dunlop flexible 5 gallon petrol tank, transceiver in waterproof container and propeller guard. The Operator's Necessary Qualifications also make interesting reading compared to today's requirements: Rowed or swept in a surf boat; Must not panic at any time; must be a responsible club member; Have a working knowledge of outboard motors; Must not have any animosity towards board riders; Remember we are trying to attract new members, not run over them; All operators must have the ability to run from a wave —this is most important; Must have good eyesight; must have good reflex action; Must know your beach 'Where the Channel is"'.

'We used to take our IRBs to carnivals and gradually people came to see how useful they were," Harry Windmill and Bob Millett related. "One day a surf boat overturned and I went out in the IRB and rescued the crew," Harry Windmill added. "At a craft carnival at Barwon Heads/13th Beach in 1974, with a monster surf running, Bob Millet and I were in and out all day picking people up from boats, boards and skis." Then in 1975, as a result of National Council securing a Federal Government Grant to supply clubs with some IRBs and Jet Boats and after conducting a Total Inshore Rescue Boat National School at Cronulla, New South Wales, in September 1975 including the first inshore boat carnival, the future of IRBs was assured. Darryl Barnett, Secretary-Convenor of the Victorian Power Boat Sub-Committee of State Centre, presented a comprehensive report and recommendations to clubs on which boats to consider purchasing, 'Zodiac' heading the list above 'C Craft, AFD, Beaufort, Avon and Domino', and further modifications required to make them safe and sea-worthy such as synthetic fuel tanks, replacing transom plate screws with bolts and nuts, motor seals etc.

Clubs acquire IRBs

After Point Lonsdale's gift of a Beaufort IRB in 1973, Wye River became Victoria's third club to acquire one in 1974. Throughout the 73/74 and 74/75 seasons, these boats performed valiant service as duty boats at carnivals.

The next (and fourth) club to acquire an IRB was Port Fairy, in 1976. This was donated by the Port Fairy Apex Club. By now, however, and following the successful IRB school and carnival in Sydney in 1975, IRBs were put at the top of each club's shopping or donation list. In the 1976/77 season, Warrnambool, Woodside, Seaspray, Barwon Heads/13th Beach, Fairhaven. Torquay, Waratah Beach, Apollo Bay and Venus Bay acquired IRBs. An Avon craft was donated to Venus Bay by Gadsen Ltd. Apollo Bay was presented with a similar craft at the Australian Championships, also donated by Gadsen. Torquay's IRB was a Dunlop C120, modified in accordance with the National Council's recommendations, and used a 25 hp Johnson outboard motor.

Other clubs followed suit in the next season, 1977/78, during which time the IRB Training and Examination Manual was produced and the first state IRB examiners, Darryl Barnett and Russell Middleton were appointed in 1978. In 1978/79 season, Anglesea was donated a new IRB (by Alcoa) which enabled them to extend their patrolling from the scout camp at Point Addis to Point Roadknight. Gunnamatta's first season with an IRB proved a success. Other clubs to purchase an IRB that season were Point Leo, Lakes Entrance, Port Fairy, Portsea and Portland, with Bancoora buying an IRB from Torquay. By the end of the year, 1979, State Centre could announce that all 26 clubs were IRB equipped. Their rising use in rescues and in swiftly edgeing out the oared surfboats in rescues is seen in the following table (individual IRB rescues were not included until the 1976/77 season, being included under the general heading of 'boat' prior to this):

1970/71: 27 Boat

1976/77: 27 with lifeboat (19 IRB, 8 other)

1977/78: 27 IRB, 25 JRB, 3 surf boat)

1978/79: 32 IRB, 26 JRB, 20 helicopter)

Jet Surf Boats (JRBs) - Offshore Rescue Boats (ORBs)

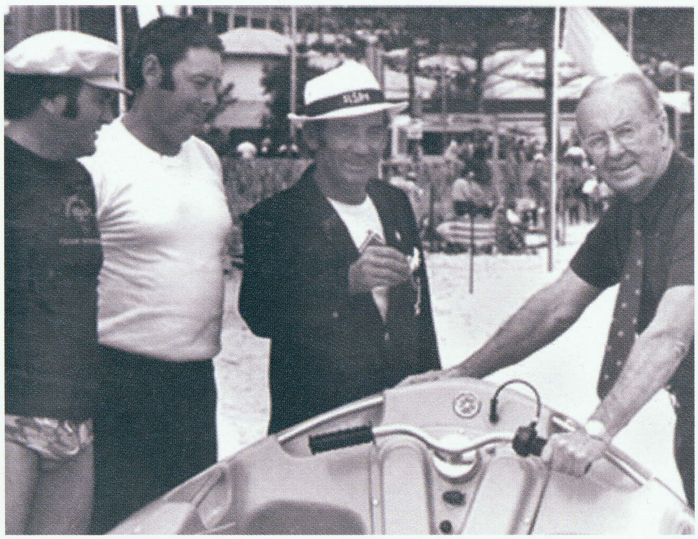

Victorian surf life saving clubs were the beneficiaries of the developments in powered craft carried out mostly in New South Wales and Queensland from the late 1950s then by members of the National Council's Power Craft

Committee from the early 1960s. The first power jet surf rescue boat was developed in New South Wales in 1967. This was a 5.5 metre fibreglass craft powered by a Ford V8 engine with a three stage Hamilton water jet drive through an impeller.

The first motorised surf craft to appear in Victoria was the 'Power Surf Boat' which State Centre put up as a prize for the Surf Carnival held at Rye back beach (Capri beach) on Sunday 13 December 1959. It was won by Lorne club. During 1959, David Boykett of Portsea club built a motorised rescue boat based on a South African offshore fishing boat. "With a 16 feet length and a 5 foot 6 inch beam, it carried four or five people comfortably," Bruce Tayler relates. "The crew held on to fixed ropes. It had a keel and chine construction with a deep false bottom, making it unsinkable and any deck wash drained away immediately. It was tiller steered and was powered by a water cooled English 6 horse power marine engine driving a shrouded propeller. The craft performed rescues but was most popular with club members for catching waves. After a few years service it was sold to a surf life saving club in the Manly-Waringah area."

Next came a surf craft donated by the Barwon Heads Progress Association to the Barwon Heads/13th Beach club in 1969 which seemed to herald a new era in surf craft and club efficiency. This fibreglass boat powered by a V8 engine driving a Hamilton jet had been designed and built in New South Wales for offshore patrol work. It proved its worth in the 1970 Australian Titles held at Ocean Grove, but in spite of BP donating the fuel to the club, it proved too expensive to maintain and was sold in 1973. Lack of a radio contact with boats also proved a drawback.

A foray into small jet, or mini-jet craft came when Torquay club won a jet scooter at the Australian Surf Championships held in Glenelg, South Australia in 1973. The boat had been donated by Goldring Engineering and was the prize for a draw out of a hat of 61 clubs Australia-wide who had shown significant increases in Bronze Medallions and active membership for the 1972/73 season. However over the two years the club kept it, it was plagued with faults and was sold off. In 1975, National Council put forward a submission to the Federal Government to fund the purchase of IRBs and mini-jets in order to give them to each state. Victorian State Centre received one Mutimer mini-jet.

The hull was manufactured by New Zealander Dave Mutimer who had worked closely with the National Power Craft Committee; the engine was an Austrian Rotax 44 HP 2-stroke engine which had been field tested in Queensland but still needed development even up to the time of its (qualified) recommendation by the committee. by clubs, its unreliability proved the downfall of the mini-jet. By that time, too, clubs were more actively involved in IRBs.

Victoria's next foray into the field of large powered craft came in 1975 with a Mutimer built 'surf chariot' powered by a Ford V8 engine driving a Hamilton jet unit, which was donated by the Bank of New South Wales. This craft was capable of a top speed of 50 mph and had a crew of three: Operation Skipper, Observer Operator and Swimmer, but was capable of carrying eight people. It was launched in 1975 by the Minister for Youth, Sport and Recreation Brian Dixon. This boat came into its own when State Centre's helicopter rescue service commenced operations in the 1978/79 season. The early title of Jet Rescue Boat later gave way to the title of Offshore Rescue Boat.

Administering for change

State Centre President George Nutbean led the Victorian team to Los Angeles to contest the Wieland Shield in July/August 1971 and arranged for a visit to Victoria of an American team for 1973. Between these two events, he headed an organisation undergoing the stresses of personnel changes. In 1971, two of the State Centre's leading figures passed away: former President Sprint Walker and former State Superintendent Phil Bennett, both of whom were foundation members. In 1972, State Superintendent Arnold Goetz stood down after 11 years in this demanding position, as did Noel Emselle after seven years as Secretary of the Board of Examiners. That following year, in June 1973, State Secretary Geoff Waters was transferred by his employer to Tasmania and Tony Thorburn stepped into the position, but only for a short period. An increase in funding from the state government by way of a special grant to employ a full-time officer enabled State Centre to appoint a full-time Administrative Executive Officer, Lee Caldwell, to take over a considerable number of the tasks previously undertaken by the Secretary. Another significant change in leading personnel occurred in 1973 when Bob Millett retired his position of Gear Steward after 13 years, as did Kevin Roderick as Public Relations Officer.

In addition to these major personnel changes, other pressures on State Centre in 1972 and 1973 also included managing changes in new oxygen equipment; involvement in tests on power craft, rescue buoys and surf boards; participation in a National Junior/Juvenile Surf Association which was first planned in August 1973 as an association with Surf Life Saving Australia to promote the nipper movement and finally became the Junior Surf Life Saving Association that year; and proposed participation in a helicopter rescue service for Victoria along the lines of a similar service started in Sydney in 1973. In addition, there suddenly appeared to be a lot more money flowing to State Centre by way of increased government grants, both state and —for the first time in 1973— from the Commonwealth government, as well as a growing number of sponsors from businesses and industry which all placed considerable strains on both time and management skills. The volume of paperwork from State Centre to the clubs increased dramatically during this period, giving rise to a niggling animosity towards State Centre from many clubs, especially those furthest from Melbourne. In a dispute with Bob Millett over an article he had written for the Geelong Advertiser in which he had questioned the centralising rule of State Centre, President George Nutbean resigned as President in February 1974. Deputy President Eric McGee became acting President until the Annual General meeting later that year.

Once again Alan Forster (Point Leo) indicated his intention to stand for President. John Worrell (Anglesea) also stated he (Worrell) was a likely candidate for the same position. Gordon Dann (Torquay), who was considering standing also, decided to support John Worrell, at which point Alan Forster decided not to nominate in order to have an orderly succession rather than an election. John Worrell however did not submit his written nomination in time and at that juncture Gordon Dann completed a nomination and was declared duly elected President, being the sole nomination for the position.

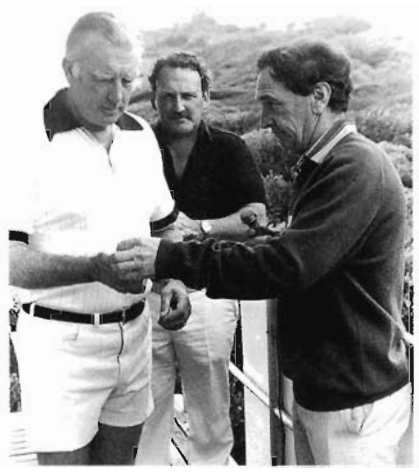

Gordon Dann was originally from Middle Park Life Saving Club, became a member of Torquay Surf Life Saving Club and joined Lorne Surf Life Saving Club (dual membership), and had assisted in the formation of the Gunnamatta Surf Life Saving Club, being made a life member in 1965. He had been an Otways district supervisor and a member of State Centre from the Board of Examiners since the early 1960s. Perhaps the most outstanding memories that members retain of Gordon Dann's leadership are his continual arguments with the legendary Harry Pittard during carnivals and at meetings, and that he revived the practice of the founding President Sprint Walker in visiting as many clubs as he could. This had the effect of providing the clubs with more focus on recruitment and team spirit.

During his period of leadership, considerable changes were in the planning stage, and Gordon Dann, who was a stickler for tradition and hard work, worked well with State Secretary Tony Thorburn and Public Relations Officer Kevin Roderick whose sights were set more on the future development of the surf life saving movement in Victoria in terms of bringing in the new technologies of a helicopter service and communications link-ups.

In 1977 Gordon Dann retired from the position of President due to ill health, and was succeeded by Tony Thorburn. A year later the helicopter service was commenced and a whole new chapter was started in the development of surf life saving in Victoria.

Adopting an 'All Beaches Rescue Policy'

With a new President in Tony Thorburn in 1977, State Centre members undertook a major policy review of its beach patrol services. Outlining the need for this review, Tony Thorburn wrote in the 1977/78 Annual Report: "Over the past few years it has become increasingly noticeable that the bathing public is ignoring our request to swim between the flags and are swimming where they choose, and to a greater degree at unpatrolled beaches," referring to councils and private land developers opening up new coastal beaches without asking for input from nearby surf life saving clubs or State Centre. It was becoming increasingly evident to club members that these new access roads, parking facilities and to lets were exposing the public to hazardous beach areas.

In responding to this situation, Tony Thorburn explained, "State Centre has been faced with these alternatives: to restrict ourselves to our historically patrolled beaches, or to extend our services to all areas where required? We have opted for the latter alternative. From patrolling 26 beaches, we now have to do our best to cover some 600 miles of coastline.'

The choice of blanket coverage of the coast (excluding Port Philip Bay which was covered by the Royal Life Saving Society's life saving clubs) was a major change in direction for State Centre and for all its surf life saving clubs. The way to achieve this type of total coverage lay in investing in expensive technology such as mobile vehicles, IRBs, jet boats, and "...we hope in the near future," Tony Thorburn added, "...a helicopter rescue service". A radio network was planned to link all of these to each clubhouse. Outpost patrols by each club and the use of towers would fill in the gaps.

Paying for this greatly extended service became State Centre's main priority. "None of this sophistication comes cheaply. The majority of it, being mechanical and operating in a salt water environment, has a high purchase price, a short life span and requires heavy and expensive maintenance." Consequently State Centre embarked on a fundraising and recruitment program while at the same time conducting a public awareness program "to better equip the public to look after themselves". It was a bold vision.

Funding from Government sources

Government funding to State Centre was a welcome benefit that in many seasons kept the association going. From an original no-strings grant shortly after the formation of State Centre in the late 1940s, the Victorian Government altered the arrangement in 1962 to allocate two grants— one for Association activities ($6,000) and one titled a 'Government Building Grant' ($3,500) which State Centre was to divide up among the clubs. For the 1964/65 season, this had increased only slightly to $8,000 and $5,000 respectively. In order to assist clubs, State Centre decided to allocate the club grant among eight clubs each season in rotation. This total of $13,000 jumped to $31,000 for the 1968/69 season following a submission to the government on the needs of the club re-building program. It doubled the amount to State Centre ($16,000) and trebled the amount for clubs to $15,000.

The next large increase came in the 1972/73 season, with State Centre receiving $24,000 following a submission for assistance with the purchase of new gear and to help subsidise the appointment of a full-time officer (Lee Caldwell). The club building grant, however, stayed at the same amount given five years earlier ($15,000) and only marginally increased to $17,500 five years later. In 1973 the Commonwealth Government contributed a grant to National Council for the first time of $100,000 to be divided among the states to help with the purchase of new equipment such as IRBs. The Victorian State Centre share was $11,000. The following season, 1974/74, State Centre showed its first deficit ever, around $2,400 which was eased by another Commonwealth grant for that year of $6,000.

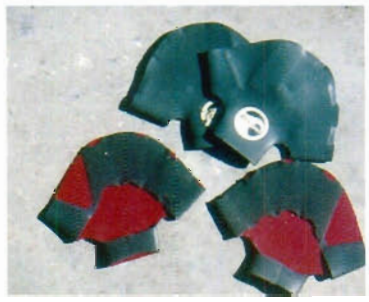

At that rate the financial future of State Centre seemed on the edge. Fortunately for the Association, the state government had embarked on a program to help sporting associations 'professionalise' their administrations, many of whom were finding themselves in the same position as State Centre with ever-increasing demands for activities but with few staff and resources to cope. The newly established Ministry of Youth, Sport and Recreation, through its Minister Brian Dixon, announced almost a doubling of the grant given to State Centre for the 1976/77 season, from $24,000 to $45,750 plus $17,500 for the clubs building fund. In addition, the grant from the Commonwealth increased to $17,500. Three years later, the amount to State Centre increased to nearly $60,000, however the government changed its allocation arrangement to the clubs by announcing a $2 for $1 subsidy scheme up to a maximum of $12,500 for any individual club. Once again, this was a most generous contribution by the state government and contributed greatly to club building programs. It was extended even further the following year on a $500 for $500 subsidy basis.

From the 1981/82 season, State Centre received even more government assistance, a total of $109,000, but this time the funding was tied to particular projects, leaving State Centre with only a marginal increase in money available for general administration. The allocations were: $68,000 for State Centre, $10,000 for the Lifeguard scheme (this was the first year the government contributed to this scheme which started in 1978 but was expanding rapidly), $13,000 to the club 'dollar for dollar' subsidy scheme, and $17,500 for building grants. Although the overall total received the following season, 1982/82, reached $125,000, State Centre was again feeling the pinch, especially with even greater costs involving its Helicopter Rescue Service (in particular, its plan to buy a helicopter in place of leasing), boats etc. A fundraising scheme of lucky Bingo tickets was embarked upon, however with little return.

Over the next few seasons, state government funding increased each year until the 1987/88 season with a total of $190,850 from the state government and the regular amount of $21,780 from the Commonwealth government it had been receiving for some years (plus special purpose grants for the Offshore Rescue Boat, a motorised subsidy grant to clubs and the field officer salary grant). Then in the following year, 1988/89, the bubble burst, as it were, when state government funding dropped to only $143,600. Coinciding with State Centre's decision to halt its Helicopter Rescue Service and sell its helicopter to offset the huge debts and almost insolvent position of State Centre at that time, it seemed that less government assistance was the last piece of news wanted by State Centre members. It meant that staff numbers and some programs had to be cut in line with the ability (or inability) to pay for them. At the same time a new approach to financing had to be devised.

Development in the 1970s

Some of the most far-reaching changes to affect the surf life saving movement occurred in the late 1970s. Beach patrols acquired a whole new image—and greater levels of effectiveness in rescue situations— after surfboards, IRBs and even flippers replaced the traditional reel and line equipment, which was later relegated to competition use only[5]. The Nipper movement came of age.

A comprehensive radio communication network was established by the mid 1970s to link all clubs and patrol units, including inshore and offshore rescue craft. A helicopter patrol and rescue service was introduced in 1978. Following almost a decade of debate on whether to allow women to become surf lifesavers, they were finally admitted as active members from the 1979/80 season. Finally the first professional lifeguards took up their positions on the Jan Juc and Anglesea beaches in late 1979, then on the Torquay beach at the start of the next decade, on 2 January 1980.[6]

In between organising these major changes, State Centre members also attended to the everyday planning and management of carnivals, examinations and worries of raising sufficient finance for its ever increasing range of services. Added to the concerns of its own centrally organised programs was the worry of how to support the efforts of its 26 clubs to maintain funding and membership, particularly after a period of declining membership in the early 1970s. However not all these changes were accepted unanimously.

Similarly the change-over from reels to IRBs in patrols was met with some reluctance from members whose previous training - even personal image - of effective life saving was bound up in the traditional reel and line. Almost ten years passed from the development of the IRBs in the early 1970s until all clubs were equipped with them, the last in the 1981/82 season.

More enthusiastically embraced at first was the concept of conducting a helicopter surf rescue service and the boost that this would give to setting up a comprehensive communication network between sea and air craft and beach patrols and clubhouses.

Radio Network and first Jet Boat

In the meantime, work on the radio network progressed with Eric McGee and Peter Craven forming a State Centre sub-committee. A grant from National Council finally helped establish the radio network in the 1976/77 season. Then sponsorship funding from the Bank of New South Wales enabled State Centre to purchase a jet boat to start the "Wales Jet Rescue Boat Service" which was launched by the Minister of Youth, Sport and Recreation Brian Dixon at the St Kilda Marina on 17 February 1977. With the radio network and the jet rescue boat in place, attention could be focussed on what new State Centre President Tony Thorburn saw as the final link in the rescue chain — the helicopter.

Nipper movement comes of age

Many members saw development of the nipper movement as the answer to lift membership, especially in the long term, but it took some time before this concept was equally embraced at State Centre level. Although some Victorian clubs were in the forefront of forming nipper groups (for example, Portsea club as early as 1953) and then forming a central but loosely organised group to help promote and support club activities, the opportunity to join in a national nipper structure in 1973 was deferred by State Centre until 1981.

Victorian delegates attended a national conference in 1973 which promoted the establishment of a National Junior Surf Lifesaving Association comprised of state associations. Following the conference, all states formed state branches within the next two years, except Victoria. The Victorian Division of the National Junior Association was not formed until 1981, thus becoming the last state to join the national body.

For some members of State Centre, it was as if the nipper movement and those organising it had to prove their worth before gaining the full attention of State Centre. Some viewed nipper groups as merely a child minding exercise, while others viewed nippers as primarily a local club responsibility and not necessarily a primary target of State Centre promotional activity.

Funding did not continue and it was not until the 1979/80 season that funding for a professional lifeguard service was secured through the combined efforts of local government authorities and foreshore committees, as at Anglesea and Jan Juc, then from 1980 between State Centre, local authorities and sponsorship contributions from BP Australia.*

'The Heavies'

by Bruce Tayler

Barwon Heads/13th Beach operated the first serious inboard powered surf craft in Victoria, following the small wooden power craft of Lorne and Portsea which saw more recreational service than work, and the small jet scooter operated by Torquay.

In 1968 the club was presented with this craft, which was designed and built in New South Wales for offshore patrol work, by the Barwon Heads Progress Association via a generous donation from Mr. A. Johnson. Such a craft - and only the fourth built in Australia - carried the hopes of putting Barwon Heads "on the map" and it was gratefully accepted by club President John Ingler.

The first crew comprising John Bell, Brian Hogan, Ken Allen, John Ingler and Don Garrett were sent to Sydney for training in using the craft. Other crew members Malcolm Bell and Ian Kerer received training from this crew.

The craft was of fibreglass construction and was powered by a V8 engine driving a Hamilton jet. On the day of its christening and launching it performed a rescue immediately, picking up a young boy who was clinging to a bridge pile near the mouth of the river. The craft then patrolled mainly between Bancoora and Ocean Grove, but with no radio contact with clubs, its activities were limited. The only major mishap was its capsizing and coming to grief at the eastern end of Ocean Grove beach!

Perhaps its greatest moment came during the 1970 Australian titles held at Ocean Grove, where National Superintendent Jack Dearlove praised the crew's efforts and claimed that the success of the carnival was due to their efficiency in the big seas. On another occasion they had to jettison the anchors to avoid swamping.

In spite of BP donating the fuel, the boat's maintenance and general operating expenses were a considerable drain on club funds. The club sold the craft in 1973 to a Geelong resident, thus bringing to an end the first chapter of power boats in the state.

However in 1974, State Centre recognised the need for a continuing offshore rescue operation. Through contacts arranged by Peter Grant (Point Lonsdale club), sponsorship was secured from the Bank of New South Wales (later to be called Westpac). This enabled the purchase of a Mutimer 'Surf Chariot' which was powered by a Ford V8 engine driving a Vieland single stage jet unit. Len Price supplied the craft.

The 'Offshore Rescue Boat' (CRB) was launched by Hon. Brian Dixon at St Kilda Marina in November 1975. The first crew members were Laurie Ryan, John Nelson and John Quigley of Bancoora club, Darryl Barnett, Ralph Harries, Russell Middleton, and Albert Dodsman of Ocean Grove club, John Oakley and Alan Joyce of Point Lonsdale, and Peter Ablett of Jan Juc club. Four crews — consisting of three members to a crew — were rostered. The craft was launched in the Barwon River and patrolled outside to the neighbouring surf beaches. It was radio equipped and set to the same frequency as surf clubs. If necessary, messages could be relayed via the Ocean Grove club.

Normal daily procedure was to contact clubs within the operating range, that is, from Portsea to Jan Juc, to inquire if they had the necessary patrol strength or if there were deficiencies in equipment or personnel. The crew then offered to stand off their beach until any deficiencies were made good.

Since there was no garaging facility available for the 'Wales' boat, it first resided outside the home of Laurie Ryan at Marshall. Crew working bees were held there and later at Laurie's home when he moved to Barwon Heads. At times up to 20 members slept over at Laurie's house when major works were undertaken. The crew rostered on a particular weekend would carry out service and maintenance on the following Wednesday evening in order to have the boat ready for the next weekend's crew. All clubs were invited to send representatives to accompany the crew on its missions in order to familiarise members with the boat's operations and capabilities.

In the 1977/78 season, with John Oakley as powercraft officer and Laurie Ryan as captain, six Jet Rescue Boat (JRB) awards were gained and 25 rescues were recorded. Running costs for the season totalled $4,736. Costs varied from year to year, even reducing to a low $2,858 in 1978/79, but at all times the service operated below sponsorship income and thereby boosting funds to other State Centre services. When the helicopter rescue service commenced operations in the 1978/79 season, the jet boat service worked closely with it. There were 29 jet boat rescues that season.

To allay any doubts in the minds of the Board of Examiners as to the boat's efficiency, a presentation was made to the annual instructional conference at Somers in 1979. Various rescue scenarios were enacted involving jet boat, helicopter and radio communications. Both units operated under 'Wales' (later Westpac) signage and sponsorship. Chief Instructor Warren Rennie from National Council voted the JRB crew at the most efficient ARC re-qualifiers of the conference.

During the 1979/80 season, with Russell Middleton as co-ordinator and Laurie Ryan as captain, 66 missions were conducted and 29 people were rescued. The jet boat service gained three awards. A mobile caravan was acquired that season and was set up near the launching ramp at Ocean Grove as a radio base to support the service. Harry Windmill, Ted Giles and Laurie Ryan started this service which later led to the establishment of today's surf command.

Navigating the Barwon River after launching presented problems due to sandbars. When an explosion occurred aboard the boat, it was then considered unsafe and was presented to the Geelong Technical School as a rescue tender for use in school boating courses. State Centre replaced the jet boat with a 23 foot 'Shark Cat', fitted with twin 175 HP outboard motors. It was purchased from the National Safety Council for $20,000. John Firth became its captain, and the combined helicopter and boat services were promoted as being available 365 days a year. Another boat — a Haines Hunter — was bought (at a token price) from BP, thanks to Bob Woods' services. This was based at St Kilda marina and was used mainly in the training of helicopter crews.[1] In 1983/84 season there were 47 rescues, but the following season saw 29 missions, 32 boats assisted and 181 people rescued.

A radar unit for the Shark Cat was donated by Corio Rotary Club (undoubtedly at Harry Windmill's instigation), and played an important role in the next season, 1985/86, with 48 missions and 208 people rescued or assisted. However the type of rescues being performed by the crew led to State Centre purchasing a larger boat, a modified 7.8 metre Cougar Cat powered by twin 200 h.p. Mercury outboard motors, which had more space to hold an increasing range of gear: oxygen equipment, scuba diving equipment, defribillator, mini-reel and general first aid supplies. The Shark Cat was sold to a Geelong resident who used it for fishing. Sponsorship for the new boat came from the Yellow Pages — an interesting coincidence since the boat was already yellow coloured when it was bought in 1985/86!

By now the Barwon River site was unsuitable to use as a base and operations were moved to the Queenscliffe boat launching area, which was also used by the Coast Guard service. Although there was some initial animosity between the two groups, it was short lived, and both worked well together under our captain, Ian Cove. In that season, 1986/87, 40 missions were undertaken and 360 people assisted or rescued. Another difficulty arose over parking the boat during the week on the nature strip at Barwon Heads. Complaints from neighbours, plus being an unsuitable location for maintenance and storage, led Harry Windmill to search for something more suitable. The Geelong Regional Authority offered the use of a large shed it had recently acquired. Since the shed had previously stored Dieldrin products, it was uninhabitable and consequently it was made available to the crew on a rent free basis.

National Council subsidised the production of an Off-Shore Rescue Boat manual, and the team of Laurie Ryan, Alan Joyce, John Nelson and Ian Cove spent many hours on this project. It was presented at a National Conference at Tallabudgera and a plaque was struck in recognition of this work.

Sponsorship was greatly reduced in the 1989/90 season due to the official submission not being received by Yellow Pages, although they were still keen to continue as sponsors. The result was that the ORB was reduced to standby operations only. With Geoff Richmond as captain, 14 rescues were still effected. The position worsened the following season, 1990/91, when operations were suspended for the start of the season. Fortunately National Council and Sandridge developers provided funds to enable the boat and crews to operate, although this was evidently only a temporary arrangement. State Centre organised a special fund raising effort, with ORB personnel manning the telephones as well as conducting a 'tin rattle' at Victoria Market and an 'end-to-end' coin layout on the St Kilda promenade. Regrettably, the 1991/92 season was the ORB service's last season and operations finished in mid-February, 1992.

When the disbandment of the Offshore Rescue Service was announced, it was observed that many members had clocked up more than 1000 hours of service, with some members achieving more than 10 years of service (in 1986 Ian Cove arranged a ten-year anniversary dinner at the Beaconsfield Hotel and presented plaques to those members).

Although there were many rescues made in difficult conditions and locations over the years of the Offshore Rescue Boat's operations, two deserve special mention. The first was when yachts in the Melbourne to Devonport race struck trouble in high winds and big seas when sailing through the Heads. Four yachts were dismasted and suffered breakages, but they were all towed back to safety by the ORB crew.

On another occasion a yacht caught in a big southerly blow and huge seas had grounded on a reef outside the rip, fracturing the hull and in danger of sinking. Their distress call was responded to by the ORB duty crew of Albert Dodman, Alan Joyce and Michael Portello, also by a tug which tried to pass a line to the stricken yacht. The ORB sent a call to the Wales helicopter to bring a pump to the yacht crew who were making little headway in their bucket brigade to prevent the yacht from going under. When all attempts to pass a line to the yacht failed, ORB crewman Michael Portello risked his life by swimming a small line across and the tug's tow line was then secured. By this time the helicopter had arrived with a pump suspended from a static line. Lowering the pump onto the ORB boat proved a most hazardous operation in the gusty conditions and heaving of the boat in the heavy seas. Finally the transfer was finished, and then, taking advantage of a temporary lull between waves, Albert Dodman drove the boat quickly towards the yacht where the pump was handed over to Michael Portello. Portello then manned the pump and assisted with the yacht while the tug pulled it off the reef and towed it to Queenscliffe. All aboard scrambled to dry land just before the yacht settled on the bottom of the water. In the eyes of observers, this operation fully deserved a meritorious award!

Apollo Bay club conducted similar operations to the Barwon Head and Port Phillip ORB crews, using their IRB when called out for searches. The IRB's limited range was a handicap, but an application to the Victorian Boating Council resulted in the club purchasing a 22 foot Hydrofield boat powered by a 175 HP motor, and fully equipped with radio and rescue equipment. This craft performed well but its size created storage problems. It was replaced by a rigid hull 17' 6" Sea Tiger powered by a 75 HP Mercury, with a seven hour operating range. The club had its own training program for the crew.

Conditions at Port Campbell soon led to the club upgrading from IRBs to 'heavies'. One day during Easter 1980, with a monstrous sea running, the club was summoned to perform a rescue at Loch Ard Gorge using an IRB. In spite of the heads being 'closed', club members negotiated the exceptional conditions, placing themselves in danger, and managed to locate and secure the two people in distress. The return trip to Port Campbell was an ordeal in itself. With four people aboard, the craft was not fast enough to outrun the surf. This successful rescue earned a meritorious award for the driver and crewman.

Realising that IRBs were inadequate for big sea rescues outside the entrance to Port Campbell inlet, the club acquired in January 1980 a five metre Avon financed by the Shire of Heytesbury, federal and state governments and the Timboon Apex and Lions clubs. Admiralty navigation charts specify that the inlet should be avoided at all costs. Since the inlet has a crane-equipped jetty which caters for local fishing boats, it proved the only suitable launching place for boats of the Avon's size. This craft enabled the club to meet any search and rescue calls from their local hazardous areas. In 1989 the club was able to secure a grant and bank loan to purchase (at auction) the ex-National Safety Council's Zodiac 'Pelican', a fully sea-going rigid hull inflatable with emergency self-righting gear facility. The Avon was sold after eight years demanding service.

The Pelican's operations involved having 18 trained drivers. The annual running cost of between $32-40,000 is born by the club and no fuel subsidy exists to feed the two 70 HP outboard motors, which are also replaced annually. In 1993 the federal government presented the club with a one-off grant of $375 towards the cost of operation.

Port Campbell club's boat operations co-ordinator Ross Powell has produced a detailed operation manual endorsed by National Council. Since Port Campbell lies at the heart of Victoria's infamous shipwreck coast, the club oversees 60 km of coastline from Johanna River to Childers Cove. Interestingly, turbulent conditions do not lead to the most rescues and still conditions offer a false sense of security to marine activity participants. Regular duties for the crews include diver rescues, fishing mishaps, cliff face rescues and assisting police with body searches, all of which require being available 12 months of the year.

In the mid 1970s a range of businesses and other organisations joined the club to form an emergency rescue services group. All shops and businesses in the area were issued with an emergency service directory and a map to assist with potential rescue grid readings. Port Campbell club would have the most challenging surveillance area in Australia and deserves recognition for their efficient boat rescue service.

Inshore Rescue Boats

IRBs to the rescue

When inflatable craft were devised [1] the original concept was to produce a portable boat when deflated. The resulting craft turned out to have the added features of exceptional buoyancy coupled with light weight. Production models, however ranged from two to ten metres and the idea of collapsibility was abandoned.

There were no established inflatable craft standards then. After trialing available makes, the approved models became the Zodiac using a 25 h.p. Evinrude or Johnson motor. These were titled 'Inshore Rescue Boats' but were referred to by the clubs as 'rubber duckies'. They had three separate inflated compartments plus an inflatable spine to tension the 'V' bottom.

Zodiac also produced a composite constructed model having a fibreglass rigid bottom/transom with an affixed inflatable top. Although this model was slightly heavier, some clubs with no submerged rocks purchased them as their maintenance level was minimal.

Other makes such as Achilles and Arancia came on the market with SLSA approval so clubs had a choice of both shape and price.

The Evinrude/Johnson (same motor manufacturer) model was user-friendly, and two-piece propeller safety-guards were mass produced to accommodate clubs. Some club IRB captains took a fancy to Mercury motors but they were more expensive as the suppliers did not offer a similar subsidy. Tohatsu motors also found favour with clubs in view of a ready minor modification leading to a gain in power.

The whole Surf Life Saving movement had to rapidly establish :

- the standard specifications and approved makes and models to be used by clubs;
- a procedure for performing rescues in the surf;

- the procedures covering instruction of theory, practice and driver qualifications;
- production of a manual covering all these points.

Within 15 years about 750 drivers gained their awards in Victoria. All bronze medallion awards included the ability to act as crewman which entailed launching procedures, assisting the driver with surf negotiation, trimming the boat on turns, patient pick up, on-board resuscitation and patient removal.

In the early 1980s, the Somers Board of Examiners instruction weekend included active participation of all members in patient pick up in order to appreciate the procedures of examining crewmen.

As anticipated, an IRB became a standard item of patrol requirements. For some of the smaller clubs, this imposed a financial burden with the cost of a boat assembly in the mid-1970s around $2,500 for a hull and $980 for a motor (which was OMC subsidised), a sum many clubs could not afford. It was also necessary to send members to a neighboring club for training and examination.

Regular patrol use demanded weekly or daily maintenance disciplines such as hosing out the hull, running the motor in fresh water and refilling the fuel cell in readiness for emergency use.

Clubs such as Pt. Leo, Pt. Lonsdale, Barwon Heads 13th Beach, Fairhaven and Bancoora also had a conveyance problem owing to the distance or terrain between beach and clubhouse, requiring further expensive transportation vehicles. Fuel supply was also a major consideration.

Regular protective maintenance plans also had to be instituted in order to keep wear and tear to a minimum. Replacement costs continued to rise annually. Currently (2001) it is $8,500 to replace a hull, $2,700 a motor and $400 for a fuel cell. At these costs, donors are hard to find.

As patrol use steadily increased, so new statistics were added to annual reports, namely IRB drivers and crew awards and the number of rescue performed using an IRB. Although the annual report of 1971-72 mentioned the trial and use of IRBs in some clubs, the majority of rescues were still being performed using reel and line.

Twenty years later, rescues with reel and line were only one whereas rescues using the IRB totalled 469. In the following year (1994) use of the reel and line was discontinued altogether and replaced with the rescue tube, one of which all IRBs carried for use by the crewman in unmanoeuvrable locations.

Originally contact between the patrol and IRB crew was made using signal flags from the beach with the reply being hand signals. Naturally this system relied totally on the crew constantly watching the beach, which was difficult in large surf, or when undertaking a search operation.

Various attempts at fitting transom mounted waterproof radios were tried but complete success was not achieved until John Fox (Lorne Club) developed a waterproof pouch and harness which was worn by the driver. This device provided positive two way communication, enabling patient rescue directions to the IRB and vice-versa to shore personnel for first aid requirements on the IRB's return.

Many feats of bravery have been carried out in conditions of extreme challenge, some passing unnoticed and some attracting meritorious awards. Also the mechanisation of surf patrols has resulted in the saving of lives, in numbers hitherto not possible, by enlisting the skills and abilities of a wider range of lifesavers.

The arrival of IRBs was also a great boon to surf carnival operations. Prior to their introduction, the host club had to supply a surf boat and crew for the day's duties, such as laying and maintaining the three sets of buoys, signalling the placegetters of R&R and Belt races, and generally monitoring competitor safety. The IRB fulfilled these duties more efficiently and in a fraction of the time. Their success in these areas prompted Victorian State Centre to purchase two IRBs for carnival and special event use.

IRBs have also been invaluable to clubs for water safety patrolling during their fund-raising swimming competitions.

As with any equipment where the discipline and efficiency of operation is concerned, there also arises the element of competition. It was not long before a range of events was devised to encourage keen IRB competition between clubs, becoming popular winter contests involving clubs at both state and national level.

Since all events are time orientated, clubs who could afford it, purchased separate craft and motors for competition only. Hull modifications were performed (within the limits of scrutineers, motors were 'blue printed' and super-tuned plus fitted with a stainless steel super-cupped propellor and a streamlined hand-filled prop-guard.

Simon Knight (Portsea Club) records the following observations and recollections of early IRB competition in Victoria:

"Competitions began in the early 1980s and the participating clubs increased into the mid 1980s. The carnival aggregate points were generally fought out between Portsea, Woolamai Beach and South Melbourne. Other consistent clubs included Barwon Heads/13th Beach, Wye River, Bancoora, Venus Bay and Cape Paterson.

The initial rules, I believe, were derived from National Council rules, but on attending our first Aussies, we soon discovered numerous differences between our interpretation and that of interstate clubs. One obvious difference was the importance placed on the carrying of compulsory equipment such as tow ropes, etc. which we never really bothered with.

IRB carnivals were originally held in the depths of winter, from about June through to September, with the Vic. Titles being the final carnival run over two days.

The rules have had some significant changes since the first carnivals; the most memorable being changes to the start and finish of races. Originally the boat had to be dragged into the surf at the start of a race and also out again and over a finish line some way up the beach. Today the race ends by the driver running across the finish line when the boats hits the sand. This change was very significant because it meant that very lightweight crews were suddenly viable, whereas under the original rules they were usually beaten by the bigger crews as the race was often won on 'the drag'.

The Assembly Race also changed significantly, in that the motor and fuel cell had to be carried some distance to the boat before assembly could begin. The fastest way of doing this was for the driver to get the motor and the crewman to get the fuel cell. Again 'lightweights'were at a distinct disadvantage as they usually lost the race at the start, being unable to get the motor to the boat in an acceptable time. (I'm sure back injuries may, however, have been reduced by changing this rule).

Much time and effort was devoted in the early days to the development of mechanisms to speed up the Assembly Race. At the Australian Titles a wide range of ingenious devices could be seen to assist in getting fuel cell and motor secured to the boat in a minimum of time. These included quick secure and release engine clamps and frames around the fuel cell which would virtually be thrown into the front of the boat and secured automatically by spring loaded clips. I believe that in the end the clubs which won the Assembly Races were those who devoted the most time in developing clever devices to assist at the start. Thankfully National Council decided to go back to basics and ruled that we had to stay with original engine clamps and the fuel cell being tied in with rope.

Another contentious issue was the ruling on the motor being stopped before the driver could get out of the boat. It was argued over many beers whether 'stopped' meant the propeller ceasing to turn, or the engine being electrically 'dead', even though it may have been still spinning at 5,000 rpm. Initially the former was the official interpretation, however, this was later changed to the latter version, resulting in clubs developing all sorts of elaborate 'kill switches' (before these became standard) on motors.

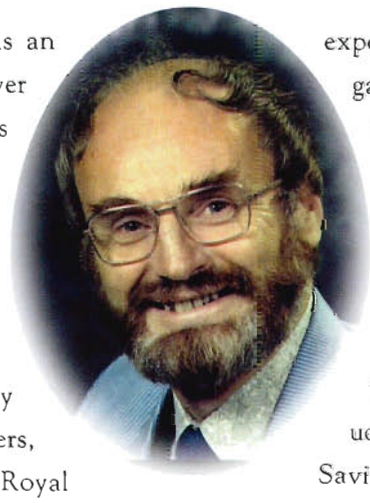

In the early years it was rare to see a carnival moved or postponed, due to the size of the surf. This later became more common, probably because of the logistical problems in getting through the program with huge surf, as much as a safety issue.

As more and more clubs entered crews, they had to face the extra cost of having a suitable road trailer with provision for two motors plus jerry cans of fuel. A special mechanic was engaged to prepare the motor and modify prop guards to limit drag. Finding a lightweight 'patient' with strong arms was important plus hours of training.

The inclusion of power craft operation has become an exciting and fruitful addition to surf life saving, ushering in a new mechanised era which has saved countless lives.

Eric McGee

'The quiet achiever of Surf Life Saving'

Eric could be described as an unassuming, quiet achiever and Surf Life Saving has indeed been most fortunate to have had his input for over 54 years.

He grew up in Williamstown, and just like many of those early Point Lonsdale members, they all came from the Royal Life Saving Club at Williamstown.

In Eric's case this was 1945, and straight away he had his Royal Bronze Medallion and started competing in R&R, March Past and as a beach sprinter. Then along with Jack Meehan and Harry Windmill, Eric joined Pt. Lonsdale and gained his Surf Bronze Medallion (No. 26743) on 12 February, 1949.

Point Lonsdale were, from their beginnings and for many years, very competent and well respected, particularly in R&R and March Past. This was for Eric the great experience which would see this man make contribution in a number of ways and whilst he will tell you he was expelled from Williamstown for competing in surf (then re-instated), Eric was, and still is, a most dedicated surf life saver but also for Royal, and was made a Life Member of Williamstown in March, 1952.

Surf life saving was indeed fortunate to gain this man already equipped with the experienceœ from Royal— he gained his Surf Instructor's certificate in 1955 (V39) and first officiated at the 1956 Olympic year Australian Championships. This was to be just the beginning of what was to be a contribution that lasted for nearly fifty years of continuous active service to Surf Life Saving Victoria and Australia. Eric, in these last few years of preparing this history, has again made an invaluable contribution.

For his service to surf life saving, Eric was given Life Membership.

This was in addition to his Williamstown Life Membership, Life Membership of his Club, Pt. Lonsdale, the Victorian State Centre 1970 and Surf Life Saving Australia (1978). Eric is also a proud recipient of the 75th Anniversary Commemorative Medal he received in 1982.

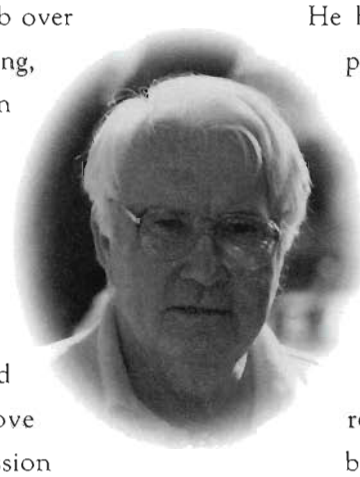

Finally, it is worth mention that during his term as a Victorian Vice President and Deputy President, 1971-77, Eric actually chaired the State Council meetings for a period of some months leading up to the next Annual General Meeting. This was one more of those great contributions that have made this movement what it is today.

'A perfectionist's attention to detail'

1931 - 2002

Affectionately known as Bob over all his years in surf life saving, special mention of this man includes his sometimes perfectionist attention to detail, which has kept us all on our merit over a long period of time.

Bob Millett

From the words of Fred Barnett of the Ocean Grove Club, he says in a submission relating to Bob's enthusiasm for life saving, quote "his particular dedication was shown in the field of administration and it would be appropriate to say that no-one would surpass his efforts in detail, statistics, supplying of information and, ensuring that administration is performed correctly and follows the right procedures."

Pain in the butt, frustrating, a thorn in the side, call it what you may, this man was always correct and we very much needed him. He was, at the writing of this book, a most reliable source of statistical information.

As a youngster and a Geelong boy, he started out at Eastern Beach in the Swimming and Life Saving Club. He was among the small group who went out to Ocean Grove in 1948. The Ocean Grove Club, after a wobbly start, re-started in 1953 and Bob was part of the reforming of this now great Club.

He gained his Surf Bronze in 1954 and became and Ocean Grove Club Secretary in 1955, a position he held through to 1964.

He held a number of other Club positions as well as gaining just about every Surf Life Saving Award in the book.

These areas were of deep interest to Bob, however he still found time to become the State Centre Gear Steward. This truly brought results for life saving not seen before (or since) in the development of the Inshore Rescue Boats (IRBs)—rubber duckies. Suffice to say that this particular story is dealt with elsewhere.

Looking back from all those early achievements, then running the 1970 Australian Championships at Ocean Grove, his contribution to Board of Examiners reviews, involvement with the formation of the Nippers, contribution to National Council and the Australian Championship, not to mention his continuing as Victorian State Centre Life Members' registrar, here we have a man who truly qualifies as to what being in surf life saving is all about.

In addition his M.B.E. was for his contribution in the Armed Forces.

Australia-wide the Surf Life Saving Association opened the doors of its clubs for women to become surf life savers from the 1979/80 season, thereby closing its own door on almost a decade of rigorous debate on the issue of allowing full membership to females. The Association's decision also ended more than 70 years of its all-male surf life saving culture since the movement was first formed on Sydney beaches in 1907.

When the Victorian State Centre was established in 1947 only a year after the first surf life saving club in the state was formed (Torquay), it simply adopted the Australian Association's rules: 'Membership (of Surf Life Saving Club) shall be confined to males not under 12 years of age.' [1] Membership, commonly called 'active or full membership', meant being allowed to gain the Bronze Medallion which is the passport to participation in patrols and in competition.

Although excluded from membership, women were welcomed into clubs as 'associate members' and/or could be involved in a club's Ladies Auxiliary which provided much needed back room support during patrols and which helped to raise funds to keep a club running. In many instances the wives, mothers, sisters and girl friends of lifesavers outnumbered the lifesavers themselves in clubs.

Without the women's willingness to organise their activities in support of their men in the clubs it is doubtful if the life saving movement would have achieved as much as it has.

Interestingly the Royal Life Saving Association, from which the surf lifesaving movement sprung in 1906, never excluded women from its membership. Awards and

Women (and plenty of them) to the rescue

How would you like mouth-to-mouth resuscitation with this group of would-be lifesavers? Members of the women's auxiliary of the Torquay Surf Life Saving Club are out to prove that there is a place in lifesaving for women. At present in Victoria lifesaving work is strictly for the men only, but at a national level, the surf movement is giving the matter serious thought. Most surf clubs are undermanned and women could probably play a useful part in some aspects of rescue work.

competition were open to both men and women. In competitions— even in the Royal clubs 'Surf Championships' conducted in the 1920s and 1930s on Victorian beaches, there were separate male and female events. Although women had proved themselves the equal of men in gaining rescue and resuscitation awards in Royal life saving clubs— and the Royal Society did not see any point in excluding women from acquiring such skills when faced with a life and death situation of someone drowning—the attitude of the men who formed the first surf lifesaving clubs was that the Royal techniques were primarily focussed on rescuing drowning people in 'still'(inland) waters and not in the rolling and treacherous surf conditions of our ocean beaches.

The exclusion of women from active membership in surf lifesaving clubs at the beginning of the twentieth century did not cause any controversy at the time. Although women had only recently won the right to vote[2], it was the generally accepted social view of the day that women did not take part in most physically demanding occupations and sporting activities. In particular, the male surf lifesavers viewed women as the 'weaker sex' in a surf environment, and 'weaker' than men in being able to effectively operate as teams with the two main surf lifesaving devices only recently adopted at the time: surf boats and the reel and line. Surf boats as rescue craft were judged by men and women alike at the beginning of the twentieth century as belonging to the all-male naval and sea-faring tradition. Invented in 1906, the surf reel and line quickly became the main life saving device for beach patrols, and its military style drill devised for training teams in its usage was reminiscent of training gun crews in the armed services, which also excluded women. However, the reel and line only provided an excuse to exclude women for a few years—Royal life saving clubs at beaches adopted its use from 1911, military drill and all!

That women were equal to the tasks of patrolling surf beaches and equally enjoyed the competition side of surf carnivals was demonstrated by Royal Life Saving Club members along the Victorian coast in 1920s and 1930s (although most were in the 'calmer' bay waters of coastal towns) and by those few Royal clubs still operating during that time in coastal beaches in New South Wales, Queensland, and other states. In a number of surf life saving clubs during the Second World War (1939-1945), when most able-bodied men were called up for war service, many women joined in patrols on beaches. After the war, clubs reverted to their traditional all-male activities, and it was in this tradition that the Victorian State Centre was formed in 1947.

The rules excluding women presented no problems in the clubs that started afresh, such as Torquay in 1946, and in starting up surf clubs in popular beach areas where the original Royal Life Saving Club had not operated for a few years, such as Lorne in 1947. But problems arose in Warrnambool and Lakes Entrance where these two Royal Life Saving Clubs had continued during the war. They agreed to join State Centre following recommendations from the Royal Life Society based on the 1938 agreement between the Surf Life Saving Association and Royal Life Society whereby clubs along the coast would be affiliated to Surf and clubs in Port Phillip Bay would stay affiliated to Royal Life.

Warrnambool's affiliation was conducted by correspondence and due to distance and petrol rationing and the demands of assisting clubs along the Great Ocean Road area to start up, the State Superintendent, Allan Kennedy was unable to visit them for some time. This state of affairs changed quickly when word reached State Centre that women were still involved in patrols. Allan drove down to meet with Warrnambool club members and advised them that their women lifesavers, although qualified according to the awards system of the Royal Life Society, could not be full active members under the rules of the Surf Life Saving Association and were therefore excluded from patrols and competition. This came as a shock to both men and women club members who thought the rules only applied in other states. Women lifesavers, they argued, had been trained in reel and line rescue methods (Royal and Surf methods were similar) and besides, no surf club in Victoria had yet acquired a surfboat.

Allan Kennedy pointed out the club did not have a choice in the matter. The club could not revert to affiliation with Royal, which under the national agreement could not accept them back. Neither could the club be exempted from the rules of the Surf Life Saving Association. The club had to operate according to the rules of the Surf Life Saving Association of Australia—or not at all, in which case a public meeting would be called to form a new club. Given these choices—but no choice—club members reluctantly agreed to abide by the Association's rules, much to their disappointment about women members being 'dumped' and the club's break with its long tradition of equality.

As Australian society returned to normal after the end of the war in 1945, the Surf Life Saving Association slowly adjusted to the willingness of women to become more actively involved in the movement. The first breakthrough into the beach patrol side of surf life saving came with the introduction of the Resuscitation Certificate in the early 1950s and its availability to women, although the Association's handbook rule appeared to further emphasise their exclusion from active lifesaving:

"Association awards and club membership are available to males, except in the case of the Resuscitation Certificate, which can be obtained by a member of either sex". Women were able to gain the Advanced Resuscitation Certificate when it was introduced in 1975, also the Radio Operator's Certificate when this came on line in the late 1970s.

By the late 1960s social attitudes against discrimination in all its forms began changing rapidly. Women's long battle to gain equal pay in the workforce won out in the first decisions in their favour in 1969, the same year that 'women's liberation groups' and other less radical but nonetheless equally outspoken women's associations started to form to try and remove discrimination against women in other social fields, including sport. In 1973 the Labor Federal government created the first Women's Affairs department to spearhead legislative changes to remove discrimination and create more equal opportunities for women at every level of society. These events caused organisations to look closely at their own equality or inequality provisions, and in the surf life saving movement, the Moana Surf Life Saving Club (South Australia) was the first club to move a resolution to go to National Council in 1974 to investigate female membership.

The issue of female membership was referred back to the states and was roundly defeated at State Centre meetings, then at National Council level. At the Victorian State Centre meeting on 15 July 1974, the motion was put "That this State Centre register a 'No' vote for ladies becoming active members of the surf life saving movement".

An amendment "That it be left in the hands of the delegates (to National Council) to decide the vote of the Victorian State Centre" was carried instead and became the motion which was then carried, but the delegates were certainly clear about which way to vote on behalf of Victoria. However it was not the type of issue that would be settled on one voting round only. In 1975 questionnaires were sent to clubs "on the introduction of females in surf life saving" prior to another vote on the issue in 1976. The Victorian State Centre's position was again made clear by a notice of motion to National Council "... to oppose the introduction of female surf life savers". Once again National Council members voted against allowing women as active members. It was put to the vote the following year, 1977, but was defeated again.

Considerable external pressure and media attention was brought to bear on clubs, state centres and on National Council to reconsider. Government Departments began questioning the Association about its discriminatory rules in such instances as excluding women teachers from gaining the Bronze Medallion. A letter to the Melbourne Herald in 1975 highlighted the fact that women surf lifesavers in New Zealand had enjoyed an equal role with men from 1917: "...and at present," wrote Brenda Griffith of Murawai Surf Life Saving Club, New Zealand who tried to compete at an Australian carnival but was not allowed to enter because of the male only rules, "15% of active members in New Zealand are women and there are even beaches that are patrolled by women. We pass the same Bronze Medallion test, have the same patrol duties and responsibilities and are treated as equals by our male counterparts...Mr Trevor Wilkie from Point Lonsdale mentions that only some women would be of sufficient strength to be able to reach a patient in large surf and therefore all women should be banned. ...It is time that Australian club members realised that the days of dragging out yards of line are over. The new methods, in America and in New Zealand in particular, such as rescue tubes or can buoys, rescue skis, acqua scooters, rubber duckies, jet boats and helicopters have proven to be faster (etc) and rely on skill rather than brute strength, thus helping to equalise the male and female strength differences. Increased membership resulting from the "liberation" of the Australian Surf Life Saving Movement would ease the patrol burden of smaller clubs etc....Is the reason for the continued exclusion of women (in Australia) the fear of our inability to cope (proven false overseas), or the fear that we may be too successful?"

Disregarding these comparisons, defenders of the Australian Association's "masculine humanitarian movement" used examples of the new technologies to try and update their case. "Women have been excluded," explained National Secretary Gus Staunton in a letter to the Anti Discrimination Bureau of the Victorian Premier's Department who wrote to him in April 1978 asking why women were excluded from gaining the Bronze Medallion, "because the physical strength and the endurance of females has been called into serious doubt by medical and other authorities ...because of the need to train and qualify in jet boats, IRBs, helicopters, surf boats, surf skis, reel and line and other equipment". As the Bronze Medallion was the entry ticket to the competition side of the movement, there were other problems to overcome as well, according to Gus Staunton. "Some of our members become a trifle confused with the competition aspect," he stated, referring to the debate relating over competition events if women were admitted—would men and women compete together in the same event or would there have to be separate male and female events?

Internal pressures on the Association to change its rules were also mounting. The historic and symbolic reel and line was slowly being replaced by IRBs from the mid 1970s, with rescue tubes also becoming part of patrol gear. The nipper movement, which started in the late 1960s, in operation until such time as the clubs opened their doors to active female members, female nippers had nowhere to go in the Association after their nipper training and had high expectations of being future lifesavers. And the longer the debate was drawn out, more and more men supported changing the rules and consigning the all-boys mateship culture they had enjoyed to the past. Women too started to appear as delegates to Victorian State Council meetings, the first being Mrs Paula Ford from Point Lonsdale, at a meeting on 21 November 1977.

The debate was settled at National Council at its meeting on 3 December 1979, in spite of a rear-guard plea by National Director Gus Staunton in a National Circular (30/9/79) that the matter of "female lifesavers is so complex and so far reaching it is important for everyone to understand the proposal...The majority of women do not actually want to be lifesavers—or female combat pilots or women fire officers or be in a police armed hold-up squad—and don't have the physical strength to carry out the task...". With the issue once again open to debate at club and State Centre level prior to the meeting of National Council, State Centre sent a questionnaire to clubs about what facilities for females each club had in the event that women should be admitted as active members. This time it was left in no doubt about the views of most club members that changing the rules to allow women as active members was inevitable. Some clubs, such as Anglesea, conducted a vote on the issue and promptly informed State Centre that the club "agreed to having female surf lifesavers". State Centre's own vote on the issue, prior to National Council, resulted in a majority in favour, and the delegates were instructed to vote that way.

At National Council, the vote to admit women as active members was overwhelming (but not unanimous), with delegates determining that females could become members from the 1979/80 season commencing in a few weeks time and were eligible to obtain their Bronze Medallion after 1 July 1980.

Following this decision, State Centre instructed all clubs to alter their club constitutions by July 1980. Information relating to club facilities for women showed that some clubs needed to make some quick alterations. Most clubs had to create or build separate shower, toilet, change areas and bunk facilities to cater for female members. State Centre then discussed the type of swimsuit suitable for female surf lifesaver and in July 1980 carried the resolution "That female lifesavers wear one-piece red patrol costumes, and for competition be allowed to compete in this costume where a club uniform is not worn". An alternative proposal for the female patrol swimsuit to be in official club colours was lost.

Although the question of conducting separate female events in carnivals had been discussed over the past few years as one of the consequences of allowing women to become active members, there were no arrangements made for any female only events in the first few carnivals: women lifesavers who wanted to compete could do so against the men. The first women competitors took on this challenge simply for the love of the sport, however the decision not to segregate appeared to many members as the men's sour grapes retaliation for women wanting to join the previous all-male surf movement. "If women want equality then they have to do what we do", was a common attitude from some men who felt threatened by the equal opportunities opening up to women in all previously male-only areas of society, exemplified in the surf movement by the statement "Discipline as for males!" that was written across a Victorian club questionnaire returned to State Centre in late 1979. However in defense of this 'all-in' policy, State Centre members stated that there were not enough women members to justify putting on separate events. As before, many members had to press hard to change this ruling, especially pointing out the sight of young female competitors finishing lonely lasts in events and arguing that this ruling was simply discouraging sufficient women to compete in the first place.

The first female-only events were organised for the 1982/83 season, creating the Ladies Open Surf Race, Ladies Open Beach Sprint Race and the Ladies Malibu Race. Progressively other events for women were organised in the seasons that followed. In order of introduction, they were: March Past, R&R, Beach Sprint, Beach Relay and Beach Flags. Victoria's female competitors in club, state and interstate carnivals soon blazed a trail that saw hundreds of other young women join clubs as active surf lifesavers. Within a period of only five to ten years following the admission of women into Australia's surf lifesaving ranks, women were making their mark at every level of the Association's activities: club and State Centre committees, Board of Examiners, as well as in competition.

The following four personal accounts of some of the early women 'pioneers' from the 1980s provide interesting insights into this period of trail-blazing.

Carol Fox
Victoria's First Female Professional Lifeguard

On a summer's day when I was 15 and sitting on the beach at Lorne watching my brother John and his Lorne Surf Life Saving Club friends perform their patrol duties, I suddenly thought: "Why can't I do that, too?" I knew as a state competition swimmer that I was strong enough to handle the surf. But I did not comprehend the explanation that surf life-saving clubs gave for excluding women from active membership: "...because you are a girl!".

So next season when the Lorne club first opened its doors for women to become lifesavers, I joined some like-minded girls and went for my Bronze Medallion. This all-female squad included my sister Michelle and Olympic butterfly champion Linda Hanel. Linda was faster swimming butterfly in the surf than we were with freestyle—what a sight! Gary Titter, District Supervisor, was our examiner. We were quite scared of him and his booming voice but were really keen to impress him with our 'wonderful' lifesaving abilities that had been practiced back in the city by the side of the pool. Needless to say, we just passed the exam! That was on 14 February 1981. (In later years, Gary became a great friend and really supported my efforts in the surf movement.)

The next day, Sunday 15 February 1981, I participated in my first carnival. This was held at Lorne and I managed to get my photo in the Geelong Advertiser because it was such an unusual sight seeing a girl compete.

Paul Lacey was at Lorne at that time and was keen to put the girls into competition. He would spend hours organising R&R teams but I had my sights set on the swimming events. With coaching and encouragement from Paul, I entered the state championships the following month (14/15 March 1981 at Fairhaven) in the Junior Surf Race and the Junior Belt Race. I do not remember much about the Junior Surf Race, but the belt race was very special for me. My elder brother John was in the same race. I had made it through to the final and was standing next to him in the line-up. I'm not too sure John was happy about me being there, especially since we had to share the resources of Lorne's reels and linesmen. I came third in the race and will never forget the feeling of standing up on the dais next to my brother who had inspired me to take up surf life saving. The result also made me the first female to win an individual medal in a Victorian championship event. That was the beginning of my love of surf competition. My early fear of having to race the boys was soon overcome. I loved competing with them as they had a different approach to what I had experienced before as a swimmer.

I was lucky enough to be able to play on a Malibu in the early days and with people like David Preston, Lorne club's board and ski captain, I had some fantastic coaching. In the following season's competition I expanded my events to include the Malibu race. At the end of the 1982 season I was invited to represent Victoria in Australia's first all-female iron man race. This was held at Southport on the Gold Coast and six girls from around Australia were invited to attend. However, I had never ridden a surf ski, and my Malibu skills were limited to flat conditions. Thank goodness fellow club member George Day, an Ironman competitor himself, was around to rescue me. George spent the next few weeks finding a ski to fit me, shaving a paddle down to suit my strength, and most importantly, teaching me how to roll under waves and to catch them.

With just a few weeks training under my belt I then headed to the Gold Coast. The iron man event proved to be the hardest in my competitive career. The surf was huge (memory tells me 20 feet, but I'm sure it was less). For me, the swim was fine because I had become quite confident in the surf; however, it was the board and the ski leg that I had no idea about. One girl pulled out of the event as soon as she saw the surf, but the rest of us decided to give it a go. Another two girls dropped out during or after the swim so I knew that I was definitely in the medal count and I didn't really care which one—I just set my sights on finishing the race. I can't remember how many times I nearly gave up. I recall sitting out the back,after somehow getting out,and thinking to myself that I was never going in. But after 25 minutes it was all over and I collected my medal. It was the start of my competition days in the iron man event.

The following season I was fortunate to have the opportunity to move to Anglesea Surf Life Saving Club, who were willing to include me in all their training sessions. I have always been fascinated by the amount of time that some people put into the development of others in surf life saving and this club was no exception with Doug Solly, George Day, Howard Hughes and others putting in hours and hours creating a strong competitive club. Warren Clarke was my idol at the time. Warren was the state iron man champion and a great inspiration for me.

As more girls became involved in surf life saving we reached the stage where there were enough women competitors to have our own all-female events. Nevertheless, I continued with the iron man event and really enjoyed the opportunity to race with the men. They were really supportive of me during the event, although at times I would hold up the whole carnival while they waited for me to finish, with commentators Phil McGibbon and Harry Windmill doing a great job yelling out support for me from their broadcast caravan.

Then came another milestone: I became a lifeguard. Or as the newspapers sensationalised it: "A 19- year-old woman has become Victoria's first female professional lifeguard. With the rushing through in the Senate last week of the Federal Government's Sex Discrimination legislation, it seemed appropriate that yet another bastion of male dominance should be broken." ('The Age', 19 December 1983.)

This publicity was not the best way to start my days as a lifeguard with my fellow workers. The male lifeguards were adamant they would not carry the load that they thought I was not capable of doing. Certainly there were times when my strength could not match the mens, but at the end of the day, like any lifeguard, I had my own set of skills and qualities that were important in a rescue. Yet I felt I had to do things better and faster than everyone else because not only was I a trial run for any future female lifeguards, I was also a role model for the girls younger than me.

Thankfully I survived the first few days. Once my fellow lifeguards became used to me and realised that things did not have to be that different they loosened up a bit. I soon developed that special bond that occurs with people working well together, especially since we had to rely on each other to save people's lives as well as our own. It was indeed a mateship that I have not experienced since.

Lifeguarding proved to be one of the hardest jobs I have done. I think now of those blisters, sore knees and being so physically and mentally tired that on some days I would just crawl up from the beach and go straight to bed! At the same time it was also one the most rewarding jobs I have had and it set the scene for my career and work ethic in later years.

So were all these experiences undertaken in the name of equality? No. I only ever did anything in surf life saving because I wanted to do them.

I have never perceived being a female as a barrier and when it was presented as such I innocently asked the question "why?". Perhaps this outlook has a lot to do with my upbringing. My mother and father were most supportive of any decision I made relating to surf lifesaving activities even when they saw the anguish and pain that some of those decisions caused me.

The assimilation of women into the surf lifesaving movement has been both fast and thorough. I love the fact that a growing number of Victorian surf clubs now have women as presidents, club captains, race officials, examiners and board members. Compare this situation with other sports that have had female participation for a longer period than surf life saving and have been proved incapable of breaking down barriers beyond the participation of women in their sport. There is no doubt that the early women surf lifesavers and their supporters played an important role in creating the surf club movement we know today.

I first became involved with life saving at the age of 13 when I joined Hampton Life Saving Club with a girlfriend, Margaret Straford (Margaret was later to die tragically after competing in the Lorne Pier to Pub swim).

My parents had a holiday house at Venus Bay. On the beach the girls could 'hang about' but could not take part in active surf lifesaving. But, when in 1980 women were finally admitted to surf lifesaving, I immediately joined up, together with Wendy Duell (nee Bowers). We trained for our Bronze Medallion and were examined by Ric Mitchell at Cape Paterson. Ric gave me a hard time over my CPR so I had to do it again the following week. This delay made me the second female at Venus Bay to gain my Bronze.

I soon started competing at carnivals with the men. However, on one swim at Woolamai (my last competition), when the surf was really pounding and everyone was getting smashed out the back, Barbara Webb who was alongside me asked if I was OK and I suddenly wondered what (if anything) I was trying to prove and considered myself lucky ro get back to shore without being rescued myself.

Ric Mitchell encouraged me to do a lot more than patrols and I became the club's chief instructor. I then went on to the Board of Examiners and with encouragement from several members I became Secretary of the Board in 1986 (the first woman in Australia to occupy such a position), Bass District Supervisor and an official at three National Titles. In 1986 I was selected as Victorian Female Lifesaver of the Year and then Miss Australia Life Saving at the National Titles in Moana. I developed a passion for surf life saving, often putting it before more important things, but it has served me well. I worked professionally for State Centre in 1984 as Development Officer - a 24 hours a day job on life saving in one form or another as work spilled over into voluntary commitments.

There were a few stalwarts who wanted surf life saving to be a male only preserve, but the majority comprised those who believed that women had something to offer as well as those forced by political correctness to support the changes. Those who deserve a special mention include Peter Taylor, Phil McGibbon, Harry Windmill, Laurie Ryan, and Ian Watson and Buzz Reinwald from Venus Bay.

The only time I experienced discrimination was when I applied to join the helicopter crew. It was pointed out to me in no uncertain terms that women were not able to be part of this group. At a carnival at Bancoora on the following weekend, Alan Joyce (Point Lonsdale) approached me and said he had heard I wasn't allowed to join the helicopter crew. The Offshore Rescue Boat (ORB) crew had no such reservations, he said, and so I was able to complete a weekend patrol and join the boat crew. Consequently, I had the privilege of being the first female recipient of the ORB Crewman's Certificate and the ORB Driver's Certificate.

Women were and still are attracted to surf life saving via a number of avenues such as knowing club members, brothers and/or boyfriends in clubs, or simply holidaying in the area and seeing the role of the surf lifesaver as a challenge to be taken up.

A large number of women too were members of bayside Royal life-saving clubs and this is where I started. I had been a member of Mentone Life Saving Club from the age of 11 and knew the Woolamai Beach Surf Life Saving Club's first female squad who were all members of the Mentone club. (They were Victoria's first female Bronze squad, qualifying on 22 November 1980.)

Like them, I had already spent many years patrolling at Mentone beach. I also obtained further awards in the areas of resuscitation, first-aid, IRBs and life saving. What was new were the challenges of the surf and being accepted into what had been an all male bastion until recently.

So three years after that first all-female squad obtained their Bronze Medallions, I joined Portsea Surf Life Saving Club at the age of 16. I was fortunate enough to have these pioneer women, as well as Portsea's first female Bronze squad who qualified on 20 December 1980, as role models.

Within three years, the Portsea pioneers were already making their mark: one a patrol captain, one an examiner, one a committee member and a number of women who had joined since then were strong competitors at carnivals. I truly admire these women for doing what they did without the benefit of role models.

Portsea club life became my passion. Within a season I was a committee member and competing in carnivals. In my third season I was employed as a professional and became the first female senior lifeguard.

Although women were admitted to active membership of surf life-saving clubs in the 1980-81 season, it was not until the 1984-85 season that any female competition events were held at a national level, and even then there were only three events. For years women competed in the men's races—surf ski, ironman, boat races and IRB races—in an effort to be recognised for their strength, skill and fitness, and for me it was the most frustrating part of my early years in surf life saving.

There was a constant battle against the surf life-saving hierarchy to have women's events included in the more physical domains. There were multiple arguments against women's beach flags, then surf skis, then surfboats. As the years passed, each of the arguments fell down and the movement's women were able to show their athletic prowess. Those who compete today have their strong willed predecessors to thank for this.

Having paddled surf skis, wave riders and kayaks for 10 years and winning four consecutive Victorian surf ski titles, I longed to challenge on a national level. Letters each year to national and state surf lifesaving bodies were to no avail. They argued that the National Titles program was already too full (with male events!). This lack of support meant that the first national women's surf ski title was not held until 1997 — a long 16-year wait for Victoria's first women.

Women have had an enormous impact on the surf lifesaving movement over the 20 years since they first entered it as active members. They have made the clubs more social and family oriented. They have become senior members of clubs holding positions of responsibility. They are role models for the youth of today, imparting their knowledge to the younger members. And they are still rising to the challenges in all areas of surf life saving, continuing to be a strong voice in this uniquely Australian community service as it moves into the next millennium.

Sue Dimmick
Australia's first female team captain

I joined Portsea club in the 1979-80 season, and although I was not in their first girl's group, I achieved my Bronze Medallion in December 1981. I was a good swimmer and I soon became good at body surfing. My technique is to get on the wave, put my head down and swim hard and then hoping for the best put one arm out and the other arm down by my side. I just love the movement of surf in the water. But I do not like being mashed by the waves!

I suppose I drifted into my specialised field of board paddling after watching a couple of guys paddle and then tried it out for myself. I was a good butterfly swimmer and this style assisted me to become a good board paddler. At first, the girls had to compete against the boys. The only girl's race was the beach sprint. Then the first female board race was introduced (Ladies Malibu in Victorian Titles at Wye River, March 1983) and I entered. I had to stop about five times. I persevered at it later that year, eventually coming in with the leading six girls, but around second or fourth each time.

Then I had an opportunity to join the team going to New Zealand in January 1984 and won the Trans Tasman trophy. This win started me on the road to competition. I became more focussed and felt more a part of a team, something quite different to when I was younger even though I was good at sports at school. I even remember the night I decided I was going to go for it. I had won my first Victorian title in March 1984 at Warrnambool and was then told I had been chosen to represent Victoria in the first women's board race to be established at the Australian titles in 1985. At that point I thought, "OK, this is it, I now have a chance to win something really significant". From then on it was easy to train because I had made up my mind to dedicate myself to competition and training was all part of it. I did not win it, but I went on to win many races over the next few years.

In many respects I made quite a few firsts for girls in Victoria. I won seven Victorian titles in a row. I was one of the first females to be in the Victorian team in the Australian titles (together with Caroline Fox), and I was in the state team for quite a few years. I won the board race at the interstate competition at the Australian titles. I was the first Victorian female to win a national medal. In 1986 at the National titles in Moana, South Australia, I came second (silver medal) in the Womens Open Board race. And in 1988 I became the first female to captain a Victorian or interstate team.

Injuries were quite a challenge to overcome: I used to paddle without knee pads and got callouses and walked around with four sore knees which was quite a 'thing' then because girls were not supposed to do that. I also had a couple of knee reconstruction jobs involving eight operations along the way.

I won the Masters in 1997 and I still remember that great feeling - that rush of adrenalin and the energy welling up in me during the race.

When I first started in competition, in those first seasons after women were allowed to become full members of surf clubs, the blokes used to give me hell, especially in my own club. They were awful! They were all blokey blokes. Admittedly, some weren't, but a couple really gave me a hard time (these days you would sue for harassment or defamation of character, I'm sure). But because I was outspoken I could counter their really sexist comments with ones that were probably equally as sexist or demeaning. They did not expect that kind of response from a girl. It became a bit of a challenge. They would give stronger and stronger aggravation but I would still come back at them because I had decided that I wanted to be good at this sport and nothing was going to deter me from it. A lot of the girls left because of that—they couldn't believe it. But I also countered the guys' comments in a public forum and attached a bit of humour to it.

I soon gained the impression, too, that the Association, nationally and at state level, was imposing girls on the clubs and that some clubs were still opposed to women members but had to do it because they were told to. It is amusing today to recall the type of all-male culture in many clubs, with blokes saying "we don't want bloody females to come in". What they were really saying—and I used to joke about it with them—was: "women are going to come in and we're not going to be able to talk rude and drink and be naughty!" I would tolerate these attitudes and laugh about them and I would give as good as I got. But you definitely needed a sense of humour to survive.

But it was definitely a 'boys town' culture at the time I joined, with the boys saying: "what are those chicks doing here?" I did not realise it was going to be such a big deal. I was brought up in an all-girls school and my parents supported me in everything. There was never a question of sexual discrimination—in fact, I did not know what that was—so when I came down to the surf club and said, "Right, I want to be a belt swimmer," and the reaction was like "yeah, yeah, yeah", it was a bit of shock. But then I would challenge the boys to a race and beat them and that confused them.

The club was good but with my personality I wasn't going to take any cheek. I think I had that kind of male approach of 'let's settle this on the scoreboard', in the open. I did not think it was particularly mature at the time, but that was the mentality I was dealing with. So I decided to mix my responses with a bit of humour so the boys knew they could have a bit of fun. After all, people join surf clubs mainly to have fun and because there are males and females there's always going to be that kind of give and take response. I was not a militant feminist and I strongly believe that would not have worked. When the guys actually got to talk to me and know what it was about, they would laugh and say, "Well, we'll go a certain distance but we don't have to change our whole approach too much".

The girls who left because of this all-boys culture did not come back, but other girls came in. I never thought about it at the time but I must have spearheaded the way and 'calmed the waters', so to speak, so that other girls could come in. But then I was lucky that Natalie Hood came in and she was a strong person too and so there were two of us.

The first year was the hardest for me but by the second year people stopped picking on me. I suppose it took about two years in the club before I felt the culture start to change and that it was getting better for the girls to join.

In the 1970s and early 1980s, men had to get used to women competing with them at work and in every other sphere of life. It is different now when we expect equality (whatever that is), even the blokes. When I tell junior life savers that I would have loved to have joined earlier like them but girls were not allowed, their faces just drop—they can't believe it—so that sort of old mentality is archaic.

Today I am a life member of the Portsea club. I was three years on the club committee and was always on different sub-committees, also on State Centre Board of Examiners, competition committees and coaching in other clubs. I decided to do this because I got so much out of it. I attribute the surf club experience and my competition experience was instrumental in developing who I am today and my approach to solving problems and my approach to life. So I decided I needed to give something back so I gave three years and then decided to have a rest. I'll go back again, I'm sure. However I'm still involved in coaching young girls for competition.

We had Beach Girl contests too!

Taking time out to watch the Beach Girl contest was a lot of fun in the early days.

The Beach Girl contests drew great crowds of people including, in those days, the totally 'male' lifesavers of all the clubs. The big day at each of the beaches was to select a local representative to go on to contest for Miss Victorian Beach Girl.

The contests were held during the summer holidays on, sometimes, very hot days. The involvement of surf clubs was to rope off the parade area and stage a small demonstration of marching, R&R and sometimes resuscitation. As host clubs, a donation of fifty pounds ($100) was presented by the Sun News Pictorial for services rendered.

Everyone gathered around the stage set up on the beach and the girls were introduced one by one to the shouts and whistles of the 'fellas'. This was a lot of excitement and created in an atmosphere perhaps likened to the outer at the footy with lots of shouting, comments and whistles. The judges were chosen identities who obviously had some special talent and they got the best seats in the house, right in front. Still we could all see!

The press and radio were always present since this was a big attraction event. In the paper on Monday morning there would be a photo of the winner, but for the runners up it was a new pair of bathers and try again next year. There was talk of cheating, once. One girl never seen before (and sporting a false sun tan), arrived from Melbourne with all the latest gear, just to try and win. It was not fair as she was a professional model. "Boo"! She won!

Yes, this was the summer atmosphere which really was good stuff.

The contest moved from beach to beach on successive days. A number of the girls would travel to each of the beaches to compete on each of the days until their winning luck came, entitling them to attend the state titles.

The winners from each state all went on to represent their State in the bigger league at the Miss Beach Girl Australia contest.

Barbara Morgan

'State Centre's First Female JAB Superintendent'

Barbara Morgan

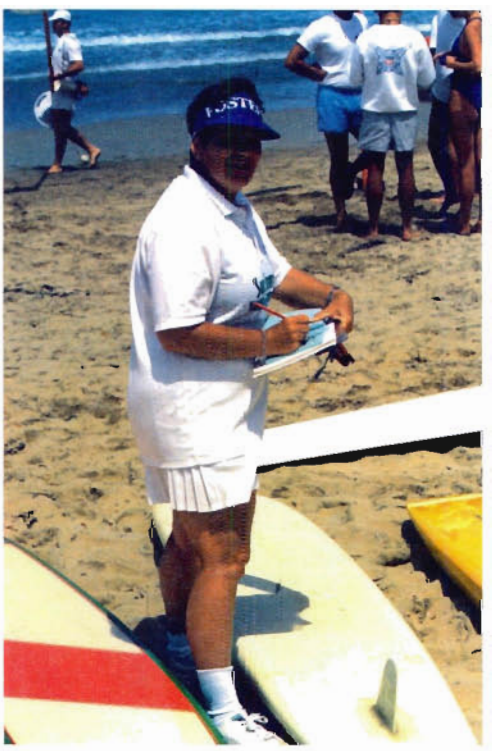

Born in the year that the first surf life saving club was established in Victoria (1946), Barbara Morgan's contribution to the movement has been remarkable — and not only due to her fame as State Centre's first female superintendent of nippers from 1992 to 1998.

Her work at club level has been rewarded with life membership of Altona Life Saving Club, where she started at age 10, also with life membership in 1980 of South Melbourne Life Saving Club, where she moved in 1968 and met and married its club captain Jim Morgan and has occupied most club positions since. Their children Ivor, Loren and Amber have joined in club and competition events with equal vigour.

Barbara's involvement with Royal Life Saving Society activities has earned her numerous meritorious awards, culminating in life membership in 1993.

From the 1985/86 season when South Melbourne Life Saving Club affiliated with Surf Life Saving Victoria — a move which Barbara and Jim fully supported — she has been no less active in surf life saving. Starting with gaining her surf Bronze Medallion on 10 February 1987, it was not long before Barbara's energies and enthusiasm made their mark, whether as a member of the Board of Examiners, referee at surf carnivals or working with the nippers in various capacities.

In 2000, International Life Saving recognised her outstanding contributions by awarding her a Citation of Merit.

The helicopter rescue service 1978 to 1987

A Wales Helicopter Rescue Service was first introduced for Sydney beaches in early 1973 following assessment of a helicopter rescue system operated by the New Zealand Surf Life-saving Association. The State Savings Bank of Victoria approached Airfast Air Support, who operated the service for the New South Wales Surf Life Saving Association, immediately following the introduction of the Sydney service, but the national Surf Life Saving Association refused to consider a sponsorship by another bank unless the Bank of New South Wales declined to participate. The Bank of New South Wales (now Westpac) had been a major sponsor of association activities since 1969 and was willing to support a similar helicopter rescue service for Victorian coastal beaches to operate later that season (1973/74).

Victorian President George Nutbean was sent a proposal from National Council in 1973 which stated that Airfast Air Support wanted to introduce the same type of bank-sponsored service in Victoria by patrolling the area between Point Lonsdale and Woolamai Beach where they claimed, "some 67% of all rescues occur, and to assist in patrolling the Port Phillip Bay beaches, at a cost of $20,000 per season". All that was required of State Centre was to install a direct radio link-up between the five clubs in the patrolled area plus one club just outside the patrol area and the helicopter. Other clubs could then telephone a club with radio equipment to pass on any emergency calls (in their area) to the helicopter. George Nutbean warmly welcomed this proposal and hoped that the logistical details of integrating the helicopter into club services and communications links would be ironed out over the following months before the new season commenced. (The proposal to monitor beaches around Port Phillip Bay would have to be considered by the Royal Life Saving Association whose clubs patrolled the bay beaches.)

However later that year (1973) State Centre received a letter from National Council stating that "...although the sponsor (Bank of New South Wales) wanted a helicopter service to operate in Victoria, it was a physical impossibility to introduce the service into Melbourne as the only helicopter available is in New Guinea". A further setback to its introduction occurred a short time later when George Nutbean resigned as state president in 1974. Gordon Dann who was elected later that year to replace him adopted a more cautious approach to new technologies. The helicopter service did not commence operation until 1978 in the year after Gordon Dann resigned as president.

In November 1976 a small delegation of State Centre members attended a helicopter demonstration at Narrabeen beach in Sydney. The following year, State Centre undertook a helicopter feasibility study, including the possibility of using local contractors, and discussions were held with the Bank of New South Wales who were still keen to sponsor the service. Final agreement with the bank was reached on 14 December 1977 to operate a helicopter rescue service on weekends and public holidays. Under this agreement, Vowell Air Services (Helicopters) Pty Ltd were contracted to operate on lease a Bell Jetranger 206B Helicopter at $300 per flying hour with State Centre supplying the necessary radio network via a base at Ocean Grove to link up the helicopter with clubs and patrols. The helicopter would patrol the coastline from Cape Schank to Anglesea to Port Phillip Bay from the launching of the service in early January 1978 to the end of the season on 29 April 1978. State Centre appointed Kevin Roderick as Helicopter Director.

While the helicopter was being fitted out for ambulance and rescue work, including a winch and pop-out floats for over water flying, Kevin Roderick advised clubs that a Rescue Unit of 14 members was being formed and called for recruits. The requirements were that they should be trained lifesavers with first aid qualifications ...and fit! At the same time a roster of five doctors was co-ordinated by Dr Graham Cato to work with rescue unit members. During a flight a crew of three was required: pilot, doctor and lifesaver.

State Centre's Helicopter Rescue Service was formally launched on 5 January 1978 by Victorian Premier Rupert Hamer.

Role of the helicopter service

The main aim of the helicopter rescue service was to be an extension of the Association's beach rescue services. "In a typical surf rescue," the press release on its launch day explained, "the helicopter hovers a few metres above the patient. One of the crew members dives into the water and flotation equipment and harnesses are lowered to the patient. The rescuer attaches a rescue line to him/herself and to the patient, then the helicopter flies six to eight meters above the water, carrying both to safety." From its base in Ocean Grove, the helicopter—flying at 105 knots—could be at Point Lonsdale in two minutes, Bancoora in five minutes, Torquay in seven minutes and Point Leo in 15 minutes. The trip from say, Ocean Grove to the Geelong Hospital, was only 11 minutes.

The service's other aim was to integrate into all civil emergency organisations such as ambulance, police, fire, Royal Life Saving services and others in more general rescue situations. "Whether the victim is a surfer pounded by waves, a fisherman swept off rocks, a burned hiker or boat occupant, or even a car smash victim blocked in by holiday traffic, reduction in the time taken to effect any rescue and provide medical aid and the quickest and smoothest transport to an appropriate hospital increases the chance of survival," State Centre stated. Over the next ten years of the service's short existence, almost all of these predicted situations—and more—came true.

The three chief elements of the service—helicopter, radio van and jet boat—were located at Ocean Grove, with the van and helicopter base on land owned by the Shire of Bellarine alongside the boat launching ramp. The jet boat was housed in the co-ordinator's private house and was launched into the Barwon River at Ocean Grove each patrol day. All crew members during operational hours were accommodated in the nearby motel.

Helicopter rescue record

Twenty helicopter rescues were achieved in the first season (1978/79), plus 20 other searches and incidents, however the combined figures of the Wales Helicopter and Jet Boat were most impressive: 46 rescues, six medical cases treated and 24 other incidents and searches (26 jet boat rescues, 20 helicopter rescues, four helicopter medicals, four jet boat searches, 20 helicopter searches).

In the second season (1979/80), 66 helicopter missions were flown resulting in 29 rescues. With additional sponsorship from the Victorian Dairy Industry Association for its Big M campaign, a second helicopter was brought into service and launched at Venus Bay on 20 December 1980. With this increased coverage ranging from Warrnambool to Wilson's Promontory, the number of helicopter and jet boat rescues for the third season 1980/81 increased to 50, with 15 medical cases treated. The number of missions flown that season was 71. During the winter months the second helicopter was located at Vowell Air Services at Tyabb with the first unit used for patrolling at Ocean Grove.

By now the Helicopter Rescue Service and jet boat had become a highly efficient unit in its own right, with Kevin Roderick as Emergency Services Director responsible for co-ordinating the helicopter crews, jet boat personnel and radio operators. Medical staff were under the direction of Dr Graham Cato.

However the increasing costs of running the service was only breaking even with sponsorship costs. In an attempt to reduce costs in a climate of rising fuel charges, while at the same time planning to have the service on call during the off-season months, State Centre awarded its helicopter leasing contract in 1982 to the National Safety Council for the 1982/83 season. The National Safety Council offered a lower charter rate per hour plus more hours flying time: 237 hours compared to the originally planned 193 hours. This was comprised of 158 hours operation based on 2.5 hours per day flying time during the six months bathing season and 25 hours for calls outside normal hours plus 10 hours training time, thus providing an additional 42 hours. In effect, this offer reduced the helicopter charter costs from $72,000 to $63,000, helping State Centre trim the costs of both the helicopter service and jet boat rescue service to keep within its projected budget of $97,000 for that season. [1]

The aircraft provided by the National Safety Council were modern Hughes 500 helicopters. This arrangement also provided crews with an opportunity to work closely with the National Safety Council which at the time was becoming the major emergency service provider in Victoria, and to be trained to use up-to-date equipment including use of the National Safety Council's facility at Traralgon. The original charterer, Vowell Air Services, offered State Centre an alternative proposal: to sell it a Jet Ranger 206B with which the rescue service was familiar for approximately $140,000 payable at $7000 a month over 36 months and to fly it on behalf of State Centre. State Centre opted for the National Safety Council proposal of two helicopters and an offshore rescue boat (a Shark Cat) which was based at Phillip Island over the Christmas period.

Rescues effected in the 1982/83 season were 39 but increased sharply the following season, 1983/84 to 64. During this period with the National Safety Council, State Centre extended its coverage with the more efficient UHF radio network which later became Surf Rescue Command.

In spite of the projected savings initially sought through the contract with the National Safety Council, actual running costs for the helicopter increased almost 40% to $148,930 in the 1882/83 season and then almost doubled to $239,000 in the 1983/84 season. This prompted State Centre to look again at Vowell Air Service's proposition to sell State Centre a Bell 206B helicopter. By buying the helicopter at $150,000, State Centre could take a loan of $115, 000 from Vowel Air Services and make monthly payments on it, in addition to contracting Vowell Air Services for flying time over the summer periods. This arrangement was agreed to early in 1983, then in September 1983 State Centre established a shelf company, Maxwell Lake Pty Ltd with members of the State Executive as its Directors, as the purchasing body. The following month the title was changed to 'Surf Rescue Helicopter Board'.

Emergency Services Director Kevin Roderick reported that an additional rescue boat, a twin engined Haines Hunter, had been donated by BP Australia, and that "we now have craft available to meet any type of situation along the Victorian coastline from Portland to Lakes Entrance" (Annual Report, p.5). The service resulted in 64 rescues that season (1983-84).

The following season, 1984/85, Bob Wood became Emergency Services Director replacing Kevin Roderick who resigned in December 1984. Kevin Roderick's contribution in establishing and managing this successful service was greatly appreciated by all members. "During that time his (Roderick's) energy and enthusiasm assisted in the establishment of a close knit group who provided an excellent rescue service, and an opportunity for the Association in Victoria to capitalise on the Flying Billboard in the Sky, as members affectionately dubbed the helicopter," a team member recorded. State Centre headquarters in St Kilda became the operational base of the UHF radio network linking clubs, central command and all emergency services units (helicopter and boats). With three boats in the service, the rescue statistics for that season were impressive: 72 helicopter missions were flown resulting in 33 rescues; 79 missions were undertaken by the boats resulting in 181 people rescued and 32 boats towed to safety.

In 1985 State Centre "...embarked on the biggest upgrading of Emergency Services equipment in its history", as Bob Wood reported, by upgrading its helicopter and boat. A $40,000 7.5 metre Cougar Cat offshore rescue boat was purchased. Its Bell helicopter was replaced by purchasing a new twin engined Bolkow Messerschmitt BO-105 helicopter from Boads Helicopters UK, in a deal arranged through Kevin Gosling of Nash Helicopters NSW, at a cost of around $800,000. Financing was made possible by a loan of $420,000 from Westpac, selling the Bell Jet Ranger on which only $21,000 was owing and thus securing $170,000 from the sale, and meeting repayments on the bigger loan from a combination of present and projected sponsorships, a loan of $100,000 from National Council, government grants, fees for services and other income. This financial plan was boosted in November 1985 when State Centre signed an agreement with the Victoria Police to lease the Bell Helicopter to the newly formed Police Air wing for pilot training. In that same month the Prime Minister, Bob Hawke, announced a $3.6m grant to the National Council of which Victoria's share was to be $760,000, but in fact Victoria's annual share did not increase above the $21,000 gear grant for some years.

At the Annual General Meeting on 19 August 1985, Tony Thorburn retired as President, after eight intensive years helping to steer the Association through its period of modernisation, and was succeeded by Alex (Ajax) Sutherland of Anglesea Surf Life Saving Club. Peter Taylor was re-elected as State Superintendent and Brendan Hall as Emergency Services Director.

State Centre's purchase of the expensive twin engine Bolkow helicopter was an ambitious undertaking, committing itself to running costs plus loan repayments close to $200,000 per year. Nevertheless the rescue statistics for the 1985/86 season, which saw the Bell Helicopter still in use while the new helicopter was being prepared for the following season, were impressive: 48 boat missions with 208 people assisted; 37 helicopter missions with 65 people rescued. Keeping ahead of the game with upgraded and albeit expensive technology was seen as necessary to running an effective coastwide rescue service.

With the appointment of Peter Breeze as full-time Emergency Services Manager at the start of the 1986/87 season, State Centre's service entered a new period of professionalism in the co-ordination of its three emergency rescue arms: helicopter, offshore rescue boat and the Surf Rescue Command Communic-ations network. The new helicopter was launched by the Minister for Police and Emergency Services, Race Mathews on 9 October 1986. The communications system now linked all clubs between Apollo Bay on the west coast and Waratah Bay on the east coast to its command centre in the State Centre building in St Kilda via an independent UHF network and a repeater station on Arthur's Seat in the Mornington Peninsula. It was also in contact with other emergency service providers such as the water police, ambulance service and others. Ironically, after training the police air wing crew, the Association was told by the police that it did not want competing air rescue operations and that they, the police, were to be the major co-ordinating body in the state for helicopter rescue operations, even in coastal areas. During this season the helicopter was involved in over 50 rescue missions involving 68 people.

Regrettably however, this was the helicopter's last season.

1987: State Centre in crisis

As in previous years, the 1987 Annual General Meeting, held on 24 August 1987, commenced at 7.30pm, an hour earlier than the normal monthly meeting of State Council in order to maximise attendance. Unlike the previous formalities of the past 40 years of its existence, however, the officers' statement to members at the meeting was like a bombshell that almost blew apart the very existence of the Victorian association itself. They reported that State Centre was not only broke, with a looming operating loss of almost a quarter of a million dollars and with outstanding loans of more than half a million dollars, it could not even meet minimum loan repayments without going further into debt. Already State Centre was behind in its repayments of Westpac's $420,000 loan for the Bolkow helicopter, behind in its repayments on a $100,000 loan from National Council, and it owed clubs around $125,000.

Furthermore, no money from grants had been paid to clubs for the previous two years, the officers reported, since this money had been drawn on for operating costs. When this situation became clear during auditing in July and early August, in preparation for the Annual General Meeting, the officers informed National Council of the situation. National Council immediately offered the state a loan of $250,000 to help it restructure its financial position, recommending that Victoria sell its helicopter as part of this process. It also gave State Centre only one week from the Annual General Meeting to put forward a plan that would satisfy National Council and Westpac in relation to that company's sponsorships nationally. For these reasons, following "an explanation of the financial position and why the officers cannot sign the Officers' Statement", as the minutes recorded, President Ajax Sutherland adjourned the Annual General Meeting to the next month (to 28 September) "in order to fully inform all clubs and members of the situation".

This revelation sent shockwaves through the members present, who immediately opened their State Council meeting and tried to come to grips with what had happened. "The helicopter is not the cause of the blowout," some argued, stating that the helicopter was not only the flagship of the Victorian Surf Life Saving Association but was the only large asset it had. "If the helicopter is sold, we have nothing!" they exclaimed. However there was no denying that the costs of paying for and running the helicopter rescue service had contributed to the situation, as did the loss of a major helicopter sponsor (Victorian Dairy Industry Association) and other sponsors from the mid-80s who, as Channel 7's Sports Manager Ron Casey told President Ajax Sutherland, "sought more high profile sports such as racing and football."

State Centre's first operating deficit in its history occurred in 1984/85 - around $4,000 - but jumped to $28,000 the following year. Only 12 months later, in 1986/87 after only one season of flying the new helicopter, the figure was close to $222,000. It seemed unlikely that this blowout had happened over one season only, and it was explained that the figures presented to this meeting were the first full picture of State Centre's finances for a few years. Due to the increasing work commitments of the honorary treasurer, Neil Hough, in the previous few years, and having no treasurer in the past twelve months, plus the added problems of computerising State Centre's administration (with frequent loss of data on occasions), no overall balance of its financial status had been available, with previous statements merely continuing past practices in reporting on individual sections.

Although some members at the meeting agreed with the National Council proposal that the helicopter should be sold off, the majority quickly swung to searching for ways of raising money to save the helicopter service. A Sponsorship committee was formed to work with the Finance Review Committee to raise money, principally from asking the state government for a one-off grant and to seek more sponsorship. These concerted efforts should stave off the week's deadline set by National Council to sell the helicopter, President Ajax Sutherland stated, and the situation would be clearer by the next meeting.

Within days, the Executive adopted the fundraising committee's proposal to launch a public appeal for funds in addition to its attempts to gain more government funds and sponsorships. But a letter sent by National Executive Director Gus Staunton on 10 September 1987 to all Victorian Executive members requested clarification of what State Centre was trying to achieve. National Council members, also Westpac which was the National Council's main sponsor of helicopter rescue services in other states, were receiving mixed messages about the Victorian Association's policy objectives. National Council emphasised that the proposed loan of $250,000 to State Centre to help ease State Centre's ongoing expenses loan was part of a total restructuring package which included the sale of the helicopter, which it thought the previous meeting of State Council had endorsed (but did not).

"At the time" (the helicopter was bought), wrote Gus Staunton, "we felt we could establish a viable rescue operation. The (Victoria) police would not go ahead and purchase other aircraft. The media and other sponsors would be attracted to our own service and thus we would bridge the financial shortfall. By no fault of anyone, this has not eventuated. Whole new circumstances now exist, and we have to think with our heads— not our hearts." In his view, State Centre had two main options to consider: sell the helicopter and close its emergency services; or sell the existing helicopter and lease one as it did previously and run a limited service. Gus Staunton stated that he had discussed these options with Westpac, and the bank favoured the option to close the service in order to maintain the current level of the Westpac sponsorships at both state and national levels. As far as State Centre's public appeal for funds was concerned, he added, it is not a 'Save the Helicopter' appeal and the absence of a helicopter rescue service in the state should not affect the outcome of the appeal.

State Council met next on 21 September 1987, with National Executive Director Gus Staunton attending and explaining National Council's position on why the helicopter should be sold and urging members to make a decision. Meanwhile the fundraising reports at the meeting were not encouraging and there were no confirmed additional sponsorships to save the day. With the helicopter grounded (on standby only) until the situation was resolved, morale was low in the crew also. President Ajax Sutherland then stated that "due to the present financial position, all executive members would be standing down and available for re-election at the Annual General Meeting which was being deferred to next month".

Consequently the Annual General Meeting held at 7.40 pm on 26 October 1987 prior to the monthly state council meeting, was "packed to the rafters", as one member related. Everyone present wanted a resolution, one way or the other, to this destabilising situation and it appeared that the outcome might hinge on who was elected. The incumbent leadership was viewed by many members as wanting to keep a helicopter rescue service, albeit a reduced operation by returning to the prior leasing arrangements of its early days, even if the Association's twin engined helicopter had to be sold to secure National Council's financial rescue package. Opposition to this view had grown during the two months since State Centre's situation was announced, with many members from clubs indignant about what they perceived as a crisis brought about by an expensive helicopter service financed at their expense.

Only one nominee for Treasurer was put forward, Torquay member and chartered accountant Lloyd Thomas, who was declared elected. Peter Taylor was re-elected Superintendent, with Bill Bowers elected as Secretary. The ballot for the position of President was between Ajax Sutherland, who had held the position for only two years, and Charles Lyne, former President of Torquay club who had been in charge of rebuilding their clubhouse after it was burnt down in July 1970. Charles Lyne made no secret of his intention that the helicopter be sold, the Emergency Services operation be closed and that money should start flowing again to the clubs should he be elected President of the Association. Charles Lyne won the position of President.

After the election results were declared, the short (20 minute) Annual General Meeting closed and the State Council meeting convened at 8.10 pm. The financial report showed an even worse position than members thought. In addition to the previously announced amounts outstanding to Westpac, National Council and the clubs, a further $27,000 was outstanding to general creditors and $48,000 outstanding on lease liabilities, and $50,000 had been drawn down from the expanded National Council loan to pay for day to day expenses. "The cash flow is critical," it was announced, "and is propped up by not paying the clubs what is owed them."

The meeting resolved to sell the helicopter and to restructure the Association's finances and administration in order to clear the heavy burden of debt threatening its very existence.

"The end of the helicopter service was a very sad day for all," a team member recalled. "Over almost 10 years of operation, many thousands of hours were spent in rescues by highly trained, experienced and disciplined members. Apart from its patrols and the many rescue situations it was involved in, there were other highlights of note such as its call out by Victoria Police in the search for a gunman in Beaumaris, its use in fighting bushfires and in numerous searches for people involved in boating accidents that resulted in many lives saved."

Shortly after the Annual General Meeting, Emergency Services Director Peter Breeze and State Centre Administrator Aldo Montalto resigned. Foreshadowing a re-vamped administration, Field Officer Nigel Taylor was appointed temporary State Administrator. State Centre's road back to solvency looked extremely difficult.

[1] The National Safety Council of Australia was established in 1927. "It was an incorporated body which relied on subscriptions and user-pays principles for non-profit funding. Its clients also included RAAF, Civil Aviation Authority and the Country Fire Authority." (Inside Victoria, by Bob Bottom, Pan McMillan 1991, Ch.14 NSCA Disaster, p.154.) In 1985 smaller aviation operations complained to the Victorian Premier John Cain about the NSCA's unfair competition against them. A short time later more complaints were made to the federal government about its supposedly "paramilitary operations and covert funding". Then in 1989 its Victorian Division was declared bankrupt with debts of $150m, but with $50m missing. Its Director, John Friedrichs, disappeared when this announcement was made and details of his mysterious past emerged. He was captured in Western Australia two weeks later. When NSCA equipment was auctioned to recover its debts, its Shark Cat — a 17 metre self-righting surf craft — was bought by Port Campbell Surf Life Saving Club.

Kevin Roderick

'... passion and determination'

Kevin Roderick

Kevin John Roderick, a Life Member of his club, Fairhaven SLSC, was made a life member of Surf Life Saving Victoria in 1977 for his outstanding service over many years.

Kevin achieved his Bronze Medallion at Lakes Entrance on 25 February 1961, then became a foundation member Bancoora SLSC in 1963, where he was the club's first instructor. He transferred to Fairhaven in 1969 and was part of Fairhaven's Victorian Championship March Past Gold Medal teams of 1969 to 1972.

With his previous training and background, Kevin quickly became involved with the fledgeling Surf Rescue Command at Victorian State Centre, fully supporting the policy of that time to have complete surveillance of the Victorian coastline. This service involved the Offshore Rescue Craft, the Radio Network and the Helicopter Rescue Service.

This newly introduced technology moved Victoria's surf lifesaving movement into a whole new management and sponsorship era and it was Kevin Roderick, working closely with State Council and with State Administrator, Eddie Kidd, who made it all happen.

Kevin's passion and persistence managed and supported what was, up until his departure, a most viable network. He worked with Westpac, the National Safety Council and Bill English of Vowell Helicopters in running the helicopter service, expanding the radio network and offshore rescue boats to provide a rescue service of its type second to none. Through Kevin a close working relationship with the Victoria Police, Ambulance and Fire Brigade was maintained.

As chapter 11 of this history relates, the demise of both the Offshore Rescue and the Helicopter Rescue had many repercussions within the SLSV Strategic Plan, with all but the Radio Network being lost. It ended an exciting era to which Kevin had given and done so much.

After 18 years of close involvement with the movement, Kevin then had to devote more time with this developing business interests.

However the inauguration and continuing success of the Wieland Shield competition owes much to his drive and enthusiasm. With his inimitable ability to get things done and to arouse the enthusiasm of others, and along with people like president George Nutbean, there were wonderful years of interchange and friendship with the American lifeguards. This exchange continues today.

The surf life saving movement in Victoria owes much to Kevin Roderick — a man with a passion and a strong determination for success and progress in anything he applied himself to!

Coming of Age: 1987 - 2002

At the start of a new era after the stormy 1987 Annual General Meeting, all club members —including those who had supported the former leadership — looked for quick results from the new leadership. Uncovering the extent of State Centre's near million-dollar debt had proven that State Centre was technically insolvent and was kept afloat only by the support of its bankers (Westpac). Most of the loan extended by National Council was being quickly used up in salaries and paying interest on its bank loans, especially those related to the helicopter and the Emergency Services division.

Action on disbanding State Centre's expensive-to-operate Emergency Services section came swiftly on the day after the Annual General Meeting. Emergency Services Director Peter Breeze and State Centre Administrator Aldo Montalto resigned. Field Officer Nigel Taylor was then appointed temporary administrator. National Council agreed to continue to fund the National Field Officer's position and Hamish Derricks was appointed to concentrate on the field officer's many tasks. The helicopter was grounded as both a cost cutting measure and as a pre-requisite to putting it up for sale. The Offshore Rescue Boat's (ORB) operations were also put on hold pending a review of its operations and finding sponsors for this service. Meetings of the new executive were scheduled to try and devise a workable plan of raising money to reduce State Centre's debt.

Effectively, State Centre's financial crisis ended its policy of patrolling all the state's coastline which was adopted more than a decade previously when its Helicopter and Offshore Rescue Service made possible this extensive coverage. Over this period, however it appeared to many clubs that the surf lifesaving movement was evolving around the emergency services program—helicopter, ORB, centralised radio communication network —organised from State Centre headquarters in St Kilda, with club matters running a poor second in State Centre's priorities. This view was reinforced when it became known prior to the 1987 Annual General Meeting that State Centre had not been paying clubs the money due to them from government grants but had instead used this money to pay for State Centre's own day-to-day operations.

Now, as part of attempting to rebuild the financial structure of State Centre, a back-to-basics approach was adopted. Not only did the new State Centre leadership have to try and restore club confidence in State Centre as their co-ordinating policy body, it also had to refocus itself on assisting and promoting the clubs in their own areas. To do this, State Centre turned its attention back to the movement's primary role of patrolling the 27 surf beach areas in which its clubs were located. Paying back money owed to the clubs consequently became a high priority. "Repaying the clubs was the first step in restoring the clubs' faith in the collective worth of the surf lifesaving movement in Victoria as represented by State Centre," commented new Treasurer Lloyd Thomas. He observed it was also important at the time to stop the tribalism that seemed to be developing, that is, club against club instead of all members working together.

The next priorities were to raise enough money to clear State Centre's debts and to put in place more accountable systems for expenditure. In terms of fundraising, the experience of the previous months (prior to the 1987 Annual General Meeting) in conducting a public appeal for funds and its limited response proved "you can't rely on the public to fix an organisation" as Treasurer Lloyd Thomas related. Nor could an organisation in financial difficulties rely on appeals for more government funding, as State Centre experienced in its attempts to save its helicopter service. The way to securing consistent funding lay in gaining and maintaining sponsorships as had been proven in the movement's own past experience.

Related to fundraising was the ability to 'live within one's means' and balancing expenditure with income. This meant examining the weaknesses that had shown up in State Centre's committee-type structure that had contributed to its difficulties. The simple committee system had survived since State Centre's inception as a small organisation in 1947, but by the late 1980s it was almost buckling under the complexities of running a large organisation with multiple and diverse activities. Consequently the new leadership began to explore the possibility of creating a professional management-style company structure, with its main operating categories or divisions each responsible for controlling their own budgets.

Gaining new sponsors

A major breakthrough in sponsorships occurred within only a few months of the new leadership taking office. Whilst jogging one morning, President Charles Lyne stopped to chat with an old friend, Ron Casey, general manager of Channel 7, and mentioned how State Centre was in need of help if it was to overcome its financial problems. The following day administrator Nigel Taylor received a phone call from Dr Robin Marks of the Anti-Cancer Council. Dr Marks asked Nigel Taylor if he would like to meet with him to discuss a new campaign the Anti-Cancer Council had designed and one which the Surf Live Saving Association of Victoria might be interested in helping to launch. At the meeting, Dr Marks stated that with financial assistance from the state government's Victorian Health Promotion Foundation (VicHealth[1], of which Ron Casey was a director) the Anti-Cancer Council had designed a Slip! Slop! Slap! Campaign. He then asked if State Centre would be interested in its promotion.

The aim of the Slip! Slop! Slap! campaign (the full slogan read "Slip on a shirt, Slop on the sunscreen and Slap on a hat; Between the hours of 11 and 3, keep out of the sun and under a tree!") was to promote the use of sunscreens and protective clothing on the beaches in order to prevent and reduce the incidence of skin cancer. Dr Marks and his team were interested in establishing high profile role models for the campaign, and considered that if surf lifesavers, with their traditional bronzed Aussie image, were prepared to cover up, then so might the rest of the community. The surf lifesaving movement could be the perfect role model for the Slip! Slop! Slap! campaign and the Anti Cancer Council was prepared to become a major sponsor if the Association was prepared to accept the challenge.

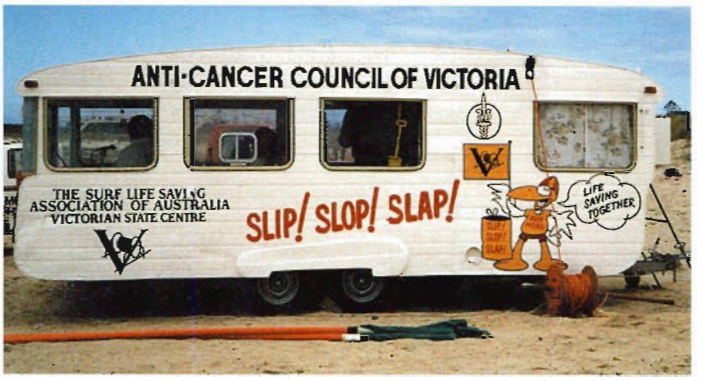

State Centre agreed to this proposal, and secured a significant $250,000 sponsorship arrangement as a result, of which $100,000 was allocated to various surf lifesaving programs and $150,000 to promote the Slip! Slop! Slap! campaign among club members and the beach going public.

Included in this arrangement was the introduction of patrol uniforms (hats and long sleeved shirts— a new initiative in Australia) and roofed patrol shelters with campaign signage in order to project a common image around the state. Also included were 20,000 tubes of sunscreen to be sold by the clubs, re-painting State Centre's caravan with the VicHealth's signage for the Slip! Slop! Slap! campaign and $48,000 to the clubs for equipment. In turn, State Centre gave naming rights to the program for its Patrol Efficiency competition and its Victorian Titles. Almost overnight the surf life saving movement was back in the public spotlight. Both club morale and State Centre's financial position showed marked improvement. The campaign commenced in the 1987/88 season. In the 1990/91 season it changed its name to the SunSmart campaign (which still continues to the present day).

"Other major sponsors then wanted to be associated with the movement, for example Home Pride Bread to promote their Oz Country Split loaf," related President Charles Lyne. "We realised that no business wanted to sponsor a movement not offering much and so we assured them they would receive everything they signed up for in terms of public exposure and promotions."

Restructuring State Centre

In examining the organisational structure of State Centre, attention focussed on how best to restructure the executive arm of State Centre, that is, the management role played by the State Executive which comprised the President, Deputy President, Secretary, Treasurer, Superintendent and the 12 Vice-Presidents (10 representing the clubs, one from Emergency Services and one from Junior Activities). The decision was taken to create a directorship structure for each of the six main operating sections of the Association: finance, marketing, junior activities, emergency services and, by separating the Superintendent's two main functions, examinations and competition. The positions of President, Deputy President and Secretary remained, but the new structure was to be akin to a modern company structure, with a Board of Directors in charge of affairs. Each Director would be responsible for planning and budgeting and managing the section under his or her control, thus leading to a more open system of financial reporting in order to avoid the pitfalls that led to State Centre's previous financial woes. However it was decided to retain the monthly meetings of club delegates in order to maintain the maximum involvement by clubs in State Centre activities, even though this level of decision making was not strictly required of a company under the Companies Act.

These changes were given effect in June 1988 by applying to the Corporate Affairs office to alter the Association's Articles under the Company's Act. State Centre had first formed itself into a public company limited by guarantee on 17 August 1967 as a result of the Land (Surf Life Saving) Act, enabling State Centre to assist clubs to lease the land on which their clubhouses were built instead of the former annual tenancy agreements they had with local councils or foreshore committees. The new directorship structure was changed to President, Secretary, Director of Finance, Competitions Director, Director of Life Saving (formerly State Superintendent), Director of Marketing and Publicity, Director of Junior Activities (who is elected Chairman of the Victorian Junior Activities Committee), Director of Emergency Service. Clearing debts and moving on Trying to sell the twin engine Bolkow helicopter proved a more difficult task than buying it, especially in the aftermath of the recession of late 1987 and early 1988. When attempts to interest local buyers failed, it was advertised on the world market in May 1988. Interest was shown by the English police air wing, but only at a much reduced price than was originally paid. But with State Centre still paying around $8,000 each month on it there was little room for bargaining. The helicopter was sold for $395,400[3], almost half of its purchase price and listed value in State Centre's accounts, but "... we all breathed a sigh of relief," Finance Director Lloyd Thomas related, "since it meant an end to the capital payments we were making and, together with the new sponsorships we had secured, a relatively quick end in sight to our parlous debt." In fact at the 1988/89 Annual General Meeting, Lloyd Thomas was pleased to report that within two years State Centre had reduced its liabilities from $750,000 to $50,000. With Carlton and United Breweries returning as a major sponsor in that year, State Centre was able to clear all its debts by the end of the 1989/90 season, a remarkable achievement indeed in the space of three years.

Financial independence once more allowed State Centre to build on its support capabilities to its clubs. It appointed Peter Milburn as part-time Education and Coaching Officer in 1989. In 1990 a National Council initiative of a Surf Pack Kit for Schools, which State Centre participated in, was ready for trialing in Victorian schools. Two more positions were created in the 1990/91 season (replacing the Education and Coaching position): a full-time Sports Development Manager, filled by Andrew Lapthorne, and a part-time SunSmart Liaison and Junior Development Officer, filled by Chris Foley. A Trauma and Accident Investigation group was established, comprising Dr Graham Cato, Dr Phoebe Mainland, Alan McLean and R. Robinson. An audio logging machine was purchased in 1990 to update equipment for the radio communications network at Surf Rescue Command. In the 1990s Surf Rescue Command's coverage slowly extended to the east and west. Royal Life Saving joined up with the command unit in the 1998/99 summer season to ensure coverage of the whole Port Phillip Bay area.

South Melbourne Life Saving Club, which is one of the oldest beach life saving clubs in Melbourne and affiliated with the Royal Life Saving Society, affiliated to Surf Life Saving Victoria in 1985, thus becoming the first of the Royal Life Saving Society's beach clubs to join the surf lifesaving movement (although still retaining its affiliation with the Royal Life Saving Society). By doing so, the South Melbourne club broke the barrier of a long-standing demarcation line between the Royal Life Saving Society and the Australian Surf Life Saving Association, but also led the way for other Royal Life Saving beach clubs which joined the Victorian State Centre in the mid to late 1990s.

During the previous few years leading up to its affiliation with State Centre, South Melbourne Life Saving Club had given State Centre permission to use its facilities for night carnivals (the first Twilight Carnival was held there in 1982) and for nipper activities on the beach in front of their clubhouse. The personal contacts between State Centre and South Melbourne members led not only to friendships developing but to South

Melbourne club members looking at participating in the more extensive competition opportunities available in the surf lifesaving movement. How to do so, however, presented South Melbourne Club members with a dilemma to resolve. How would an individual Royal club fare if it wanted to join Surf (and vice-versa), acting against the 1938 national agreement between the Royal Life Saving Society and the Surf Life Saving Association of Australia that gave Port Philip Bay beach clubs to Royal and the coastal clubs to Surf? Was it possible for a club to have dual affiliation, or did this agreement mean that affiliation with one body excluded the other?

A precedent for dual affiliation, but at a different level, existed in the past. During State Centre's early years—late 1940s and early 1950s—some members of the Royal Life Saving Society were also members of the Victorian Surf Life Saving Association's State Executive. These Royal Life executive members assisted in the formation of State Centre, and the Victorian Branch of Royal Life was formally affiliated with State Centre. Later the Royal Society dropped their affiliation to State Centre in favour of a less formal association in terms of developing joint policies on such matters as resuscitation techniques and water safety in general, especially when Royal Life continued to expand its activities in swimming pools and inland water programs.

Both sides of the Surf Bronze Medallion belonging to Mathew Henderson V1106, Sth Melbourne, 1989.

During the late 1970s and early 1980s some Royal Life beach club members, who were keen to concentrate their activities exclusively on beach areas, considered themselves held back by Royal's growing involvement in still water and related public education activities. Although Royal Life has a dual role of protecting beaches (mostly in Port Phillip Bay) and inland waters, Royal's beach club members gained the impression that the Society was focussing less on its beach programs and more on its education activities.

State Centre did not involve itself in this internal debate taking place among members of Royal's bayside clubs, preferring to maintain its traditional relationship with Royal Life, although "...it was a particularly cool and delicate relationship at the time", according to Alex (Ajax) Sutherland who was State Centre President from 1985-87. Ajax Sutherland and other State Centre officials were also contacted by members from other Royal bayside clubs such as Mentone and Half Moon Bay, who considered there was a strong possibility of several Royal clubs joining en bloc to State Centre.

The Royal Life Saving Society's Victorian Branch officials were aware of this debate among its bayside clubs and tried to discourage this type of mass defection, as it were, and held formal discussions with State Centre on the issue in 1984. In the meantime, however, State Centre tried to clarify a few matters in the event of having to deal with a formal application to affiliate from a bayside club, in particular whether or not the Royal Beach Patrol Bronze Medallion would be considered the equivalent of the Surf Association's Bronze Medallion, which is the essential entry qualification to active patrol duty and to competitions. Victorian delegates raised this matter at a National Council meeting in 1985, seeking clarification on a provision in the Competition Manual which states that the Association can recognise an appropriate award of National Associations affiliated to World Life Saving. Following the meeting, National Executive Director Gus Staunton sent a memo to all state centres, stating that after discussions with the Chief Superintendent, this meant "That where State Centres so desire, and by specific resolution, that they may recognise the RLSS Australia Beach Patrol Medallion as an 'appropriate award', and allow the participation of such award holders in SLSA competitions".

With this hurdle passed, discussions between South Melbourne club officials and State Centre officials centred on the wider ramifications for the club if South Melbourne affiliated with State Centre, such as compulsory rostered patrols and participating in the patrol efficiency competition, outfitting patrol members in SLSA approved uniforms (thus dropping the Royal uniforms), 'patching in' to State Centre's radio network, access to State Centre's building grant scheme for clubs, and, although South Melbourne club would retain its Royal Society affiliation, "...it would be expected to follow State Centre's direction". As for participation by South Melbourne in Victorian State Titles, State Centre would allow South Melbourne members to participate on the basis of recognising the Royal Beach Patrol Medallion as the equivalent of the Surf Bronze Medallion, but only for 12 months, asking South Melbourne members to present themselves for the SLSA basic award in the following season in order to avoid any possible conflicts at the national title level.

State Centre received South Melbourne Life Saving Club's formal affiliation application on 15 April 1986; it was ratified on 11 August 1986. This was a pioneering move on the part of the club, knowing full well the extent of the Royal Society's wrath against St Kilda Life Saving Club in 1929 when St Kilda tried to affiliate with the Surf Life Saving Association in Sydney for the sake of broadening its competition options. This time around, however, the event went ahead in a cooler climate, as it were, with Royal Life endeavouring to provide more assistance to its beach clubs in the face of this defection. The other Royal bayside clubs which were earlier keen to join State Centre adopted a wait-and-see attitude before going further.

Over the next few seasons it was evident that South Melbourne Life Saving Club was thriving under its new affiliation to the surf lifesaving movement. Other Royal Life bayside clubs soon followed its lead, the next being Half Moon Bay in 1989. It is interesting to note that in the World Interclub Surf Life Saving Championships held in Lubeck, Germany in 1990, in which both Royal and Surf clubs could compete, South Melbourne club achieved a respectable 22nd place, and Warrnambool SLSC came 24th. Perhaps in an attempt to stop any further defections, the Royal Life Saving Society wrote to State Centre in August 1990 requesting permission for its clubs to compete in the next surf life saving championship, but was refused. In order to service effectively these bayside clubs as part of the lifesaving movement, State Centre created a new district titled Port Phillip District in 1990 comprising South Melbourne and Half Moon Bay clubs.

South Melbourne club and Half Moon Bay, with their dual affiliations, continued to compete in Royal Life Saving competitions. South Melbourne, with its competition skills honed in the surf movement, won at both the Royal Life Saving Victorian and Australian titles in the 1991/92 season. Shortly after, a number of other Royal Life Saving clubs joined State Centre: Williamstown and Carrum in 1994, Mentone and Chelsea-Longbeach in 1996[4], Mordialloc, Altona and Mount Martha in 1999, and Bonbeach and St Kilda in 2000. In 1998 new surf life saving clubs were started at Sorrento and Inverloch. Interestingly, Inverloch and Wonthaggi Life Saving Clubs were the only two Royal Life Saving Clubs on the Victorian Coast until the Inverloch club folded in 1969.

The diversity of the 90s

During the past 13 years of the new administration, following the changeover in 1987, State Centre as an organisation has become a major sporting and water safety body in Victoria. This status has been achieved not only through changes made to its leadership structure in terms of directorships and assistance to its growing number of clubs, but also through a wide range of innovations centred around its initial duty of care on the beaches patrolled by its clubs. The new look of the 1990s has come from such innovations as the shorter and lighter rescue board, waterproof radio harness, outpost radios, two-buoy patrol set-up, and the distinctive but consistent image of patrol uniforms through the SunSmart program and today through the TABCORP Surf Rescue Fund support scheme.

Major highlights of the competition side of club activities were the formation of Under 15 and Under 18 Development Squads in 1988/89, with an Under 21 squad introduced in the 1989/90 season, then the introduction of Youth Development Camps. The first squads were coached by Peter Milburn (co-ordinator) and Alan Dell (manager). The aim of these squads was to encourage activity among the younger members after they had left the Nipper movement at age 13, and in particular to provide competition outlets for these members both within and outside the surf movement itself.

Individual clubs soon started up their own development squads as more extensive opportunities arose, such as carnivals in Port Phillip Bay and the growth of the iron man/ iron woman program which brought a higher profile through television coverage and has developed into the National Surf League competition.

Restricted carnivals were re-introduced in the 1987/88 season, that is, entry restricted to clubs based on their competition results in preceding seasons. This series, modeled on a former division of A and B events held in carnivals in the 1960s, was devised to help revive interest in competition of those clubs whose members often felt overwhelmed by the growing band of elite athletes from the more successful clubs. The first restricted carnivals held at Wye River, Kennett River, and Seaspray proved highly successful. The introduction of a variety of Special Events chiefly organised at individual club level as fundraisers and public relations exercises also provided more competition opportunities: the Pier To Pub at Lorne, the Portland Aluminium Admella Surf Boat Marathon, the Carrera Surf Boat Spectacular, Portsea Swim Classic, Woolamai Channel Challenge, Ocean Grove's Rip to River and others.

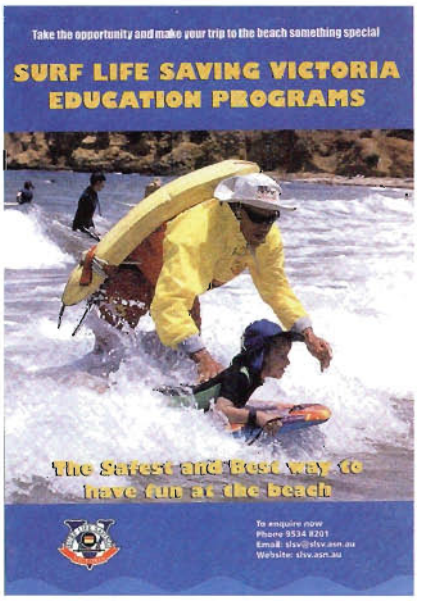

In the 1991/92 season, the NutriGrain National Surf League was introduced with the announcement that it "...was set to take surf life saving into the new millennium". NutriGrain State Surf League competitions were introduced the following year. The Surf Boat Rowers Association of Victoria, formed in 1989 to focus on the competition potential of one of the surf lifesaving movement's oldest disciplines, conducted its first Championship event in the 1992/93 season. Two more competition innovations were introduced in the 1995/96 season: the State Surf League in Port Phillip Bay and the introduction of endurance Ironman/Ironwoman events.

Considerable innovations in the traditional field of beach patrols have also occurred in the past decade. From the 1988 season with no helicopter available for broad beach surveys, clubs were encouraged to set up outposts to widen their patrol coverage. By 1991, many clubs had set up outposts, even roving patrols and had begun negotiations with local foreshore authorities for improved signage along beaches - a process that continued through the decade. Agreement too was reached with the Board Riders Association in relation to new signs for board riding at patrolled beaches: the board riding sign was to be put up by clubs and located at least 10 metres outside the patrol's red and yellow flags. In that same season, clubs were informed that the reel and line was optional on the beach, thereby ending a long tradition when the reel and line was the mainstay device of a patrolled (and unpatrolled) beach. Special Sunsmart patrol uniforms became available during this season and within a year were widely adopted by all clubs. A major achievement in the 1991/92 season was the spread of Bronze Camps to all Victorian clubs. Many clubs had already started such camps, for example Portsea as early as the 1980/81 season, to create a more centrally focussed arrangement for putting members through the training necessary for them to gain their Bronze Medallion. Within two seasons these Bronze Camps were providing the bulk of newly qualified members for a number of clubs.

wishing to hire lifesavers to be on duty at any special water-based events, such as in triathlons. The title was changed in 1995 to Event Lifeguard Service after safety standards were set and subsequently endorsed by VicSwim. In the field of resuscitation techniques, two significant changes were made, one involving the replacement of the OxyViva units with the new Laerdal Aquatic Resuscitator during the 1992/93 season; the other being the introduction in the 1993/94 season of Stiffneck cervical collars as part of a club's equipment in order to help manage patients with any suspected spinal injuries.

Another significant development has been the improvement of the UHF network in State Centre's Radio Communications Network at Surf Rescue Command. Since 1989/90, Royal Life Saving bayside clubs have also been able to access this facility. More recently, both Surf Life Saving Victoria and the Royal Life Saving Association have conducted their operations from A.W. Walker House.

Regrettably the Offshore Rescue Boat (ORB) service could not attract the sponsorship required to maintain its activities. After financing it through a few seasons, with either stand-by or limited operations, State Centre stopped the ORB service in 1992.

Surf Life Saving Victoria was indeed proud to have won an Advance Australia Award in the 1991/92 season "for outstanding contribution to community service" over its 45 years to that time, as well as to the contributions it was making currently on all fronts. Three of its members were also honoured for their services to the surf life saving movement: President Charles Lyne receiving the Order of Australia (AM) in 1995, Peter Taylor (OAM) in 1997 and Peter O'Rorke (OAM) in 1998. Then in 1999, Surf Life Saving Victoria won the Victoria Day Award for community public service as an organisation.

One field of activity in terms of its clubs' long-term interests has been involvement with many other organisations planning for the future of Victoria's coastal and bay development and associated water safety policies. In 1993 State Centre finalised all lease arrangements for clubs with the Department of Conservation and Environment, whereby State Centre is able to re-negotiate all future lease arrangements for its affiliated clubs as one entity (but not the RLSS dual affiliated clubs), in place of the multiple individual negotiations that had occurred previously with different councils and/or other government agencies.[5]

State Centre was active in the establishment of the Victorian Coastal and Bay Management Council, which was established in 1996 to develop a statewide strategy on coastal safety issues. Also in that year, a directory titled Beaches of the Victorian Coast and Port Phillip Bay was published jointly by Surf Life Saving Australia and University of Sydney. It is a " guide to the nature, characteristics, surf and safety" of 734 beach locations in Victoria. This significant reference book was the result of research conducted by Professor Andrew Short of the University of Sydney's Coastal Studies Unit, Surf Life Saving Australia and Victoria's State Centre. The following season, 1996/97, State Centre was involved with the Victoria Police in a Safe Swim Program to promote various safe swimming beach locations. Another feature of involving itself with other organisations has been State Centre's work in schools, such as the School Surf League program, and its Surf Ed interactive computer and book program for students (the computer software program was a world first!).

After a State Centre review in 1997 of the condition of clubhouses, and in light of the fact that a number of clubs had made unsuccessful attempts to seek state government funding, State Centre made submissions to the Victorian government's recently introduced Community Support Fund for assistance in helping clubs rebuild their older clubhouses. This approach resulted in the Victorian Premier Mr Jeff Kennett announcing in 1998 a $2m grant per year for three years to Victorian clubs, both Royal and Surf, to improve their clubhouse facilities.

Within twelve months, five clubhouses benefited from this scheme, which was a dollar for dollar program capped at $300,000 for each club. Such grants (in addition to funds raised at the local level) have assisted Lorne, Port Fairy, Venus Bay, Waratah Beach and Barwon Heads/13th Beach, Woolamai Beach, Half Moon Bay, Lakes Entrance, Port Campbell and Wye River, with more to follow as clubs rebuild for the future.

As if to cap this decade of achievements and securing financial viability for the future, State Centre secured a major sponsorship arrangement with TABCORP commencing in the 1998/99 season. This is the largest state sponsorship of any state in Australia, providing a significant level of funding for lifesaving equipment and for State Centre's public awareness programs. With the more recent inclusion of United Energy (now Pulse) as sponsor of the junior development and education area, Surf Life Saving Victoria has developed one of the most successful sponsorship portfolios of any state.

From past to future

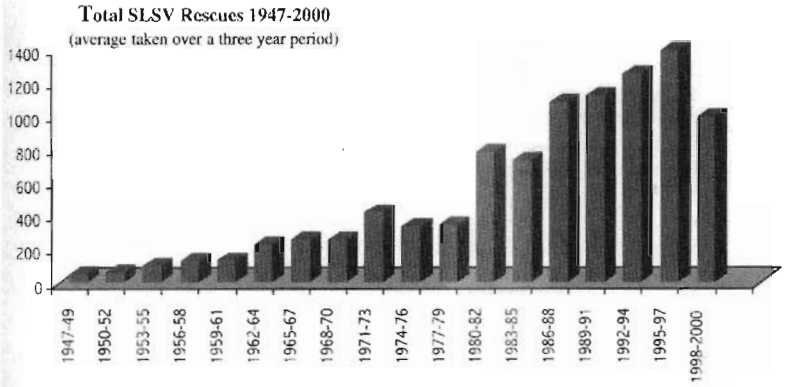

As Surf Life Saving Victoria moves past the year 2002, its achievements over the 55 years since it was established have made a major contribution to the Victorian community. From the foundation year (1947) to 2002, the total number of rescues by its members on patrol duty has reached 28, 220.[6] This number of lives saved from drowning represents an heroic feat on the part of volunteer surf lifesavers trained in using the technology available at the time to effect fast and efficient rescues—from the former reel and line and surfboats to today's IRBs and surf rescue boards—as well as providing on-the-spot resuscitation to the apparently drowned.

During the past 13 years, the number of surf life saving clubs in Victoria has increased greatly. From 26 clubs in the 1985/86 season (a number which had remained constant for the previous 18 years), State Centre in 2002 comprises 41 clubs with a total record membership of 13,000.[7] The diversity of activities promoted within the movement—patrols, competition, professional lifeguards, education, training and administration—now encompasses a broad-based range of interests for all ages from nippers to veterans. In effect, today's surf life saving movement provides a career path for young people that will undoubtedly ensure the movement's future relevance to Australian society.

Looking forward, State Centre's present day involvement in social planning issues might seem remote from an earlier period when beach patrols and competition carnivals were the chief preoccupation of its officials. Yet such involvement in statewide water safety programs, coastal management programs, surf education in schools, junior and senior sports development structures and the expansion of its professional lifeguard service are the present day hallmarks of a professional community-based organisation.

necessary to administer its growing number of programs, especially those in community education and scientific lifesaving training. The establishment of the Surf Life Saving Victoria Foundation, brought to fruition by President Charles Lyne and Treasurer Lloyd Thomas in 1996 after years of planning, will ensure that a separate capital fund (managed by a separate Board of Directors) from donations, bequests and trusts is applied to the best interests of all surf lifesaving clubs in Victoria. In addition, the financial security achieved in the past 13 years has enabled State Centre to revive in part its former 'all-beaches' policy through an arrangement with Direct Air Charter to provide fixed wing aircraft for coastal surveillance from the 1999/2000 season.

Nevertheless the core activities of today's surf lifesaving movement would still be recognised by its founders. They would applaud the movement's continual modernisations in order to achieve the primary aims of providing safe swimming conditions in patrolled areas of our surf beaches and rescuing and reviving those in danger of drowning. Great innovators in their day, the founding members would revel in today's technology, just as they did with the reel, line and belt and surfboats, both in rescue situations and in competing with other club members to keep their lifesaving skills honed and efficient. The fond wish of the founding members for widespread public support of their volunteer humanitarian movement through donations would indeed make them happy to see the considerable contributions made today by governments and the generous sponsorships by companies both big and small.

Yet it is not only the founders who have placed their stamp on the organisation. The generous volunteer contributions of tens of thousands of club and associated members, including those who have taken on the extra work of State Centre administration over the past 55years have created a vibrant humanitarian organisation. Its volunteer members - past and present - share the same ideals of providing a safe public swimming environment on our coastal beaches. At the same time, its members share a love of surf play and sport that unites them with members of surf life saving clubs world-wide. Undoubtedly, Surf Life Saving Victoria's future will be as engaging as its past.

School Surf League and the Victorian Youth Development Program

Contributed by Naomi McGain

The School Surf League is one of the more recent innovations introduced to Victoria. It had its beginnings from discussions aimed at students above the Nipper age (7-13 years) with the idea of encouraging young people of this more mature age and more likely to be making up their own mind as to which leisure time involvement they might follow.

The early response to the call for interested schools was in fact very meagre. The School Surf League was designed to provide an opportunity for students from all backgrounds to participate in a full range of surf lifesaving events Since its introduction in 1997, it has proved to be an exciting and very popular inter-school sport.

Just seven schools competed in the first School Surf League event conducted in 1997. Twenty three teams entered the next year, forty eight in the next and eighty five teams competed in 2000. The event went on to attract 810 students from over 100 schools during 2001 and has provided a great avenue of recruitment for clubs, with over 800 students now involved.

As the competition has grown in popularity, new initiatives have been introduced to cater for the massive expansion with rounds of the School Surf League held throughout the State catering for schools outside the metropolitan area.

The School Surf League has opened the way for the lifesaving movement to access students also from multicultural backgrounds. Westall Secondary College is a regular participant in the School Surf League, their students are predominantly from islander or Asian backgrounds. When asked if they had ever paddled a Malibu before, one student said the only similar experience was paddling around the islands as a child on a wooden craft his father had made.

As a result of the students' enthusiasm in the School Surf League, Westall Secondary College also applied to become involved in the Victorian Youth Development Program with Surf Life Saving Victoria. There is great enthusiasm and even greater numbers anticipated for both the School Surf League and the Victorian Youth Development Program.

The Victorian Youth Development Program

The Victorian Youth Development Program is a State Government initiative designed to provide leadership and community service opportunities for students right across the state. There are a number of service providers such as Red Cross, St Johns Ambulance, the Navy, the Army, the Country Fire Authority and Surf Life Saving Victoria.

In 1997 SLSV started with two schools in their program. In 1998 this number grew to six, then to ten in 1999 and fourteen in 2000. The schools are situated from Sale to the east of the state and Portland to the far west. Once again this program provides a great recruitment opportunity for clubs, as the students are trained to a bronze medal level at school. All participants are encouraged to formally join a surf life saving club and their involvement in the school program lasts for two years.

The program is both practical and theoretical; with first year students generally gaining their Surf Rescue Certificate and in the second year they are tested for their Bronze Medallion. It is a comprehensive program that covers a wide range of subjects relating to the Surf Life Saving movement from patrolling the beach to all the aspects of surf sport. The benefit for Surf Life Saving is that once students gain their Surf Rescue Certificate they are required to patrol the beach like any other surf lifesavers.

These Victorian initiated programs will go down in our history as two great initiatives for Surf Life Saving, and I have found the experience and involvement of introducing and managing both these programs a most rewarding experience.

Victoria's Board of Examiners

Our 'Blue Diamonds'

Victoria's Board of Examiners (BOE) started when State Centre was established in Victoria in 1947, with only two qualified people to put into place all the requirements related to life saving standards on our beaches.

They were the recognised fathers of Surf Life Saving Victoria, Ainslie 'Sprint' Walker (originally of the Many club but joined Torquay club in 1946), and Allan Kennedy, (a state superintendent of Queensland) —the person with the greater experience of BOE standards. The other contributors to the establishment of the BOE in Victoria were Joe Henke and Les Errey who were examiners from the Royal Life Saving Society.

Members of the Board of Examiners are referred to affectionately as 'The Blue diamonds' because of the insignia badge they wear on the centre front of their all-whites.

Whilst the SLSA handbook has been continually updated over the years, every member has always needed to be uniformly examined and qualified, which are the main responsibilities of the BOE.

The Board of Examiners, often referred to as the 'engine room' of the movement, has always had a very strong following. The monthly meetings are held at AW Walker House and attendance from across the State is always strong.

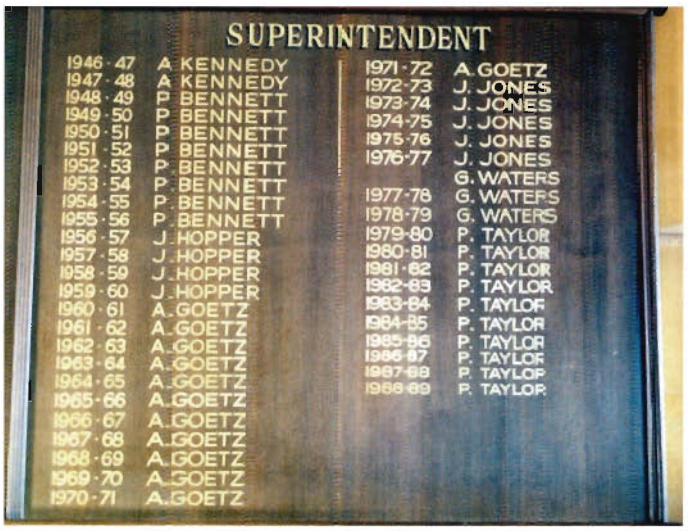

Examinations for the Bronze Medallion involve a club instructor and squads of candidates who are put through the disciplines required to achieve this award. The instructors themselves must either hold the Instructor's Certificate, or be gaining it under the examiner of the day.

Victoria boasts a high standard of performance across all of its clubs, due in many respects to the Patrol Efficiency Competition, which was introduced by Otway District Superintendent Tony Lester in 1962, who gave much of his life to surf life saving and who wrote the included account of the Blue Diamonds.

Each superintendent/director has been completely dedicated to the cause, as have all the district supervisors, examiners and instructors over the years. Victoria now has a patrolling efficiency of 92% (on average) based on the patrol competition.

The Board of Examiners in every state is the forum where new ideas and gear developments have emerged, methods have been improved, innovations have been born and lifelong friendships made.

Their example has led to many club members aspiring to become examiners. These are the lifesavers who willingly desire to make a greater contribution to the work of the Association. With forty-one clubs, and more clubs to come, the Board of Examiners continues to maintain our surf lifesaving standards for the betterment of all Victorians.

A Brief History of Victoria's Board of Examiners

By Tony Lester

This is a personal recollection of the early and middle years of the Board of Examiners: its activities, personalities, many achievements and the wonderful esprit de corps of its members.

In a sense, the aspirations of individuals to become Examiners has led to a sort of self selection of men and now women, from the ranks of surf lifesaving. These have always been and still are, those lifesavers who wanted to make a greater contribution to the work of the Association: people who thought deeply about where it was and where it was heading. This has meant that on the Board, we always had a group of like-minded members, who usually got on well with one another, tended to work well together and pulled in the same general direction. That is not to say that there were never disagreements, or personality conflicts, but in retrospect, these were minimal and there were only occasional incidents of 'beach rage', or 'meeting mayhem'.

It may be a bit difficult for current and future board members to conceive of a surf life saving era 40 to 50 years ago where there were virtually no sponsors, no salaried officers, no radios, no IRBs, or rescue tubes, no mouth to mouth resuscitation, no CPR, or oxygen resuscitators. There were no calculators, let alone computers. The only event trophies were small pennants, which were fiercely competed for and the only major trophy was the Age Reel, which was awarded for overall carnival points for the season. It might be equally difficult for you to picture some of us now-decrepit old-timers as ever having been not only your age, but also fit, healthy, active and with our own hair and teeth. As for we inate lifesaving geriatrics, in our dotage we dream dreams of summers that were always hot, surf that was always huge.

Most club houses back then were little better than shacks, or in some cases a couple of old bathing boxes. Bunkhouses were only dreamt about. There was no permanent SLSV headquarters. All Board of Examiners and State Centre monthly meetings were held at the old Scott's Hotel in Collins Street in the city. The hotel donated the meeting room free of charge. Later we met in a Department of Civil Aviation office in the old Rialto Building (before it was integrated into the new hotel).

In the 1950s, the only officers who received any payment at all for their services were the State Centre Secretary and the Secretary of the Board of Examiners, who received honorariums of £100 ($200) and £50 ($100) per year respectively. This was supposed to cover their out-of-pocket expenses, which of course it did not.

The first twenty odd years of the BOE was a magic time for its members. Things were much simpler then. The Victorian State Centre was much smaller and our record then, as now, on our patrolled beaches was unblemished. We had the respect of the beach-going public and their generous support. In the early part of this period, World War II was not long over, austerity was still official policy and surf swimming, as a recreation, was still not all that big in Victoria. It became big later for a number of reasons. Firstly, the SLSA's rescue performance record was very good and people felt safer, swimming at the now-patrolled beaches.

A few years after World War II, in the mid 1950s, the population gradually became more prosperous, acquired cars and became far more mobile. Lastly, there was a great improvement in access and in public facilities, such as parking and toilets, at some hitherto almost deserted beaches. Beyond Lorne, the trip to Apollo Bay, hitherto a rather dangerous journey on a very narrow and mostly unmade Great Ocean Road, became much easier when the road was widened and sealed.

The surf life saving qualifications in the 1950s were far fewer in number. There was the Resuscitation Certificate and the Qualifying Certificate for younger members, whilst for older juniors and seniors there were the basic Surf Bronze Medallion, the Instructor's Certificate and ultimately, the Examiners Certificate.

The Surf Life Saving Association in Victoria in this period was small. Even by 1951/52, there were only 309 active members in 10 clubs: Torquay, Anglesea, Point Lonsdale, Lorne, Sorrento-Portsea, Portland, Ocean Grove, Port Fairy, Warrnambool and RAAF College. There were also 22 unaffiliated individual members from the Royal Life Saving Society. However, in the 1950s the Association was expanding and growing steadily and we were all part of it. We all enjoyed the sport and the social life, the comradeship and the satisfaction, which is always derived from shared tasks and shared goals. We also enjoyed the patrolling and other service activities. As many members will attest, there is nothing that gives you a greater feeling of self worth than literally saving someone's life. We were proud of the role we played and we relished the fun, the laughter and the firm friendships that we made and which still endure.

In writing this brief history, the easiest way to keep the events in chronological order is to group them in order of State Superintendents. Each occupier of the position put his own stamp on the role and on the life saving activities of the Association. The title was actually Victorian State Superintendent of Instruction and Examination. Whilst these two areas were fundamental parts of the job description, the role of Superintendent also included the running of surf carnival competition and the development of life saving and life saving clubs across the state. In this new millennium, the task has become so big that it now has to be shared by three people. Board Secretaries and Deputy Superintendents also played a vital role in running the show.

Allan Kennedy 1946 to 1948

Allan Kennedy from Queensland was the first man to hold the position of Superintendent in Victoria. He was a veteran lifesaver and Superintendent from Queensland and came to Victoria in 1946/47 and trained many of our first bronze squads, then our first instructors and examiners. His untiring efforts took him to clubs and communities all over the state.

There is some credence in his theory that by his work in building up States other than Queensland, he would eventually see a National Surf Lifesaving organisation that would not be dominated by NSW. He certainly achieved this objective.

After two years as Superintendent, his company moved him interstate and his role was taken over by Phillip Bennett.

Phillip Bennett 1948 to 1956

Board of Examiner Secretary: Harry Pittard

Phil was a man much revered in the Association. His tenure as State Superintendent was an eight year period of consolidation, following the early establishment of Surf Life Saving in Victoria in 1946/47. He developed a disciplined attitude and standard that was followed throughout his tenure. He was a foundation member of both the Torquay club and the Victorian State Centre. He had been a member of the Melbourne Swimming club prior to and after his wartime service and along with brothers Bill, Reg and Peter and his nephew Graham Bennett, was an early participant at Torquay. Phillip was a member of the first Torquay Bronze Squad and became an Instructor in 1947 and an Examiner in 1948.

The young aspiring lifesavers standing at attention, waiting for this man to walk onto the beach, were inspired by his presence. He was always dressed immaculately in his Board of Examiners white uniform and hat. The drill had to be perfect, the questions answered satisfactorily and each exam was taken very, very, seriously by all participants. Phil would always be the first to congratulate all those who passed.

Much of his own business career was as a director of Acorn Gowns, then a leading manufacturer of women's wear in Melbourne. He was a busy man but always found time for his beloved Surf Life Saving activities. Suffering from cancer, he died in 1972, survived by his wife Mavis and sons, Phillip junior and Damian.

His last wish was to have his ashes scattered off the point at Torquay. This wish was carried out by his two sons and his numerous surf friends said farewell to a man who was a mentor to so many.

At this point, it may be interesting to reflect on the competitive side of surf life saving during the years in which Phil was Superintendent.

Surf carnivals in the late 1940s and early 1950s were a great and exciting novelty for most Victorians and drew large audiences. The carnival areas were always cordoned off for the event with a hessian enclosure. The public was charged admission, I think of about 2 shillings (20c), which they cheerfully paid. The annual Club Carnival and its associated activities (like parking and catering) were the major annual source of funds for every club. There being fewer clubs then, each of them was allotted a carnival during the season. The surf carnival format and the conduct of events, as with the surf rescue and training techniques of the time, were those we inherited from NSW and other states and were followed religiously.

At the surf carnivals, there were probably less than a third of the events which now go to make up a carnival program. It must be remembered that there were no short surfboards. These would not appear until 1956. There were no women's events either (in fact there were no women lifesavers) and there were no nippers. The Taplin Relay and other relay events and the IRB events were also added much later. The Iron Man Competition was a Victorian initiative and started around 1966.

The carnival program of the early 1950s consisted of the following very basic events.

March past

The carnival always opened officially with the March past at about one o'clock, although the heats of other events may have taken place in the morning. The teams, originally of 20 - 24 men, were clad in traditional, skirted, long, march past costumes that fashion-wise, were throwbacks to the 1920s. Most of them were made from extremely prickly wool.

The teams lined up just off the arena prior to the event and were inspected by zealous examiners for minor infringements, such as twisted shoulder straps, holes in costumes or caps, or incorrect knots. In the march itself, points were deducted for being out of step, incorrect dressing of both lines and ranks, incorrect wheeling, etc. The judging was meticulous, with almost fanatical attention to the most minor of details. Even by 1969, the march past rules still occupied 15 pages of the manual. There was clearly a military basis to this, which probably sprang from the fact that so many senior SLSA officials had been servicemen in one or other of two world wars.

The marching style was almost a high stepping strut (with toes and fore foot to touch the sand, first) with all participants looking very stern and serious. This clearly was not something you were supposed to enjoy, let alone look happy about. All that said, the event was always a crowd-pleaser and all clubs, but especially Warrnambool and Point Lonsdale, took it very, very, seriously. It was seen as a way in which older club members could stay involved.

At major championships, a pipe band was almost mandatory and it usually played 'Scotland the Brave'. Once the teams had halted and were lined up along the beach, there was a great flurry of examiner activity, so that the score sheets could be collected and collated and the result announced before the teams were marched off the beach. A fine balance was needed from the speakers opening the carnival. There had to be time for the results to be calculated, but not so much time that the marchers might drop dead from boredom. There were occasions when this critical point was almost exceeded.

At one stage, a series of fierce winter storms and exceptionally high tides denuded many beaches of almost all their sand. To have sufficient space, there was therefore a need to conduct the event at low tide. On a couple of occasions the speeches went on for too long, the tide came in and what started as a march-past became a wade-off. This was a potential disaster, because nobody wanted his precious costume to actually get wet.

Junior and senior beach sprints

These were always hotly contested events, with great inter-club rivalry. The top clubs of this period would have been Lorne, Torquay, Pt Lonsdale, Warrnambool and later on, Anglesea in the 1960s. The Torquay members used to jokingly call the Lorne Club the 'Lorne Harriers'.

Junior and senior beach relay

These were also hotly contested and the examiners needed to be on their toes to detect and penalise breaking at baton changes, which was endemic. Some clubs, who shall remain nameless, were infamous for infringing the rules.

Beach flags (or musical flags)

These events (there might also be a chariot race or a pillow fight) started as so-called novelty events (even then they were hardly novel) in the very early days. They were really meant to be a bit of a giggle for competitors and spectators, after the serious stuff was finished. However, when they were conducted at State and National Titles the winners were actually given titles and pennants or medals, so everyone got deadly, almost farcically, serious about them and remain so. There were ponderous and spurious rationalizations given for conducting them. One such nonsense was "Beach flag events are important in training life savers to react quickly". Nobody seemed to think it faintly ludicrous that lifesavers would conduct their patrols lying on their backs, completely tense, looking at the sky, with their heads toward the sea: and roll over and leap to their feet only when someone inconsiderately fired a gun. Nobody, it seems, thinks so even now.

In earlier days, if you were given the heavy responsibility of running a beach flag event, you did your best to confound the competitors when you placed the batons in the sand. The idea was to create as much confusion and mayhem as possible for the entertainment of the mob. Imagine twenty competitors diving on fifteen batons placed in a four foot circle.

Nowadays, alas, it is all terribly earnest and you need a theodolite to set up the event just so. Everyone strives to be politically correct and make sure that nobody is disadvantaged. The batons are set in the sand in a dead straight line and competitors run up the beach instead of along it, which means that the course is often laughably short.

Pillow Fights and Chariot Races

Pillow fights were designed for the entertainment of those who derive pleasure from watching someone beat someone else with a pillow, which, if wet, was more like a sandbag. In hindsight, how carnival administrators ever got so serious about this event defies belief.

Junior and Senior R&R

The rescue and resuscitation event, or R&R for short, has always been considered the pinnacle of life saving competition and the winning club was regarded as the premiers.

Its devotees, both competitors and judges, were and still are, quite fanatical and obsessed with the minutiae of the drill. This was to the point where very minor infringements in terms of execution were penalised and a result could hinge on the distance one's heels were apart when standing at ease, or the precision with which one marched. There is, of course, a rationale for life saving drills, in that well-trained people then react instinctively and automatically in moments of crisis and this is a desirable thing.

However, one cannot help feeling that the focus of a lot of the R&R training was off the mark and rigid to the point where form mattered more than substance. This has always been so, and the history of the event is punctuated with occasional changes, mostly to correct something, such as a resuscitation method which was proven to be inappropriate although it had been followed zealously for the previous twenty years.

The R&R devotees keenly demonstrated their art to a panel of medical experts attending the International Life Saving Convention held in Sydney in March 1960. The experts' collective judgement is detailed later on.

Junior and senior surf races

Although the fittest and strongest swimmer always had an edge in this event, there was an element of luck involved. How often have we seen someone who was clearly the best swimmer and way out in front, only to be mown down by an also-ran, who was able to catch a wave 'out the back' and plough through the entire field?

State Centre President 'Sprint' Walker usually acted as starter for the swimming events and for the purpose used a modified .38 Webley pistol. When fired, the pistol discharged to the side, rather than out the barrel. One day Sprint forgot this and fired the gun down beside his leg, with dire consequences to his leg, great embarrassment to himself and great amusement to his colleagues.

Junior and Senior Belt Race

There was also an element of luck in the draw for this event, although it rarely affected the result. Occasionally there was a run-out at one end of the beach, which gave the number one or number six competitor an advantage. There could be holes or channels in some parts of the course, which might cause problems during the wade. Local knowledge also played a part for someone competing on his or her home beach.

Junior and Senior Surf Teams Race

These were events that most clubs still find very hard to win. The club needed at least four very good swimmers and whilst most club members were adequate swimmers, they were not necessarily in this class.

Novice Surf Race

This event was for competitors who had never won a senior surf race. It carried as many points in the overall interclub score as any other event and hence, once overall club trophies became more generous, there was the occasional bit of contrived skulduggery. The opportunity was there for a new gun swimmer to contrive to always come second. That way he could earn his club four points per carnival, in the surf race and the novice surf race. Jim Beard of the Lorne SLSC was the consummate clubman and was very successful at this dodge over a couple of seasons.

Board and Ski

- Junior and senior board (long board only)
- Junior and senior single ski.
- Junior and senior double ski.
- Novice craft events.

In all these events, again the winner was (and often is) the one who, although trailing for two thirds of the race, has a fortuitous wave pop up behind him, catches it and blitzes the field. Conversely, the loser is often the one who on the way out is unlucky enough to strike a breaking wave that would wipe out the best ski paddler in the country.

Junior and Senior boat race

There was no 'B' boat race, but some clubs ran a second crew in the senior event. The senior boat was always the last event of the day.

After The Carnival

There being only a small number of clubs and therefore few heats, this carnival program could easily be run in one day, starting at about 9am and finishing at about 4.30pm.

The carnival was always followed by a 'bunfight', that is, a beach party where there would be an 18-gallon beer keg or two and maybe even a few rolls or pies for the competitors and officials. These were boisterous affairs, sometimes with Owen 'Yatey' Yateman's jazz band from Torquay, plus a lot of acts, rude jokes, bawdy songs and limerick contests, which could go on for ages. It was all great fun and it enabled members from different clubs to socialise together in a way which, regrettably, no longer seems to occur. There was great inter-club rivalry but it was all very good-natured. The atmosphere at a carnival and the apres carnival bunfight was convivial and enjoyable.

The role of the Board, then as now, was to run the show, which it did with great enthusiasm and rigid adherence to the carnival handbook, or 'Red Book'. There were not many, if any, grey areas and the word of the 'Blue Diamonds' was law. If one were to be critical, it would be of this rather rigid attitude, which in retrospect we now see as tending to stifle progress, particularly in the development of improved rescue and resuscitation techniques. It was not until the 1960s that the really big surge in research and methods improvement would occur.

Phil Bennett's reign saw the arrival of a number of new clubs, namely Apollo Bay in 1952/53 then Point Leo and Seaspray in 1954/55.

Jack Hopper 1956 to 1960

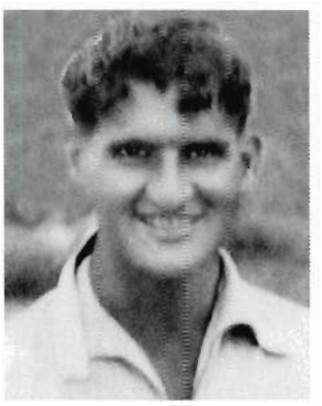

Bord of Examiners Secretary: Dick Ellis

Jack Hopper became State Superintendent when Phil Bennett retired in 1956 and he immediately tackled the job with great enthusiasm.

Jack was a mechanical engineer, specializing in food machinery. He came to Victoria with his wife Leila and daughter Peta, from NSW, when transferred by his employers, Baker Perkins Ltd.. He brought with him a great deal of surf lifesaving knowledge and experience. On his arrival, he joined Sorrento-Portsea SLSC for the first of his eventual ten years service with them and stepped straight into the club's R&R team. He was an outstanding belt swimmer and was renowned as a body surfer and single ski rider. Jack was one of the three other swimmers with the late John Wishart in that awful incident on a Sunday in 1956, when John was taken by a shark, behind the break, off the Portsea beach.

Jack Hopper was an inspirational leader and one of the most dedicated men ever to hold the office of State Superintendent. He worked ceaselessly and tirelessly for the Association, simultaneously holding the club captaincy at Portsea and the job of State Superintendent throughout most of his four years in office. He was a great motivator and travelled huge distances around Victoria, promoting and fostering the clubs and their training, examination, beach patrols and competition. He never missed an opportunity to act as 'obstetrician' at the birth of new clubs and there were several in this period. In all his time in office, he never once claimed travel expenses, which for him must have been enormous. The State Centre car allowance was then a munificent sixpence (5c) per mile for activities on behalf of State Centre, or the Board.

In the first year of Jack's tenure, two special Olympic International Carnivals were held on successive weekends at Torquay to coincide with the November 1956 Melbourne Olympic Games. Both carnivals drew huge crowds, including a lot of international visitors. After each of them, the traffic was so horrendous that we took over three hours to return to Melbourne along the then single-lane highway.

short, fibreglass-covered balsawood, finned surfboards, which they used in rescue work.

These, to us, revolutionary surf craft stunned the locals and began a revolution in surfboard design and in the sport of surfboard riding that continues to this day. The Americans also demonstrated their 'rescue tube' method of single-man rescue, now adopted as standard equipment for our patrols. The people researching this book have since discovered that similar devices were used in Australia in the early 1900s.

Jack's tenure saw the formation of clubs at Lakes Entrance in 1956/57, whilst in 1960/61, clubs were formed at Cape Patterson, Fairhaven, Wye River and Woolamai Beach and our Victorian active membership topped 1000 for the first time.

Competition, in the early part of Jack's time, still ran on very rigid, formal lines, with the whole association locked into a set of rules and procedures which would ultimately be swept away in the early sixties. Jack, however, was a catalyst for many of the later changes. He was always looking to improve anything he saw as unsatisfactory.

Gear inspections took place annually. The clubs were required, on a set day, well prior to the season, to set out all their lifesaving gear for inspection by the District Supervisor usually assisted by another board member. This was a major exercise, a bit like getting a roadworthy certificate for your car. It must be said, in hindsight, that sometimes, in terms of pernickitiness (yes it's a new word) this inspection was a bit over the top and the inspectors themselves seemed obsessed with minutiae. Harry Windmill wrote a report one year that when bound, looked more like a telephone directory. However, this attention to detail ensured that there would be a minimum of gear-related problems during what were becoming increasingly busy seasons

The last year of Jack's era began, with the already mentioned March 1960 International Life Saving Conference, in Sydney. The main outcome of this conference was a critical and quite devastating assessment, by the expert medical delegates, of our R&R drills and other rescue and resuscitation techniques. These had been proudly demonstrated to them at a special carnival in Sydney. To our horror, the assessment went something like this.

"Your drill and the discipline of your R&R teams is unquestionably superb and the competitors are fantastic swimmers. It makes a most impressive spectacle.

It demonstrates methods, which we believe, are fine for conscious patients, but there are a few things, which bother us if you are going to be dealing with apparently drowned victims. Every second counts, if the patient is to survive, but you are taking so long to begin resuscitation, that your patient is undoubtedly dead before you even get to lay him down on the beach, let alone begin resuscitation. Secondly, you cannot in fact, handle a wet, unconscious person using the pick-up and carry techniques you have demonstrated to us.

Your manual resuscitation techniques (Holger Nielson and later, Sylvester Brosch) are relatively ineffective in restoring breathing when compared to mouth to mouth methods. You should be teaching mouth to mouth and cardio-pulmonary resuscitation techniques. You should modify your rescue drill so that resuscitation is begun in shallow water and resumed again at the water's edge. Finally, you should be training your members in the use of oxygen resuscitation apparatus, which is by far the most efficient and effective way to resuscitate the apparently drowned."

This, as might be imagined, was a bit of a bombshell, to an Association (including ourselves in the Victorian Board of Examiners) who, collectively, were quite convinced that we were doing a great job and had already solved all the lifesaving problems. It was yet another demonstration of the dictum, that "the best way of doing anything has yet to be discovered". (Don't search for the origin of this, I made it up.)

To their credit, the National Council and the various State Centres of the SLSA lost no time in conducting a complete revamp of drills and procedures. Advice was sought from several medical consultants, one of the foremost being our own Medical Officer, Dr Tom Crankshaw. Their work included a study to develop more suitable pick-up and carry methods for both belt teams and one-man rescue operations. It was found that in all our pick-up and carry drills, the 'patient' was actually holding himself rigid in order to assist the rescuer and often in fact, physically assisted the rescuers with his movements. When the 'patient' was unconscious and his body and limbs were therefore completely relaxed, there was no way in the world that he could be lifted or handled using the old drills. The volunteer 'patients' used in this study acquired a lot of bruises during these experiments when they slithered through the hands of the 'rescuers' and were inadvertently dropped when the old techniques were attempted.

The belt team's three-man carry was totally changed from a facedown patient position to a four-man carry with the patient supported face-up. This ensured that his flaccid limbs were easier to control, as of course they do not bend when they are held this way. In the previous method the patient had to stiffen his limbs, otherwise he folded in a heap. The team's positions and grips were changed and the beltman, instead of marching up the beach on his own, was now required to manage the patient's head. Resuscitation was initiated just inside the shore break and resumed when the patient was laid on the beach near the water's edge.

There was a major move to the mouth to mouth resuscitation and CPR drills with which we are now familiar. Training methods had to be developed and tested and the Ambu manikin was introduced as a training aid for both of these. Later, it was also used for oxygen resuscitator training.

The original Ambu was a primitive mechanical model of a human torso with attached hinged neck, head and jaw which could be manipulated so as to duplicate the movements and positions required for resuscitation. It included an air bag approximating a human lung capacity and this was held in position by a rubber sheet that produced the same level of resistance one would expect in a live patient. It also had a 'stomach', which would inflate if too much pressure was used. The Ambu became an invaluable training aid.

All this led to new 'mouth to mouth' —expired air—resuscitation, closed chest Cardio Pulmonary Resuscitation, or CPR, new one-man patient drag and team carry methods, oxygen resuscitators, new drills and training methods, all of which it fell to Jack Hopper to introduce to Victoria. Several special training nights for Board members were held in at Scott's Hotel, with the first of these on Friday October 28th 1960. The Board members subsequently disseminated their newfound knowledge to the club instructors at weekend seminars, and they in turn passed it on to their club members. The Patrol Competition was also used successfully later on, to reinforce this training.

When Jack Hopper's company promoted him to a new managerial role and transferred him back to Sydney, he continued his connection with Victoria by acting as our resident delegate to National Council, up to and after 1964.

Arnold Goetz 1960 to 1972

Board of Examiners Secretaries: Dick Eilis, Noel Emselle

Jack Hopper's place was filled by Arnold Goetz. Arnold ran the family business, Alfred Nott Opticians, which he took over from his father. Originally a member of Brighton Beach Swimming Club, he was another dedicated surf lifesaver from the Torquay club and had competed in R&R and swimming events for many years.

Arnold, then in his late twenties, was our youngest Superintendent to that time and this was reflected in the way he ran the Board of Examiners. His was a refreshing style. He had no time for pomposity and he led from the front. Everyone enjoyed working with and for Arnold. He had a ribald and irreverent sense of humour and it was he who began the tradition of the annual Board of Examiners' Dinners, held prior to each season, which became, for us, so much a part of the enjoyment of being a Board member.

These dinners did a lot to weld the Board not just into a cohesive unit, but into a group of good friends. They were great fun, with toasts, roasts, much ribald humour and story telling and the presentation of what became known as the Lester Awards. These were based on the character of the recipient or something he had said or done during the preceding twelve months. Ray Marsh then presented members with his Rogues Gallery of captioned photographs from the previous season. Ray did the photography and had a talent for capturing the moment. Arnold wrote the captions, most of which were hilarious.

Don Heathcote was a long-time State Centre Treasurer and the fanatically keen coach of the Lorne R&R team, which ultimately won a National Title in 1973 at Burleigh Heads, Queensland. There were a few people who thought that R&R was a bit outmoded and needed a technological lift. This was provided one year, when he was presented with 'The Steam Reel', a working model of a proposed steam-driven surf reel which was a little model reel, mounted on a board and driven by a belt drive from my son's toy donkey engine. It was all hidden under a bar counter, getting up steam and was produced and presented to Don with a flourish, the engine already hissing and clanking away. His face had to be seen to be believed. This astounding technical innovation was very well received, but oddly was never taken up by the R&R men.

I was extremely annoyed, when the device was borrowed for a presentation at a National Council function. The thieving NSW bastards never returned it and I got into deep trouble with my young son.

However, the all-time piece de resistance of the Lester Awards was presented to the then Secretary of the Board, who was always raving on about "State Centre is getting too big and unwieldy (blah, blah) ...our decision making is awful (blah blah) ...we must get smaller and more professional, etc, etc.". The presentation to him was of an "Administrative Machine and Professional Decision Maker". This was a truly Pythonesque device. It was battery-powered, using a Morris Minor windscreen motor, had lots of working parts and took weeks to make. In appearance, it was a black box (what else?), about 25cm square in cross-section and about 60cm long. It was mounted on short metal legs and was displayed on a table, with its rear end protruding over the floor. The Secretary was presented with this contraption, and persuaded to put 10 cents in the slot.

The device clanked and whistled for a few seconds, sounded a siren, then burst into a peal of hysterical laughter. After it clanked another second or two, a little door opened in the other end and a brass claw emerged, holding a 55gram egg. The claw then opened and of course, the egg dropped and splattered all over the floor. This machine was truly my pride and joy. I don't know what became of it.

One of Arnold's very early initiatives was the requirement that all clubs granted a carnival must supply a lunch for the officials. Previously, you arrived early in the morning, were on your feet the whole day and brown-bagged it for lunch. It often made for a miserable and arduous eight hours and many examiners simply stayed away. Having a brief, simple, sit-down lunch with your friends and colleagues added enormously to the enjoyment of the day and the attendance at carnivals by officials was dramatically improved. The lunches improved too, when club Ladies Auxiliaries all began trying to outdo one another. It became necessary to ask them to cool this competitiveness a bit.

Of course, many members were raising young children at this time and carnival attendance, as a family, required incredible organizational skills the like of which were not demonstrated again until the Gulf War. It entailed humping a great collection of kids, beach paraphernalia, rug, esky, beach umbrella, baby bottles and food, over sand hills and onto the beach. The examiners' wives always sat together on the beach and kept an eye on each other's offspring. They became firm friends and still are after forty or more years.

But now, in 1961, Arnold oversaw the changes introduced by Jack Hopper and there were more to come.

There was now a requirement for oxygen resuscitation drills using live 'patients'. In Victoria, the small, simple and inexpensive, locally produced, C.I.G. RM unit had been chosen as the preferred oxygen resuscitator (RM stood for Royal Melbourne, the hospital and its doctors having assisted in its development). The training drills for this unit, on both Ambu Manikin and 'live patients', which were ultimately adopted by National Council, was worked out one evening on the floor of Arnold Goetz's lounge room, by he and Tony Lester.

The EAR (expired air mouth to mouth) and CPR drills were developed with the advice of the medical panel, including fundamental work by our own Medical Officer Dr Tom Crankshaw and later confirmed by a National Conference.

All these changes had to be codified and written into the new 'Blue Book' for training and Examination, the 'Red Book' for competition and eventually the 'Brown Book' for gear and equipment. We contributed to this effort.

Thus began a series of far-reaching changes under Arnold's direction, not just in training drills but in gear and equipment. There was also a lot of development of the old reel line and belt, with lightweight stainless steel reels developed by the Royal Life Society. Then there were Teflon bearings, new types of synthetic lines and the modification of belts and their safety release pins. Most of the latter came from Tony Lester, who was then functioning as a defacto gear development officer.

Another of Arnold's innovations was the use of an army surplus range finder to set the buoys at surf carnivals. Eric McGee followed this with the use of another optical squaring lens that he normally used to set out building foundations, in order to accurately set out the beach and R&R areas.

The introduction of in-shore rescue boats was the brainchild of Bob Millett and Harry Windmill. Their efforts on IRBs are described in detail elsewhere in the book, but they spent many hours honing the concept, trying various hulls, developing modifications to prevent the outboard motors from 'drowning' in a capsize, designing and making propeller guards and working on surf rescue techniques. Most importantly, they sold the whole concept to an initially highly sceptical SLSA of Australia at the 1971 Australian Titles at the City of Perth, WA. The rest, as they say, is history.

One gear experiment came very close to disaster. Tony Lester, acting as the SLSA representative, attended a demonstration to the Victorian Police by the makers of the Schermuly rocket pistol line throwing apparatus. This apparatus consists of a special pistol, which launches and simultaneously ignites a rocket, dragging a lightweight line from a square-laid package. The unit is routinely used by seagoing vessels to throw lines to other ships or to shore. We were told that the State Electricity Commission used them in rough and steep country for laying power lines. We were assured the SEC could lay a line across a pylon 300 metres away across a valley. The apparatus was duly demonstrated down at Fisherman's Bend and Tony was sufficiently impressed that he arranged for the Company to attend a carnival a fortnight later, to hold a demonstration and to explore the unit's potential for surf rescue when used with a floating-head rocket.

On the day, we all assembled on the beach during the lunch break. Don Heathcote volunteered to act as the patient and swam out beyond the break. What we had not been told was that rockets with expired use-by dates were being used for demonstrations and they were not guaranteed to be reliable.

The company technician fired the first rocket, which flew out well beyond Don, but the line bellied in the cross wind and caused the rocket to go sideways well off course. "Not to worry, we'll try another", said the techie. Unfortunately, the second rocket slightly misfired on launching and its trajectory was far too low. It was like a sea-skimming Exocet missile and to everyone's horror, it headed straight for one of the shore-break swimmers. Had it struck him it would have gone right through him. Fortunately it missed by several metres and he probably never knew how close he was to being perforated. It took ten minutes for my adrenalin rush to subside and my pulse to return to normal. That was the last time we ever experimented with rockets.

More new clubs were formed in this period: Barwon Heads/13th Beach and Venus Bay in 1961/62, followed in 1963/64 by Bancoora, Jan Juc, Waratah Beach, Kennett River and Port Campbell and in 1965/66, Gunnamatta.

There were many very hard workers on the Board in this period. Robert (Bob) Millett MBE was a huge contributor as Gear Steward, Carnival Referee Steward, State Centre Registrar, Life Membership Registrar and as developer of the IRB concept, which has now supplanted the reel line and belt as the major means of surf rescue. Bob received his MBE not for his surf life saving, but for his work with the Army Reserves.

Harry Windmill has made an enormous contribution with Bob Millett in the development of the IRB. Harry, Alan (Golden Voice) Forster, John Jones and Phil McGibbon, will long be remembered as consummate carnival announcers and commentators. Live sports commentary is an extraordinarily difficult job and anyone who believes otherwise should try it. The ability to instantly recall competitors' names and records and to give a lucid free-flowing description of what is happening is a great talent which these men possessed in abundance. Harry and Phil still fulfill this role

Other names from this period, who readily spring to mind as major players, are Eric Martin and John Worrell (both long-serving Deputy Superintendents), Eric McGee, Bruce Tayler, Bruce Bowman, Clinton 'Shacks' Shiells, Bill Tyrell, Noel Emselle, Eddie Kidd, Peter O'Rorke, Stan Stevens, Ron Blackney, Garry Titter, Bruce Owen, Harold Stephenson, Jack Meehan, Ron Hussey, Gordon Dann, Harry Pittard, Ray Marsh, Kevin Roderick, Alan Coulson, Alvin Cairney and Wes McLear. The list goes on. It is really quite extraordinary too, that many Board members from this time are still serving.

Arnold's outstanding twelve-year tenure ended when he became seriously ill in 1972 and was having great personal difficulty coping with the demands of what was now an onerous job. Wisely, he decided to go out 'on a high' and resigned.

His last report says, in part, "I have been fortunate to see, in the last 12 years, Victoria grow both in competition and in numerical strength. The Victorian Board of Examiners is, in my opinion, if not the best in Australia, equal to any. The main reason for this is the lack of politics and the desire to get the job done. The State Centre has been fortunate to have the 'backbone' of these men and I am certain this will continue and our growth will be even more spectacular with the new ideas and methods introduced by the new Superintendent. Finally, I would like to thank my wife Jan for all that she has had to put up with, for what, to her, must have been 12 long years."

Unfortunately, Arnold remained very ill and was undiagnosed for some time. He decided to step completely out of the picture and regrettably, we saw very little of him for many years. We were all delighted when he decided to emerge from obscurity and he has recently attended a few Life Members Meetings and SLSA functions. He is still the same irreverent, very funny, Arnold and is still great company.

John Jones 1972 to 1977

Board of Examiners Secretaries: Noel Emselle, Ric Mitchell

John Jones took over as Superintendent in 1972. He inherited a Board that under Arnold was functioning very well and he kept it that way. He was the first of three Point Leo members to hold the position over the next twenty years. John came to Point Leo when he was transferred to Melbourne in his work. He had been a member of Bulli SLSC on the NSW South Coast and held many positions there at club and branch level.

His knowledge, particularly within the swimming section of competition, was encyclopaedic and made him invaluable as a carnival commentator. His unmistakable announcing voice was always accurate and descriptive at surf competitions, but particularly at National Championships. Like his predecessors, John had a dedication to, and love of, Surf Life Saving. World Lifesaving awarded him a Citation of Merit, its highest award, in 1985 in recognition of his international contribution to the movement. John, who is a life member of both Bulli and Pt. Leo Clubs, received a Life Membership of Surf Life Saving Australia, in 1992.

Geoff Waters 1977 to 1979

Board of Examiners Secretaries: Ric Mitchell, Ray Heathcote, Bill Sinn, Peter Ablett.

Geoff was a staunch R&R man and coach. He was largely responsible for the successful organisation and conduct of the Australian Championships at Point Leo in 1985. His many years of dedication and perseverance in this and other roles, made a great contribution to the Association.

A major initiative in Geoff's time was the Helicopter Rescue Service, which began in season 1978-79. This was a major success, when it employed a chartered aircraft which was fully sponsored. It was only later, when State Centre, in its wisdom, decided to purchase its own helicopter, that financial problems arose which led to the ultimate demise of the service.

Geoff's interest in surf lifesaving remains and his knowledge is always available should someone ask, be it coaching junior R&R, or broadcasting at a carnival. Geoff was made a life member of Pt. Leo in the 1960s.

Peter Taylor O.A.M. 1979-1989

Board of Examiners Secretaries: Bob Wood, G. Clarke, Simonetta Danielis, Bob Millett.

Peter Taylor was the third Point Leo member to hold the office. He came to Victoria from Tasmania, where he had been a member of the Carlton Park SLSC. His enormous contribution to surf life saving has seen him receive Life Memberships of Point Leo SLSC, The Victorian State Centre and The Australian Council. His efforts were also rewarded with the Order of Australia Medal, with the citation "For Services to Surf Life Saving and the Community".

This ten-year era saw sweeping changes almost too many to mention. Accreditation qualifications became a requirement for officials and coaches. The IRB gradually supplanted the reel line and belt as the main means of rescue. Season 1980-81 saw the introduction of the first women lifesavers, when our young women came out of the clubhouse kitchens and became patrolling members. The Nipper movement grew and grew, until now there are some 40,000 nippers registered and involved in training and competition.

Surf Carnivals are now huge events. They are all sponsored, the hessian fences are no more and no public admission is charged. All duty boats are now IRBs. There are radios where there used to be field telephones. There are now open, under 19 and under 16 age groups for all men's and women's events. There are senior events for over 30, 35, 45 and 50 year-old competitors. There are five-person and six-person and women's R&R events. There are now 'A', 'B' and 'C' boat races and board and ski races, in open, U 21 and U 19 age groups. The 2000 Victorian Titles embraced heats and finals of an incredible 150 different events.

A carnival of this Olympian magnitude could never have been conducted in earlier decades.

Peter Taylor's ten-year reign ended when in 1990, the Board of Examiners became the Board of Life Saving and Competition. The Superintendent's administrative workload had expanded along with the vastly greater numbers of clubs and members and it became simply too great to be borne by one individual. Following State Centre's incorporation, the title Superintendent became Director, in line with the requirements of Victorian Company Law. The leadership of the new Board was split into three Directorships, viz. Director of Competition, Director of Examination and Instruction and Director of Life Saving Services. Peter continued in his work with the new Board, acting as Carnival Chief Referee and a new honour board was put in place at SLSV to reflect the changes and to honour the previous Superintendents.

The new Board structure has enabled the Directors to specialise with far greater application and the growth of Surf Life Saving Victoria, with now currently some forty member clubs, has meant that each Director has a workload approaching that of the old Superintendents.

In Summary

Over the fifty-five years that they have lead the Board, the Superintendents remain in a special class of their own. They were, every one of them, outstandingly able and dedicated men and Surf Life Saving owes them an enormous debt.

Over the fifty-five years existence of Victorian Surf Lifesaving, some twenty-two thousand lifesavers have gained their bronze medallions. All of them were examined by members of the Board of Examiners, the 'Blue Diamonds'. There are now a plethora of awards covering areas that were not even thought of, let alone did they exist in earlier times. They are now sub-divided into 24 awards, which include Advanced Resuscitation Awards, Radio Operators Certificates and IRB Crew and Driver awards and even Patrol Captain's medallions. Running the organisation is now infinitely more complex than we ever dreamed it would become and it now requires the services of full-time officers. But we still need the 'Blue Diamonds' and lots of them.

Finally, one cannot leave this section without mentioning the role played by the examiner's wives and partners. Without their forbearance, the examiners could not have performed as they did. The support they gave their partners, being unofficial secretaries, drivers, travelling companions accepting the long distances, the late returns home after carnivals, tolerating the often second-class accommodation and other trials and tribulations, enabled the Board of Examiners to function at its most efficient levels.

Tales of early Otway District days

By Tony Lester

Tony Lester joined Lorne Surf Life Saving Club in 1955. He became Chief Instructor in 1956, was on the Committee for some three years, then became District Supervisor for the Otways from 1962 - 1972. During that time he made an enormous contribution to the Board of Examiners. The Patrol Competition he introduced is now part of the performance monitors of every state in Australia.

He was personally involved in the formation of Wye and Kennett River Surf Life Saving clubs and also Fairhaven, having trained the first Bronze squad along with Bruce Tayler.

Well known for the 'Lester the Tester' awards (with some limericks unprintable) at Somers during the 1970s and 1980s, Tony became a life member of both the Lorne Club and Surf Life Saving Victoria. He was a delightful raconteur, as these tales testify.

Instructional Conferences

These were held annually from the early 1960s and I suppose still are. They were usually conducted over a weekend, sometimes away at some place like Somers Camp, or at Lorne and sometimes at our then brand new headquarters in St Kilda. They were an excellent way of imparting new developments to Club Instructors and Examiners. The usual format was to have members with specific expertise talk on their specialities. This always included discussions on the Patrol Competition, which I usually ran and which always seemed to me to have the greatest potential for acrimony.

However it gave aggrieved clubs and/or Judges an outlet for their hostility, even if it was sometimes unpleasant for the Patrol Competition Sub-committee. The main thing was that problems were addressed and usually solved to everyone's satisfaction, even if the Chairman, by the end of the session, badly needed his antacid tablets.

I was asked to run a session on gear and equipment at one Instructional Conference back in the 1960s. I decided to make this a little different by breaking the members up into small brain-storming groups and setting them problems to discuss and report on. These included topics like:

* "You are designing a new surf reel. How would it be constructed and what features would you like to see included?"

I now confess 35 years on, that apart from the patrol shark bag concept, I cannot remember the other topics, but they were all to do with lifesaving gear and equipment and how it might be improved. However the reel design topic was interesting, because later in the day, we were shown a new stainless steel reel designed and made for the Royal Life Saving Society people. None of us had as yet seen or heard anything of this.

What was intriguing was that our little brain-storming group came up with a stainless steel framed unit with the reel easily de-mountable to assist its transport in vehicles. We had already come up with the greaseless Teflon bearings. The Royal Life design, which had taken some time to develop, included all these features. The point is that if you give a group of people the opportunity to kick a problem around and bounce ideas off each other, there is a very good chance that they will come up with good answers. This was the first time we had done this. Today's reels are not dissimilar to those conceived that day. Brainstorming is a very useful problem-solving tool and one that could be used more often.

The Board Dinner

This started as a separate event, but then became an integral part of the Instructional Conference and was usually held on the Saturday night. It was a night of rude jokes, bawdy songs, presentations (also for the most part rude) and all round good humour and friendship. I have already mentioned the Lester Awards, which I am happy to say, are still remembered with affection. I still have some of the stories from the Board Dinner in my repertoire, but not for mixed company.

The Shark Bell

The shark bell at Lorne was, and still is, a huge cast iron affair, the origin of which is obscure. It was once mounted on a stand on the beach, where it was used as an alarm which beach-goers could ring in case of swimmers getting into trouble. When it was rung, the then younger Lilian Beaurepaire, who was a great swimmer in her day, would rush down to the beach from her Cumberland Guest House and dive in and rescue the victim. She was the only protection the swimmers had, until the formation of the Surf Club and from all accounts, she did a wonderful job, performing many rescues. She was a great patron of the club, donating several boats.

When the first Lorne Clubhouse was eventually built, the bell was re-mounted on its front wall as a shark alarm. One day I was on look-out on the balcony, when Brian Hunt, a local fisherman and club member who had been picnicking with his family high on the hill beside the beach, rushed down to the club. He said, "I think you had better ring the shark bell, we have spotted a big banjo shark just outside the break!". Being a fisherman he would know and I confess I had often dreamed of getting a chance to ring this huge bell for real, so I complied with almost indecent haste.

Let me tell you that I have never in my entire life experienced a feeling of such power. It was as though I had waved a magic wand and in 60 seconds there wasn't a swimmer in the water. They almost ran across it in their haste to get out, leaving brown streaks behind them. It was wonderful! I will never forget that day.

The bell featured in another incident one night during a dance at the club. These dances were the main source of income for the club, so when it was observed that gate-crashers were climbing up onto the balcony and getting in free, a system of defence was instituted. The crashers were climbing up at the bell end of the balcony, whilst at the other end there was a water tap. So we ran a hose from the tap to the bell end and whenever someone attempted to gain illegal entry, a sentry would ring the bell and a tap minder, on hearing it, would turn the water on so that the sentry could hose the intruder. It worked like a charm until one night when an extremely large, very angry, very aggressive and sopping wet bloke clambered back down, paid his money and stormed up the stairs with blood in his eye. He demanded the life of the hose-wielding sentry, who wisely melted into the crowd. Everyone feigned total innocence until the wet gatecrasher eventually cooled down and also melted away.

The Surf Club Dances

In the 1950s and 1960s, the Club dances at Lorne were hugely successful, especially over the Xmas/New Year period. The Surf Club was THE place to go. We had a 'trad' jazz band, whose personnel varied week to week. They were mostly club members who were supplemented by whichever musos were holidaying in Lorne. I used to play washboard, which was a lot of fun and I actually met my wife, Betty while playing in the band. Some nights Johnny Morey would have more than a few beers beforehand and would be observed playing trumpet with eyes closed and a look of intense concentration. Bruce Tayler would thump out chords on piano or Banjo. David Stribling played a beautiful piano and his brother starred on alto sax and clarinet. John Hilf played drums and washboard (and still does). Later we had the 'Collegians' Jazz Band, who again were all Club members and were led by Leigh Jones on clarinet with Roger Kennedy on drums. I would add, that rock and roll was only just emerging, with Bill Haley and the Comets and 'Rock Around the Clock', the first of the genre. Seems a long time ago, doesn't it?

When the local Smith brothers, owners of the Arab Café, started a rival dance at the Beach Hall, it could not compete with us, so they made the club an offer which regrettably the Committee could not, or would not, refuse. The Smiths agreed to give us Sunday nights at the Beach Hall and pay us a fixed sum per week, if we closed our dance. It was a bad, bad decision, because the club dance was a great way of building esprit de corps and its loss left a big hole in the social life of the club. The new arrangement wasn't a great money-spinner either and nobody really regarded the Sunday nights as 'ours'.

Jim Fountain

There was one memorable night at the Beach Hall. A group of us were there, including Jim Fountain. Now Jim was the personification of the big bronzed Aussie Lifesaver. He was a powerhouse as a Victorian Champion beltman. He could swim like a dolphin and body surf better than anyone I have seen. He was blonde. He was good-looking and beautifully built. He, along with his sister, Joy, a TV personality, had the best sets of pearly white choppers in probably the entire world. When it came to attracting women, none of us were even remotely in the same class.

It was not exactly a fantastic night. There was only a small crowd. There were few available girls and one would have to say that they were all fairly average, certainly by Jim's standards. However when it got to the second last dance and he hadn't yet won a heart, he was prepared to be less discriminating than usual. So much so, in fact, that he moved in on one of two girls sitting at the end of the room. They, it must be said, were really not the sort of girl you would take home to meet mother. There was clearly a yawning social gulf that only a desperate man would seek to cross. Jim crossed.

He very casually sauntered across and with a slight formal bow, said in his imminently polite way, "Good evening. May I have the pleasure of this dance?" (Don't laugh, that's the way it was done back then). The object of his desire immediately turned to her companion and in a voice like a rip-saw going through a kerosene tin said, "Jesus, get an earful of this joker will ya". She then turned back to Jim and delivered a contemptuous and very emphatic "No!" We, who were observing this interchange from a distance, saw Jim turn bright red and visibly recoil. He almost staggered back to us. The unthinkable had happened. The hitherto irresistible Gentleman Jim had been knocked back by a sheila. The news went around town like wildfire. We lesser-endowed males chortled and we all thought "There is a God after all and he is just".

The Judith Jaycee

The Judith Jaycee was the first ever purpose-designed inshore surf rescue boat, probably in Australia. It was a rigid-hulled plywood craft, with a tiller and large rudder. It was powered by an air-cooled inboard engine, with a dry cone clutch, all enclosed in a sealed compartment. It had been originally designed to use a flat four Jowett Javelin car engine, but this was apparently too heavy and too expensive, or they couldn't get hold of one. The clutch was the weakness in the boat as built, as it always contrived to get wet and slip when it was most needed, such as when a big wave was bearing down on you and you needed to move fast. On the other hand, the boat was well designed and seaworthy and provided you could get the power to the prop, it handled well and was a good wave cracking machine.

The Lorne Club had won this craft as a trophy, at the infamous Rye Back Beach carnival previously mentioned. In fact it was donated as a bribe to the Surf Association to run a carnival at this non-existent beach. We didn't find out until later that the vendors of the Real Estate behind the beach had engaged a bulldozer to push the sand up at low tide to create a temporary beach for the carnival. It was all a big con and the Association was really duped into assisting the developers to flog land, by convincing the gullible that there was a surf beach. Never mind, Lorne won the boat.

We used the Judith as the duty boat at a Lorne carnival during a very big Easterly. There was the usual mountainous and very confused surf, as we headed out to the buoys to cover the first race. The carnival should really have been cancelled, but the old macho attitude was then (and still is), "you have to be able to conduct a rescue in any conditions, the show must go on". (The sort of thinking that drowns junior competitors). Of course, when we wanted to return to shore the damned clutch decided to pack it in and we were stranded, powerless, out that back. Then I had the idea to swish the large rudder and scull the boat onto a wave. It worked. We sort of lurched sideways onto a wave and I managed to straighten the boat and steer it into the beach. God it was scary! This was one of the biggest and wildest surfs I have ever seen at Lorne. I remember asking my wife, Betty, if she saw the incident from the clubhouse balcony. She said that she hadn't seen us at all from after we went over the first wave on the way out, until we reappeared on the beach.

The Disappearing Beach

There was a season around 1960 when the tides were high and many of the surf beaches along the coast receded and practically disappeared. The worst affected included Point Lonsdale, Anglesea and Lorne.

A storm in 1956 washed away most of the beach at Anglesea, and the club's boat shed, as seen in this photo taken in 1957.

The effect at Lorne was that the beach at high tide ceased to exist, the sea wall was badly undermined and a whole section of it collapsed. The water was a foot or two deep against the wall in front of the clubhouse and occasionally it came up the boat ramp and lapped at the clubhouse itself. The Club Belt Championships were conducted that year with the reel and line teams in front of the clubhouse, on the area above and behind the surviving section of sea wall. There was a time when we thought even the club might go. Anglesea lost the boathouse they had just built well back (they thought) in the sand dunes.

There was an engineering researcher at Melbourne University doing a PhD project on the Lorne beach and pier. He used a large, shallow hydraulics tank, with a scale model of the Lorne foreshore and Loutitt bay, complete with a wave-making machine. He was trying various designs for a breakwater under different conditions. The object was to develop a breakwater which would both protect the pier and hopefully put sand back on the beach. He told me that there is a thirteen year cycle of high tides along our coast, due to some obscure lunar and planetary influences.

He eventually succeeded in his endeavours, but his recommended scheme never eventuated. The local authorities re-constructed the damaged part of the sea wall and modified it as the sloping section seen today. They also built a large stone groin near Erskine House and several timber groins near the club. These helped to restore the beach, but were a dangerous disembowelment hazard to body-surfing swimmers until, after many years, the beach returned and covered the groins.

The First Lorne Clubhouse

The Lorne Club originally operated from two battered old bathing boxes, joined together to make what was still a very small shed. Over a period funds were raised and the first real clubhouse was erected.

When this was built, it was the envy of every club on the coast. The architect was Brigadier Dare and whilst a bit pedestrian in design, it was a pleasing, very sold and functional building. The Brigadier's research indicated that the strongest gale ever experienced at Lorne was 85 miles per hour. The clubhouse was designed to withstand 120 miles per hour and looked it. It featured very solid trusses, had a beautiful tallow wood dance floor and at the time seemed very spacious. The largest number of dance patrons we put through in a night was about

650 and it didn't seem so spacious on that occasion.

Some of the local club members spent many hours making the yellowish sandstone cement bricks for the building. Forever afterwards they ceaselessly reminded everyone else of the fact, inferring that the rest of us were all bludging on them merely by using the building. There was a later matching extension designed by David Tiller in the late seventies, which provided bunkhouse accommodation, some extra storage, and a large upper balcony area for functions. This was adequate until fairly recently when it was decided that something more spacious was needed with better accommodation. The result was the building we see today, which was opened by the Premier, Steve Bracks in January, 2000.

In the Pig's Eye

The big annual fund-raising event for the Apollo Bay Surf Club is 'The Night of the Pig'. This is held on New Year's Eve at Donny O'Meara's farm at Paradise on the Barram River. This is a boisterous affair, attended by the young and restless, at which vast quantities of beer is consumed. The piece de resistance is a barbecued porker, from which the name of the event is derived.

Donny, incidentally, a good friend and a stalwart of the Surf Club for nearly fifty years. A very fit man, he was still playing football for 'The Bay' when in his fifties.

One 'Night of the Pig' we attended, we arrived a bit late and were just in time to get a modest serve of pork. The lad behind us, who arrived later and somewhat the worse for wear, was not so lucky. The pig was almost totally consumed. Bobby Wood (later Secretary of the Board of Examiners) who was serving, told him, "There are only a few scrag ends left, but you can have an eyeball if you like". "O.K.", said the youth, clutching his paper plate and brim full of alcoholic bravado, "Gimme an eyeball". "Right", says Robert, heaping a few scraps on the guy's plate. Then reaching across with a pair of salad tongs, he dropped the pig's eyeball on the plate. The brave lad took one look, turned a hideous green and promptly was ill.

Those nights were enlivened with masculine sporting challenges, like the buck buck races in which groups of men stood on each others shoulders in an effort to reach the top of a tall pole. Then there were the pillow fights on a slippery pole over a pool in the creek, which always resulted in the loser getting very wet. One person found next day that the dye had come out of his new jeans. His legs were than a bright blue and he looked like a wood-painted ancient Briton. One night, Eric McGee and I performed a duet on violin and washboard which you must admit, is a combination not often heard. As Bruce Tayler would say, in his "Debonaires" story, "The crowd loved it. They went mad".

The Patrol Competition - from its beinning to today

Over the more than fifty years of the existence of Surf Life Saving on our Victorian beaches, there has been the strongest commitment to the cause. This is borne out by the fact that in Victoria/(Australia) there has never been a life lost between the red and yellow flags.

In and around the 1950s and early 1960s, stimulation to the movement came from sponsored trophies. These included The Age Reel; The Napthine Trophy; Ampol Surf Race Trophies; The B.P. Boat; Mobilgas Reel; B.P. Reel (2); The Beaurepaire Reel & Belt Race; 3UZ Carnival (the trophy being a gear trailer).

In 1964-65 a recommendation was put forward to the Victorian State Council by the Board of Examiners detailing the rules and the points allotment for what is still the most important competition within Surf Life Saving— the Patrol Competition.

The person behind this was Tony Lester. Tony was, for many years, a keen and competent member of the board of Examiners, a District Supervisor for the Otways and ultimately a Life Member of Lorne SLSC and the Victorian

State Centre.

Tony writes the following, with the flair and wit that gained him the nickname of "Lester the Tester!"

"After a year or two as Otway District Supervisor it was my belief that the SLSA was beginning to lose its way and it was at this time that the Patrol Competition had its genesis. I felt that there was far too much emphasis on carnival competition at the expense of our legitimate function as guardians of the swimmers at our home beaches. This view was shared by a number of other people on State Centre and on the Board of Examiners and I conceived the idea that if we couldn't lick them (ie. the proponents of carnival competition), we should join them.

It seemed to me that the competition we were then fostering (and still are) was primarily for the elite surf competitors and the wannabees. Far from being the means to improve life saving at beach level it was clearly doing the exact opposite. The home beaches were bereft of the best lifesavers on practically every Sunday throughout the season. The "also-rans" who were left at home looking after the beach, were getting no competition nor were they receiving recognition for the hours and hours they were on patrol.

At that time, as District Supervisor, I was regularly visiting the Otway beaches and I was frankly appalled at the way all the clubs were fulfilling their responsibility to patrol their beaches. Discussion with other Supervisors confirmed that the problem was widespread. I raised the matter at a number of Board Meetings and I don't think I was really believed. I realised that what was needed was a competition which would award recognition to the patrol members who were really contributing. This should involve far more lifesavers than were currently competing It should encourage the team members, not just the elite competitors and should foster the Club's home-beach activity, which was the real source of our public support.

It should always be remembered, by the higher echelons of our organisation, that the beach-going public and Governments at all levels, only support us because we provide, or should provide, a public service. They couldn't care less about a local club winning the National Boat Title or competing in Los Angeles. They want themselves and their families protected when swimming at the beach of their choice. Further, these days the public dislikes regimentation and they won't put up with being confined to a small section of that beach. It wasn't very different in the early 60's when the patrol competition was going through its gestation.

Eventually, after yet again raising the subject at a Board Meeting, I was told to go away and come up with a format, which I did. The initial concept envisaged that each club would conduct its own Patrol Competition. This would involve a number of suggested events which it was thought more closely approximated real life rescue situations and from which the club could select events that best suited its needs. These events would be contested, as a one-day competition, by the rostered patrols of the club.

Phase two was to be a Victorian Surf Patrol Premiership. This would be contested, again as a one-day affair, by the champion patrols of each club. The events would be scored in such a way that points were scored down to the last finisher in each event. The idea was to have a competition in which the 19th and 20th places fought it out to the wire, for that extra point. Every person would contribute by competing to the best of his ability, not just the first three placegetters in each event.

A club with a few gun competitors could not dominate such a competition and there would be no point in stacking a patrol with hot swimmers. It was felt that the success of any organisation lay in its ability to involve people at every level and we were no exception. (This would, in fact, be a good way to score a conventional carnival.)

This Board of Examiners received the idea with some degree of coolness, but it was ultimately decided to encourage the clubs to run their own competitions and see how they went. At the end of the season, the clubs which had embraced the idea reported back and we received information from Ocean Grove, Fairhaven, Lorne and Wye River. It was a moderate success, but it was clear that if a State competition of any kind was going to take place, it wasn't going to be by this route, but had to be a top-down affair.

We coupled the trial results in Victoria with information from former Victorian Superintendent, the late Jack Hopper, about the NSW Manly-Warringah Branch Patrol Competition. In the light of this it was decided to form a sub-committee and develop a new competition. This would be generally along the lines of the Manly-Warringah model, but totally modified to suit our conditions and our ideas. It should also take into account the administrative problems associated with the vast distance between the Eastern and Western Districts of the State. I was appointed Secretary/Convenor of the sub-committee.

A meeting was held at my home with Bruce Tayler, Chris Holland and Brian Darn. Having had previous individual discussions with them, I presented to the meeting a draft format and pro forma score sheet for the competition based on the above ideas, which was accepted in principle by the group. We then thrashed out the details and I subsequently wrote a final draft including the changes, which was typed up for submission to the Board. The Board embraced the new proposed format with much greater warmth.

The whole nature of the competition was constrained and ultimately determined by the geographic problems. It was obviously impractical to have a panel of judges, each of whom would need to cover the entire State. The need then was to use all the District Supervisors plus six 'Phantom' judges, which meant that, if there was to be uniformity and fairness in judging, there would need to be some constraints. The main constraint was that every section should be composed of things which were important to patrol efficiency, but which also leant themselves to black and white decisions. There could be no value judgements.

This, of course, meant that some things had to be left out. Many people thought some of these were important and their omission would detract from the competition. Be that as it may, we really had no choice. We could not, for example, have a deduction for "patrol flags not in the best position": which is really a matter of judgement and local knowledge. To have this or a similar provision would inevitably give rise to endless disputes. That didn't stop the question of value judgements being in contention for many years and, in fact, it was some five or six years before things really began to settle down.

Each year the results of the previous year were reviewed and the rules amended in the light of the judges' experiences, plus complaints and suggestions from Club administrations and Board members. Some of the ensuing discussions were, I have to say, a bit acrimonious, but that is the nature of the democratic process. Most of the arguments centred around the difficulty of balancing the interests of large and small clubs and the ever-present difficulty of ensuring uniformity of interpretation of rules, between different judges, operating in the various Districts, along a huge coastline.

As Otway District Supervisor, my original territory extended from Fairhaven to Apollo Bay. In spite of the distance involved, this was manageable until the formation of the Kennett River Club, which meant that I now had five clubs to visit. I found this a bit too much, driving from Melbourne, as it then became a two-day exercise, so I asked that Fairhaven be transferred to Barwon District. This was done and I could examine all four clubs on the one (very long) day.

The arrival of a patrol inspector was always the cause of great panic at any club and the early detection of his approach was considered critical. I used to arrive in Apollo Bay around lunchtime and tried to sneak into town without being observed. What I didn't find out until much later, was that as soon as I went to buy some lunch, the café owner was primed to immediately ring the Surf Club and announce my presence in the town. When I went down after a quick bite, the patrol would, of course, be very much in order. They used to kid me that they had someone permanently stationed at Cape Patten to watch for my old Peugeot. One visit was rudely interrupted by a call to attend a drowning at Flat Bottom Creek, a few miles back toward Wye River. I put a reel in the back of the wagon and driving out of town with one hand on the horn, beat Ian Cole, driving his Dad's new Mercedes over the 15 kilometres around the Ocean Rd to the incident. He was really annoyed. Unfortunately, by the time we got there, sadly it was already too late and the rescue became a matter of recovering a body.

There was a bit of luck involved in every inspection. The particular patrol might have been very knowledgeable and very keen, or it may have been relatively inexperienced. The individual patrol members selected by the judge to perform with the oxygen equipment may or may not have been well trained. After a while, the clubs realised that they could not rely on luck and that all patrol members needed to be properly trained. This, of course was what State Centre was aiming for and over a season or so, the standard of patrol work gradually lifted.

It is a matter of some pride to myself and to my fellow committee members of the early sixties, that what we started back then has, some thirty-five years on, continued to evolve in a similar format and in the same spirit. There have, of course, been numerous modifications to account for changes in philosophies, technologies, methods and equipment. The geographically extended responsibilities of most clubs also have had to be accounted for. The basic premise, however, of providing a means of assessing and of steadily improving patrol performance is unaltered. Likewise, the Clubs who see their primary function as service to the surfing public and who have the will and dedication to achieve it, are given due and well-deserved recognition."

It is interesting to note from the results listed below, that the competition has more often than not been won by smaller clubs who rarely featured on the winners list in surf carnival events. The results from 1964/1965 season through to the 2001/2002 Season were as follows. In some years there were no awards to placegetters, but separate awards were made to district winners.

The competition has, over its life, attracted generous support from numerous sponsors. In recent years, the prizes for winners, second and third have been quite valuable, with each receiving a new out-board motor. This most sought-after trophy attracted even more interest from clubs. Each District winner receives a pennant and the outright winner for the State receives the much-coveted State Patrol Competition Winner's Pennant.

Many people have contributed to the success of the patrol competition over the thirty-five years of its existence. These include the District Supervisors, the additional judges and especially the Patrol Competition co-ordinators, who reviewed the judges' reports, collected and calculate the results and chair sub-committee meetings. They are the following:

Tony Lester	1964 - 1968
Phil McGibbon	1969 - 1972
Noel Emselle	1973 - 1977
Ric Mitchell	1977 - 1981
Kevin Duell	1981 - 1982

Yvonne Dudley	1986 - 1988
Ken Galloway	1988 - 1992
Colin Addison	1993 - 1994
Scott Tannahill	1994 - 1997
Warren Boulton	1997 - 2002

The success of the competition is clearly demonstrated by the competition results, which currently indicate a state-wide average patrol efficiency rating of over 90%.

Gear Development

Since the inception of surf life saving in Victoria, there have been two items which have stood the test of time and have become the 'trade mark' of the movement. One icon are the red and yellow patrol marking flags and the lifesavers' caps. The other item which spanned 60 years and has recently been superceded is the reel, line and belt. Originally constructed of wood, (with brass fittings) this rescue equipment has been the centrepiece of the state's motif.

Although the chassis design remained largely unchanged, the 400-500 yard line changed from the original cotton to synthetic material such as terylene. The actual belt worn by the swimmer was superceded five times. The first belt of the 1930s and 1940s had a number of cork filled pockets in the outside front surface. These proved more of a retardant than a floatation advantage. Construction reverted to a plain canvas with an adjustable neck strap. After the loss of a beltman caused by a snagged line, swimmers tied a slip knot at the fixed 'D' which could be released by pulling on the loose end.

The 'Ross' safety belt incorporated a long stainless steel pin which passed through four posts. On withdrawing the pin, the two halves of the canvas belt plus the neck strap separated. This innovation 'released' many beltmen in adverse situations such as kelp build-up or rock snagging.

Distortion of the long 4 inch pin created some difficulty so Otways Superintendent Tony Lester designed a pin with four outboard downward pointing prongs, which readily released with only a half inch of movement, a vast improvement! This was called the 'mun-yard belt'.

The final variation saw the four posts reduced to one central one with a hinged wrap-over stainless steel tab secured by a small easily withdrawn clip.

Sadly the change in rescue methods rendered the reel and line obsolete. The belts were removed and the lines became beach area cordons.

Patrol shelters became the centrepiece of most patrolled areas. These were donated by 'Caesarine Fabrics' and consisted of three steel pipe frames which were erected in a 'U' shape facing the water covered with canvas panels bearing the sponsor's name. Over the years some clubs attracted other sponsorship relevant to their locality.

With growing concern over the increased incidence of skin cancer, the Anti-Cancer Council gave a grant to finance the construction of covered shelters, such as we have today. The formed and welded units are a far cry from the 1950 models.

At the time of Shafer, Sylverster Brosch, and Holger Nielsen methods of manual resuscitation, there was the 'Eve Rocker', the use of which all bronze medallion candidates were examined. Basically, it consisted of a stretcher with a central half-bearing screwed to its underside rails, enabling it to be 'rocked' when straddling a trestle.

A patient was strapped face down on it and rocked to the normal resuscitation timing. The downward movement of the stomach contents compressing the lungs followed by the reverse movement was said to promote quick recovery. The tidal volume of air movement did not compare with the Holger Nielsen (chest pressure-arm lift) method so Eve Rockers were made obsolete.

In the mid 1950s and early 1960s, mechanical resuscitators became available. The E and J unit was quite sophisticated as it contained two oxygen cylinders, one for patient supply and the other to activate the phasing of the inspiration. Being fairly complex, skill was required to operate them. Lorne had one donated to them but it was later presented to the local hospital.

The next unit to become available, which most clubs acquired, was the RM resuscitator. This unit consisted of an oxygen bottle connected via a pressure reducing regulator to a face mask with a hand operated valve. The only adjustment required was to the regulator to alter adult or child pressure. Suction and oxygen therapy were also available with this equipment. With this unit, there was a tendency to over-inflate the lungs and operators required a high degree of skill to maintain head tilt, obtain a mask seal and inflate simultaneously.

The firm of Ambu produced a mask connected to a squeeze bag unit which required two operators, one to position the mask and the second to depress the air bag. It was possible to introduce oxygen to the air bag using a special attachment.

A quite simple device became available, called the 'air viva'. It consisted of a squeeze bag with a face mask attached. This was no doubt the forerunner to the current 'Oxy viva' which has an oxygen cylinder, pressure regulator, adult and child setting via a lever and the squeeze bag system. This unit has been and should be with us for many years to come.

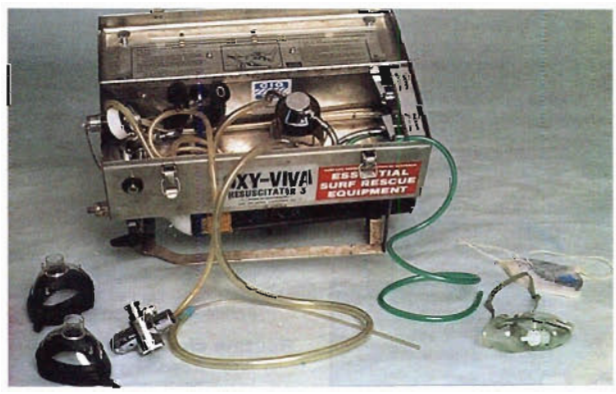

The closer relationship between California and Australia led to the trial and ultimate acceptance of a U.S.A. rescue system utilizing a towed floatation device. The first one demonstrated was an aluminium sealed tube which was towed out by a swimmer and passed to a person in difficulty. Maintaining a grip seemed a problem. The second one, and ultimately adopted by Australia, was a wrap-around buoyant float, named a rescue tube, which was towed out by a swimmer, fastened around the patient who is then towed back to shore.

Oared surf boats also carry one of these, replacing the 150 yard box line, originally contained ahead of the bow seat. Surf boats on crowd surveillance duty are required to carry a red and white checkered flag to signify shark alarm. An orange flag with a blue diagonal strip became the standard beach to IRB signalling flags.

The next progression from a bell and signalling flags was the installation by some clubs of a public address system to assist with swimmer control and to summon life savers where assistance is required. From there, clubs purchased hand held radios for communication between patrol lookout and patrol.

With advancement in radio technology and subsequent size reduction, John Fox, the state radio officer, recommended the development of a waterproof bag of clear plastic fitted with a shoulder harness to be worn by IRB drivers which solved the water penetration problem.

A state wide system establishing a command radio room at headquarters was installed by utilising eastern and western repeater stations. Patrols now check on and off to report incidents, request assistance or an ambulance and advise clubs of major advancing weather changes.

All club members must learn the basic beach to base or IRB communication procedures as part of their life saving awards.

Female Examiners since the 1980s

With the admission of women to the surf life saving movement in 1980, it was only a matter of time before they advanced to join the ranks of the Examiners. The first female member admitted to the Board of examiners in 1984 was Jenny Evans from Portsea SLSC. Jenny was subsequently included in a Victorian team tour to New Zealand as an Educational Officer.

Another female pioneer was Barbara Webb of Mentone LSC. The Webbs, Tony and Barbara along with six other Mentone club members, joined, trained and obtained their Surf Bronze Medallions with the Woolamai Beach Surf Life Saving Club in the early 1980s. This was a fortuitous occasion for the surf movement as both ultimately became examiners in 1985, with their children Ivan, Andrea and Kim becoming hard working examiners in the Bass District. Tony has since become Port Phillip District Supervisor, ably assisted by Barbara.

When South Melbourne Life Saving Club joined the Surf Life Saving movement in 1985, the association gained the services of Barbara Morgan, who also has become a dedicated member of the Board of Examiners, also becoming Education Officer from 1996 onwards. In additions, Barbara trains lifeguards in Vietnam and is an accredited pool referee with World Life Saving.

Women have continued to accept responsible roles within the association, and in 1999/2000 season there were five female District Supervisors (of a possible nine Districts). Their contribution is listed as follows:

Dinah Boswell (Sth Melbourne), Port Phillip District: 8 Seasons 1994-2002

Christine Quin (Port Fairy): Western District: 6 Seasons 1996-2002

Michelle Turner (Woolami Beach): Bass District: 6 Seasons 1996-2002

Anna Seeley (Torquay): Sth. Barwon District: 2 Seasons 1995-97

Janis House (Pt. Leo): Flinders District: 3 Seasons 1999-2002

Rebecca Johnson (Jan Juc): Sth Barwon District: 2 Seasons 2000-02

Sarah Gallagher (Ocean Grove): Bellarine District: 2 Seasons 1997-99

Simonetta Danielis (Venus Bay): Bass District: 1 Season 1985-86

Cathy Tizdale (Ocean Grove): Bellarine District: 2 Seasons 2000-02

Another important position is that of Honorary Secretary of the Board of Examiners, and from 1997 to 1999 the position was held by Cecilia Digenis (Pt.Leo).The current Honorary Secretary is Jacqui Hewitt (Williamstown).

Signalling with Flags

Signalling with flags was the only method of communication from beach to surf boat and vice versa prior to the introduction of hand-held two-way radio sets used extensively in IRBs today. However the signals are still necessary and are one of the first parts of the Bronze Medallion examination to be tested. This is because without an understanding of these signals, an examiner would be putting a swimming candidate's life at risk.

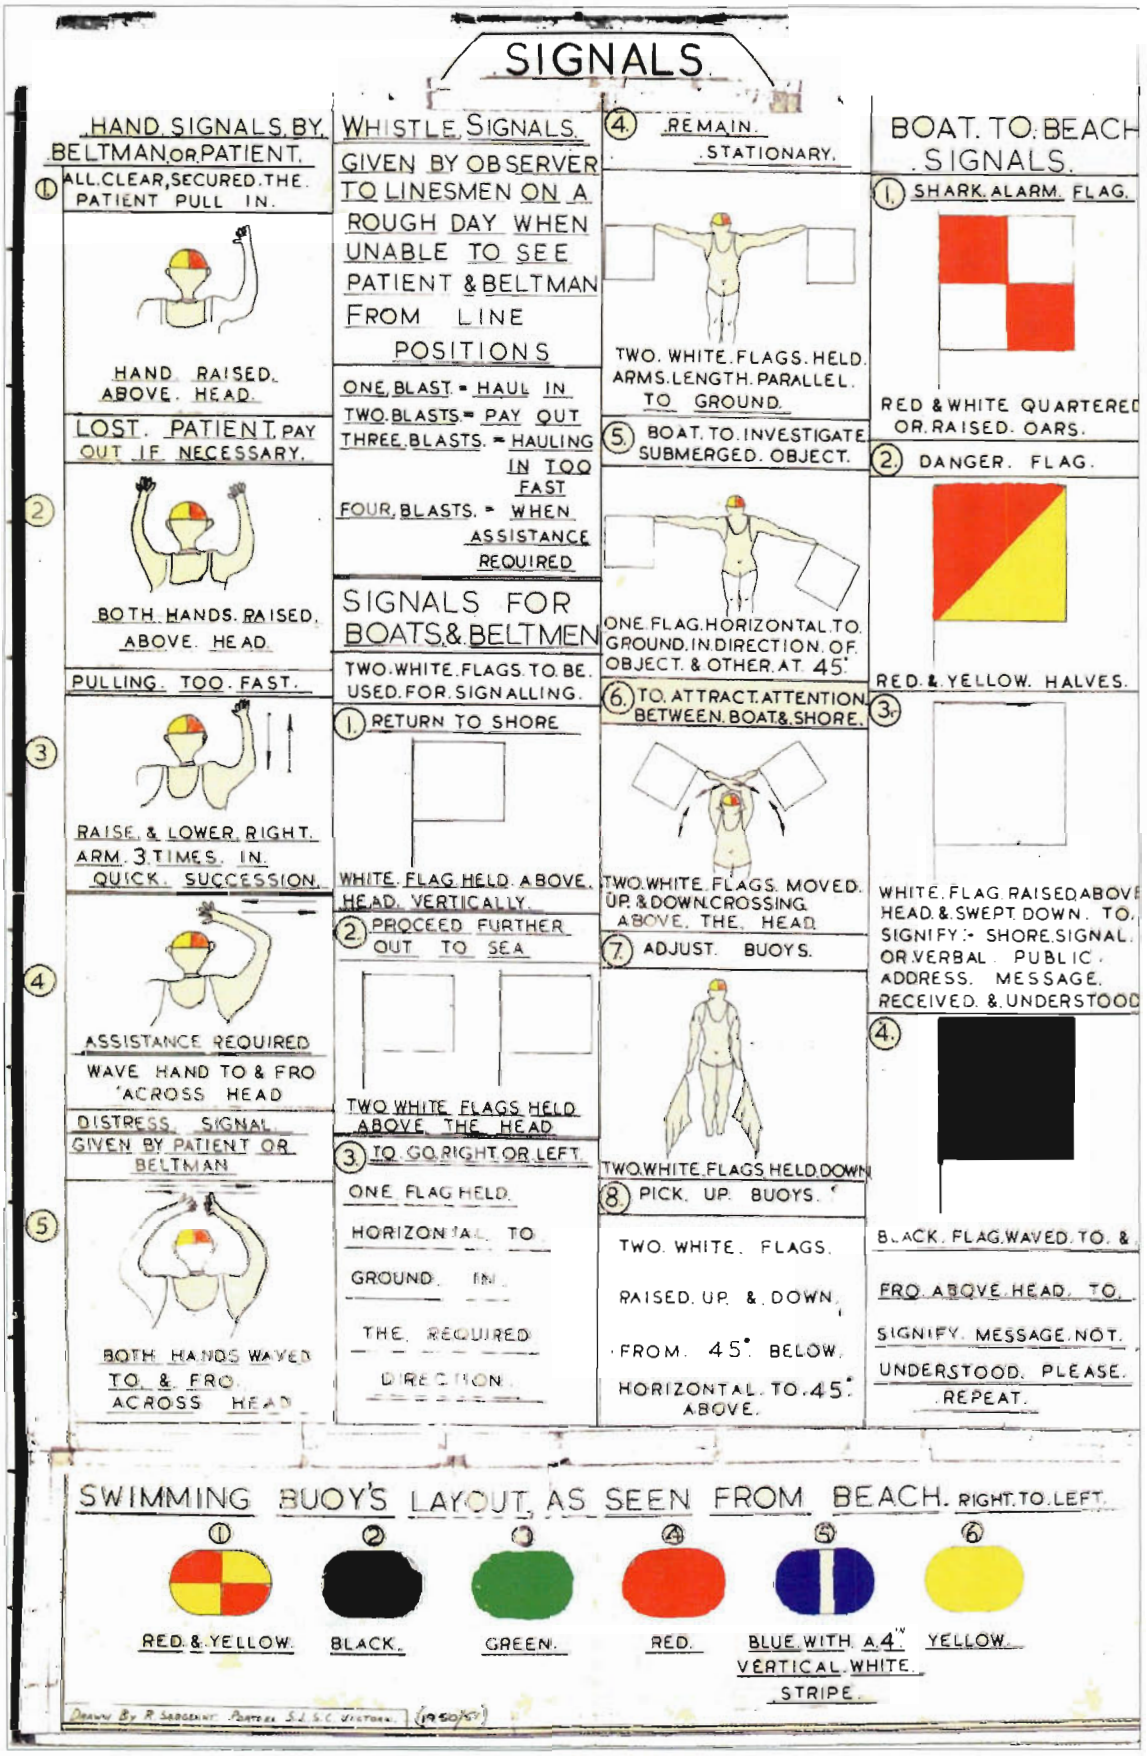

The use of signal flags, particularly by ships, is one of the oldest methods of visual communication at sea. The first specially made signal flag was the 'banner of the Council' introduced for the English fleet in 1369 and was used by the Admiral's ship to summon his captains on other ships to come alongside. The first regular code type flags for signalling date from the 17th century, again devised by the English. Signal flags for numerals followed these. By 1889 a complete set of flags was in place for both letters of the alphabet and numerals and was introduced internationally.

Other special signals such as semaphore, morse, warning signals and whistles all appeared for various special uses. However for Surf Life Saving, the set of signals adopted were and still are kept to a very simple set of movements usually directed from the beach or a vantage point to the lifesaver at sea.

During 1950/51, Rex Sargeant, club captain of Sorrento/Portsea SLSC, undertook development of a chart of signals. Rex was a fiercely competent surf swimmer and belt champion. After moving to Sydney, he continued his involvement in surf lifesaving with the Wanda club and on the BOE since 1960. He became Branch President of Sydney Branch in 1983, a position he held for four years. Rex is a Life Member of Sydney Branch, Wanda club and New South Wales association.

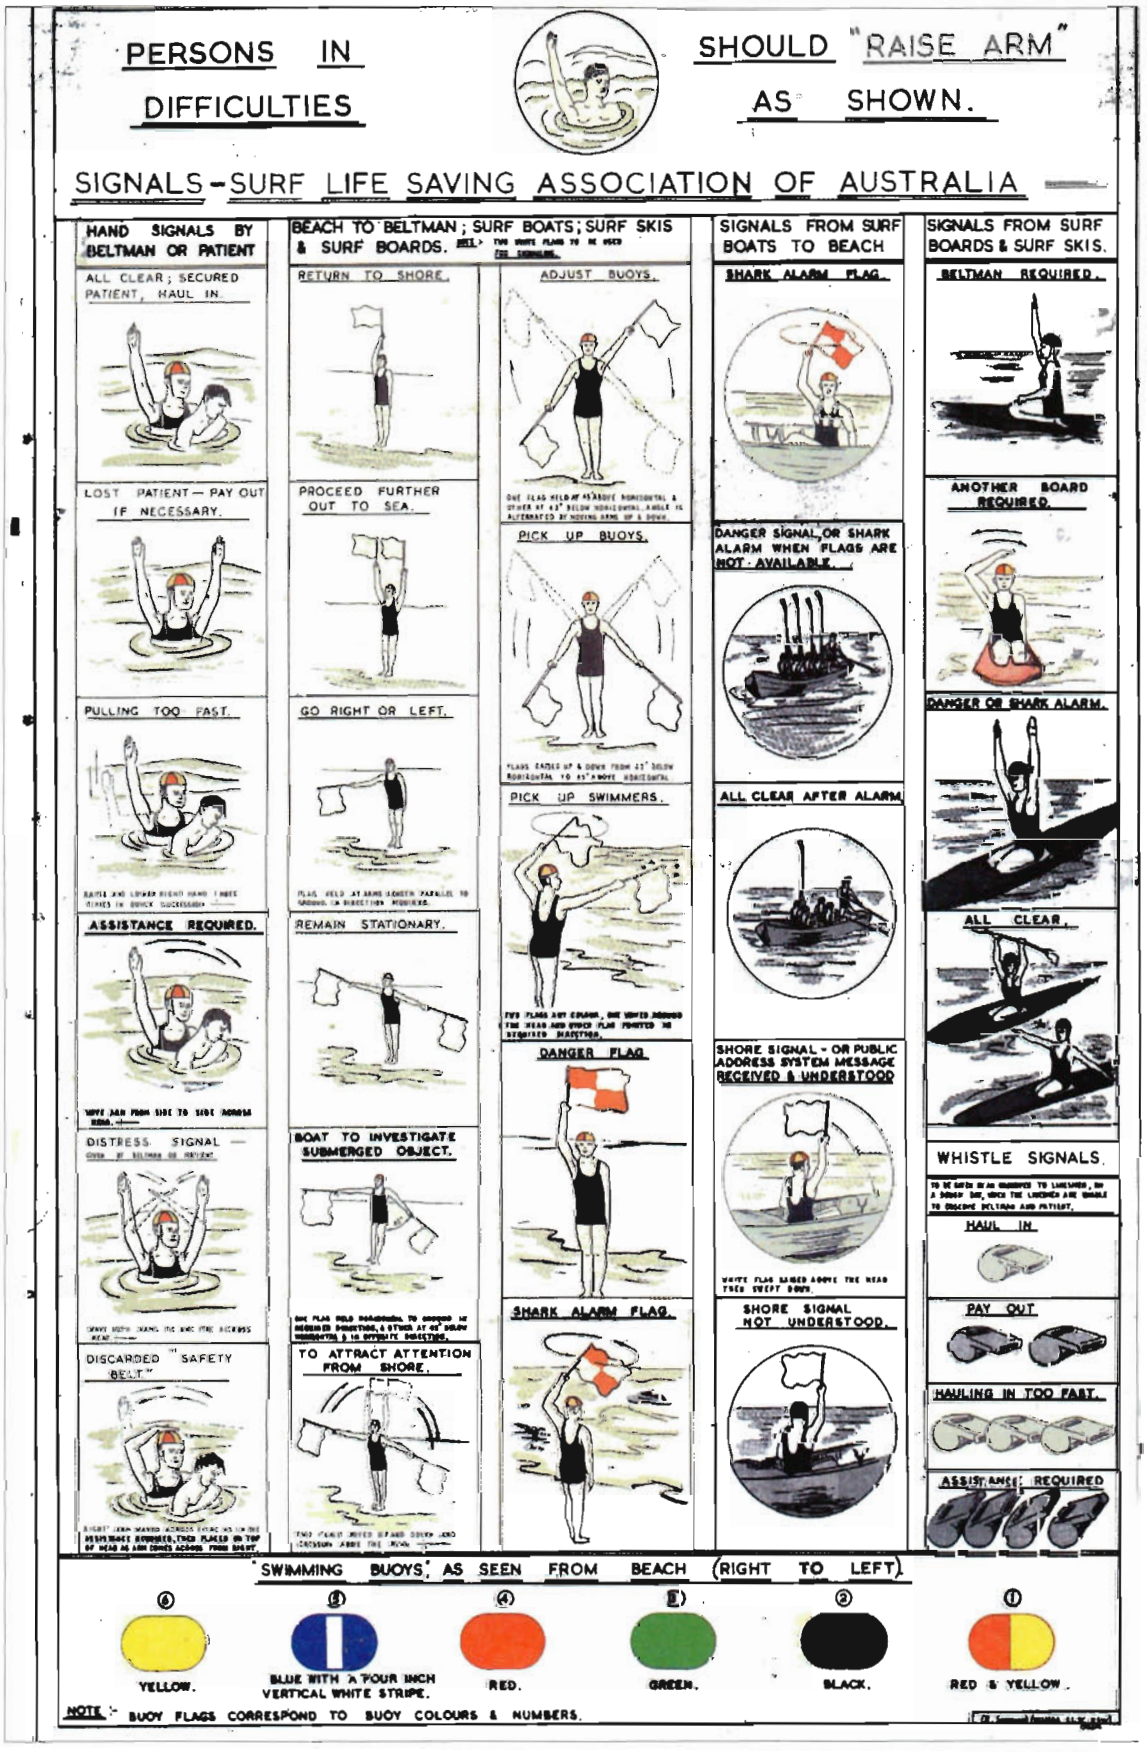

The original set of signals he designed led to the revised charts, also drawn by Rex, that are still used today.

Patrol Legends
Donning the 'Red & Yellow'–
Commitment and Determination

There have been many Victorian lifesavers who have continued over many years to fulfil the basic requirement of all lifesavers; that is 'to do your patrols'.

Over the fifty five years of existence of Surf Life Saving in Victoria, more than 20,000 lifesavers have continued this unique and special service of patrolling our coastline — with a result of some 18,250 rescues from life threatening situations — ensuring there are 'no lives lost'.

Amongst the members of each and every club there are those who contribute with huge numbers of hours on patrol, some doing over 200 hours in a season. Amongst all of these, there are those who have done their patrol duties for many, many years.

One such life saver who recently swam in his 21st Lorne 'Pier to Pub' (being in every swim since inception) is Gavin Rafferty of the Fairhaven Surf Life Saving Club and who has now completed his forty second year of patrols.

Gavin 'Raff' Rafferty, a retired Primary School Principal, joined Fairhaven Surf Life Saving Club in October, 1959 and has done his patrols every year since. His Surf Life Saving Australia awards include Bronze Medallion; Instructor's Certificate; IRB Crewman; IRB Driver and the Advanced Resuscitation Certificate.

For the Fairhaven Club, Gavin has held positions of Club President, (during the Ash Wednesday Bushfire 1983), Club Secretary, Club Vice Captain, Chief Instructor, IRB Captain, State Centre Delegate and responsible for the Club's Nipper program. He was awarded Life Membership of his club in 1978.

Gavin has seen the club develop from a situation where members patrolled an open beach using a reel and shelter stored on the front verandah of the house opposite the beach, to the present day, with a wide selection of patrol gear, a clubhouse with a bunk room, flats for married members, a 4 WD, IRBs and radios .

The Rafferty's three children, Bronwyn, Sean and Brian, have all been active members with the Fairhaven Surf Life Saving Club.

Over the 41 years with the club, Gavin has competed in surf races, belt races, R&R and March Past at surf carnivals and he recommends this way of life to anyone who asks. Although Gavin is a great ambassador for surf life saving, there are many more, as these examples show.

The Jan Juc 'Legends' Patrol

by Secretary Geoff Thompstone

The Jan Juc Legends Patrol, (Patrol No.1), currently boasts 250 years of life saving experience. This group, over nearly 40 years, contains dedicated lifesavers, who not only uphold the traditional standards of lifesaving, but also have noteworthy competition careers with over 400 carnival competition pennants, state titles and state team representations.

For many years winners or top placegetters in the club's internal patrol competition, they have been the benchmark for other club members. They won Best Patrol in 1990/91; 1992/93; 1993/94; 1994/95 seasons and second places in 1995/96; 1997/1998; 1999/2000 seasons. Members include:

John Van Ooi

Bronze on 28/2/70; Life Member 2/9/90; Former Vic. Surf Swim/Belt Champion, won titles in 1974 and 75. He toured New Zealand representing Victoria in 1980. John still competes and wins Masters events.

Brian Makin

Bronze on 18/12/72; Life member 26/7/98; Former Boatie, State title winner in 'C' Boat.

Craig Schmidt

Bronze on 22/12/68; Life member 2/07/95;

Ski paddler, beach sprinter and has won Victorian titles in skis and beach sprints at Masters.

William Bond

Bronze on 28/2/70; Life member 4/7/93; patrolled until 1998/99 but says he will be back. Won titles in beach sprints and R&R. Whilst not patrolling for the past two years, he has taken on a major fundraising role. 'Bondo's' golf day is now established as the Club's second highest fundraiser.

Rick Payne

Bronze on 6/3/77; won State titles in Junior Iron Man; represented Victoria in Wieland Shield 1985 tour at Lorne; State team and other titles in board and ski and Masters.

Neil Jeffs

Bronze on 17/1/70; Life member 2/5/97; various State titles in skis, Junior beach sprint and Masters.

Graham Travers

Bronze on 17/12/77; patrolled until 1996. Good patrolling member with board paddling skills.

Peter Richardson

Bronze on 9/4/79; patrolled until 1996; former top pool/surf swimmer; participated in R&R (State Titles) but business commitments and injury ended his patrolling career.

Jon Dendle

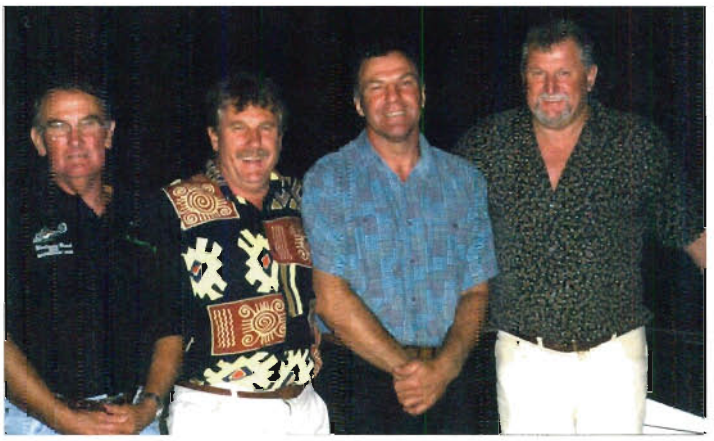

Bronze on 22/12/68; patrolled until 1995; ski paddler, good patrolling member but family commitments and serious injury ended patrols.

John Swan

Bronze on 11/1/75; Beach sprinter, various placings at State titles. Club President for 4 years, re-wrote updated Club Constitution, set up management system for Committee and is still doing his patrols.

As the time clock closes in on the longevity of the patrol in its current state, the members still enjoy lifesaving, the social aspects of being with old mates just catching up with each other and working on how they can further contribute to the club and the Association.

The Portland boys must not be forgotten, way down towards the South Australian border.

Their elder group consists of Ian Eldridge, Peter Lyons, Ross Murrell, Bill Tonkin, Peter Yuill, Roger Trewavis, Andy Murrell, Graeme Elcgridge and Ian Rundell.

John Fay of the Torquay Club went on to patrol for 27 years (ref. Page 222 of Gladiators of the Surf) finishing in 1977 which at that time was the longest serving person patrolling from 1955/56 - 1977/78.

Whilst at Woolamai, on Phillip Island, the 'Geriatrics' (Geri's) include: John Thomson (40 years), Alan McLean (30 years), Trevor Clausen (40 years) Alan Lawrey (38 years), Peter Lawrey (38 years), Murray Adams (40 years), John Sill (30 years) Roger Barry (30 years) Ron Stephens (30 years), Brian Whittaker (25 years).

Every club has them and they are the backbone of the movement. They set the example to others and they will tell you, 'giving of yourself to help another, that's what it's all about.' That is why they are in surf life saving.

With nearly 6,000,000 patrol hours at the end of the 55th season, we can still say that never has a life been lost in Victoria swimming between the flags.

With sand between their toes their reward is the great satisfaction of doing something for others.

Victorians helped form the Surf Life Saving Assocation of Oregon, USA

In 1966, Torquay SLSC member, Tony Knight was in the United States on a scholarship at the University of Oregon. Being a keen surfer, he spent his spare time surfing the local beaches - particularly Cannon Beach - and it was here that he discovered that there was no organised surf life saving body to protect the beach-goers that flocked to this very popular seven mile long stretch of magnificent, but frequently dangerous coast. By the summer of 1967 he was employed as a lifeguard on Cannon Beach.

Tony had kept in touch with fellow Torquay club member Neal Inglis by mail (no e-mail in those days). The following snippets are a condensed version of the news from Tony's letters of the life saving conditions that existed in Oregon State, particularly Cannon Beach, and the work that Tony and another student at the University, Mal Cant from the Maroubra S.L.S.C. carried out to establish the Surf Life Saving Association of Oregon.

"The American Red Cross and the YMCA were the only water safety organisations in the country, both with different standards and without uniform, reliable safety or educational programs."

"Cannon Beach had employed lifeguards for approximately 20 years. To be a lifeguard you needed qualifications from the Red Cross or YMCA and to hold a first aid certificate. On Cannon Beach there was a tower equipped with radio linked to a 'beach car' that patrolled the 7 miles of beach, but over the total area there was no designated swimming/patrolled area. People swam wherever the inclination took them."

"The lifeguards were not skilled or trained in surf work and certainly not skilled at belt swimming. Their equipment consisted of a reel (two drums welded together), 500 yards of line and a canvas belt that was worn around the neck and under the shoulder." From Tony's description, this meant that the untrained linesmen hauled the unfortunate beltman in by the neck whenever a rescue was attempted. It was not what Tony, now a lifeguard, considered a healthy rescue device.

The first item that he asked Neal Inglis to send him was an Australian belt. A major hazard when surfing at Cannon Beach is the very good chance of meeting a 20 metre x 1.5 metre log that has found its way to the sea via the river system from the intensive logging sites in hills above the area and have somehow missed the collection points. An important part of the lifeguards' duty is to spot these menaces before they collect a surfer.

Tony and Mal had accepted the challenge to enlist and train volunteers to help patrol the area by using the SLSA methods that they knew so well, and progress was being made. The unfortunate drowning of a 10-year old girl four miles away from the patrol tower, midway through the 1967 season, galvanised the community to action.

The next day Tony and Mal were deluged with offers of assistance. Local businessmen led by Bruce Doran from Portland formed the Cannon Beach Voluntary Rescue Patrol.

Within 10 days they had two new four wheel drive and radio equipped rescue vehicles; new surf lines; patrol flags; a volunteer system to patrol the whole beach in cars; the formation of a women's auxiliary that raised $700 in 10 days; oxygen equipment donated; the Australian SLSA signal system copied to all involved; two patrolled swimming areas established; patrol caps made; surf safety pamphlets distributed to motels, hotels and beach visitors and a number of fund raising exercises planned.

Each weekend Tony and Mal organised beach lifesaving demonstrations to raise public awareness. A new Australian surf reel was ordered but unfortunately the order went astray. Neal Inglis was again called on to give a hand and he arranged for the reel to be made by Greg Letho of Bonbeach, Victoria. Costing $203 (plus freight), it was air freighted to Portland, Oregon in time to start the 1968 season.

Subsequent calls for assistance to Neal resulted in the forwarding of items such as 25 SLSA handbooks; SLSA posters from the Brown book; plans to build a 16ft surf board to use for rescue work (needed to search through the fogs that fall regularly than swim in the 40 degree F (4.5 degrees C) water, and a waxed cotton line.

In August 1968 Neal Inglis received a copy of the proudly titled:

Jenny Evans

'Victoria's First Female Member of Board of Examiners'

I reflect on my years in the surf life saving movement with great fondness and many cherished memories. Unlike some of my female colleagues, I was not driven by a sense of competition in making my decision to join the movement. Indeed, my competitive spirit had been exhausted by an intense involvement as an equestrienne for over twenty years. I had always had a great respect for the volunteers on the beaches during summer, and when the decision came to enable females to participate in the movement, I viewed this as a personal challenge and an opportunity to put something back into the community. I knew my limitations in relation to my physical ability, and I don't mind admitting that I had to work very hard to attain an acceptable standard, particularly in choosing such a challenging beach as Portsea as my home base.

As with any organisation, the winds of change always elicit a sense of fear and animosity, and this was no exception in the surf lifesaving movement when females first presented for training and examinations, but I like to think of it as 'character building'. In actual fact, those males who were outspoken and negative about the emergence of females attracted my pity for their insecurity and unfounded fears. From a personal point of view, I respected the differences between the sexes in relation to physical ability, but firmly believed that an effective compromise of talents and contributions could be achieved. Discrimination existed before females became involved in surf lifesaving - I was shocked at the disciplinary procedures adopted with junior males at my club, but then came to realise that as harsh as these actions seemed, they were effective in producing discipline and order during times of emergency, and that consequently rescue procedures ran smoothly and successfully.

My professional background has been in the field of education, so I channelled my energies into that aspect of the movement. I moved through the qualifications of the various certificates, and took the role of Chief Instructor at Portsea for a term. It was then that I realised the enormity of the Association and that I would like to further my contribution at a state level. My probationary term was not without trauma, but I can recall those experiences with amusement now. I believe that in those days, in order for a female to be treated as an equal, she had to be better than average, and that applied to not only examination procedures, but even to telling outrageous jokes at Board of Examiners seminars!

Upon admission to the Board, I felt a sense of achievement and elation, but I also felt humbled by being in the company of people who had dedicated a lifetime to serving the community. My experiences during my entire term with the Surf Life Saving Association of Victoria have been some of the best times of my life, both in a personal sense and in a club and community sense. One of the greatest compliments I ever achieved during this time was unintended - I was hosting an American lifesaver one summer, and when he witnessed the manner in which I was treated by my fellow examiners he exclaimed, "Jenny, I am so sorry, they treat you just like one of the guys" —to which I replied, "Thank you — that means a lot to me!"

Finally I believe that some of the 'unsung heroes' of the Association are the partners and family of the members who sacrifice their time and support for the advancement of Surf Life Saving in Victoria.

Barbara Webb

'From the First Female Bronze Squad to the Board of Examiners'

Barbara Webb

My involvement with Woolamai Beach surf lifesaving club started in early 1980 after finding out that women were being allowed to join the ranks of surf lifesavers Australia-wide.

Together with three other girls from the bayside club of Mentone (a Royal Life Saving club), we went to Woolamai club in March that year with Ross and Ruth Kemp. Ross was an early member of Woolamai Beach, as well as being a Life Member of the club. After a swim, we were introduced to patrol members and officials and were delighted to learn that many of them were old bayside lifesavers from Mordialloc club.

When the announcement came that women could become fully qualified surf lifesavers later that year (1980), a group of eight of us from the Mentone club (four females and four males) began training for our Bronze Medallion: Mary and Allan Corney, Ruth Kemp, Wendy Clayton, Craig Hood, Mark Henricks and we two Webbs — Tony and Barbara. Since we had all been patrolling and competing members for many years at Mentone, it was not hard to get down to serious training over that late winter, early spring period, although I must admit the three belt swims in the cold seas at Woolamai sorely tested our enthusiasm.

At this stage you might wonder what a 40 year old mother of four was doing getting involved in a project like this. My parents were family members at Mentone club and I was born and bred into bayside life saving. I had thoroughly enjoyed all aspects of Mentone club life: patrol work, competition, examinations and was a member of the Victorian team on many occasions at Australian Royal Life Saving titles, along with Ruth Kemp. Nevertheless Tony and I joined Woolamai as a family unit (and have remained members ever since).

Woolamai club gave us their full support and encouragement. We liked the feel and atmosphere at the club, and with Ross Kemp as a current patrolling member it just gave us that extra edge for training. Allan Corney was also a member of the local board riders club and had parents living at San Remo, so there was a definite link to Phillip Island and Woolamai Beach from many directions.

Following an exhaustive training schedule, the examinations were done in sections. State Centre was also interested in our progress since we were possibly the first squad with women to be examined in Victoria. So in order to create a favourable image for Woolamai Beach, we designed and made our own lycra bathers and caps in the club colours of light green with a diagonal sash of black and white stripes.

The final beach examination was held at Phillip Island on 22 November 1980. All eight of us were thrilled to have passed all aspects of the examination. The main adjustment for everyone was reverting to swimming with a belt with a waxed cotton line. In the bay, we only used a polyester line following the death of a girl at a bayside carnival. Polyester lines in the surf can be a real danger, but as Ruth and I were belt swimmers for many years it was not too hard to adjust back to waxed cotton lines.

Woolamai Beach committee and all members gave us full support and encouraged us to join in the patrol teams. Patrol work at Woolamai was quite different from a bayside beach but we all enjoyed the challenges. Competition members were also there for us at some of the carnivals we competed in, and it was good to have such an interest.

Mary Corney, a canoe paddler, became interested in tackling the surf ski races. At first there were no designated female events so she had to learn the hard way by competing against the men. Both Mary and Ruth were very good board paddlers and earned respect from the males at various carnivals. Wendy was a top sprinter, and all of us were members of the R & R team. Mary was a trail blazer in gaining special competition events for girls only. It is gratifying to see all the girls now involved in every aspect of surf lifesaving, whether patrols, competition — skis, boards, ironwoman, surfboats and IRB.

We gained extra awards in 1981: Radio Operators Certificate and Advanced Resuscitation Certificate. We even spent the winter months of 1983 training (in full length wet suits) for the IRB Crewman's Award. Unfortunately, Mary Corney fell ill at this time and was unable to join us in the IRB award, although she participated in and enjoyed all other patrol duties. (Club members and committee gave full support to Mary in her fight against the brain tumour which eventually claimed her life.)

Since Tony and I were already examiners for Royal Life Saving Society, we trained a squad of Bronze Medallion candidates to gain our Surf Instructors Award in 1982. We also gained our ARC Instructors Certificate in 1984, Bronze Examiners in 1985 and examiners in ARC in 1990. Tony and I joined the Board of Examiners as probationary members and have worked in that capacity since.

Tony took on the role of District Supervisor for the clubs in Port Phillip district and was appointed Liaison Officer for Chelsea Long Beach and Carrum when those clubs joined surf life saving. This was in addition to the work done in our own district of Bass.

The remaining members of our 1980 squad have also contributed to the movement. Ruth and Ross Kemp are working hard at Mentone. Ruth has gained many medals at state and Australian championships. Ross is now president of Mentone club and was there to lead it into the surf lifesaving movement.

Wendy Clayton married Craig Hood and have continued their involvement with Mentone club as well as now helping Mount Martha club along with other members of Woolamai club who live in Mount Martha. Wendy and Craig's three children are also qualified members at Mount Martha.

Allan and Mary Corney moved to Queensland just before Mary's death and Allan died of cancer a few years back. Mark Henricks stayed a short time with Woolamai and Mentone and is now (temporarily) lost to surf lifesaving.

It has been a delight that all of our four children became involved with surf lifesaving. Peter and Ivan gained their Bronze with Woolamai. Karen gained hers at Half Moon Bay where she met her future husband, Kim, but both transferred to Woolamai and are actively involved in the club. Matthew, the youngest, gained his Bronze at Point Leo and is now a member of Lorne club. Ivan, Andrea and Kim are also among Bass District's hard working examiners.

Although Tony and I do not actively patrol now at Woolamai, we are busy doing gear inspections, requalifications, examinations and patrol inspections around the state but mainly concentrated in our own Bass area. This year we will see the new Woolamai clubhouse built - and what a showcase it will be!

It is now over 20 years since we first became involved and it is such a pleasure to see the contribution made by so many girls. One young lass also a member of Mentone, Natalie Hood, followed us into surf lifesaving by joining Portsea club (much to our disappointment). But now as Dr Natalie Hunter she has created her own history by becoming the first female to win the John Wishart Memorial medal and going on to win the Australian Surf Life Saver of the year in 1990.

Swimming, Belt Racing and R&R

Introduction

The basic and arbitrary requirement of any lifesaver is to be able to swim. Even with modern rescue techniques and with most rescues now being carried out having the assistance of Inshore Rescue Boats (IRB's), the swimming (in-water) ability of each and every lifesaver is critical. However, in competition, all of the events contested are life saving orientated, with the same programs used at national, state and club events.

Geoff Emerson, Torquay, first Victorian to win a medal at the National Surf Life Saving Titles (Manly, 1948 –3rd Junior Belt).

Victoria first contested the Australian Championships at Manly in 1948 with Dick Garrard (Torquay) being the first official representative of Victoria in 1947 at Southport, QLD. However the first Victorian to win a medal at an Australian Championship was Geoff Emerson, also of the Torquay Club, and the year was 1948 at Manly. He gained a Bronze Medal in the Junior Belt.

This gave enormous encouragement to the then tiny contingent from Victoria. "We could do it!"

In the early days, as with any sport, proficiency and club spirit led to inter-club competitions which were called carnivals. The range of events was naturally based on Sydney programs which had a strong emphasis on rescue. The traditional program included March Past, Junior and Senior Belt Surf Races, Junior and Senior R&R plus the same levels of boat, board, ski and sprints on the beach. Novelty events included musical flags, pillow fights and chariot races. Of these latter events, only the flag competition remains, now known as the beach flags. It was common for all competitors of a club to enter every event possible; event specialisation did not appear until the mid 1950s.

This chapter is dedicated to both the champions who spent the hard hours thrashing up and down a training pool, to the recreational surfer who 'lived' for a good body wave, then, through competition such as R&R, to the life saver who happened to be at the right place at the right time to perform a rescue and save a life.

In board and ski competition, the two levels were Novice and Senior, with paddlers graduating to Senior after winning a novice event. This system was subsequently replaced by A, B, & C grades during the 1960s.

When malibu boards came on the scene, there was an attempt to introduce board riding at carnivals as a non championship event, but available time and judging method difficulties lead to its discontinuation. A straight out paddling race was then introduced at Portland in 1959 won by Dick Knight, which has continued on since.

In the early 1970s, there emerged a short manoeuvrable surf ski called the 'wave rider'. A straight paddling race for the wave rider was included but faded out due to lack of competitors. The first race was at Ocean Grove in 1973; the final race at Apollo Bay in 1988.

Commencing around the mid 1950s, larger Victorian clubs all started recruiting pool swimmers such as champion John Marshall (Pt. Leo), Brian Whiting (Torquay), Peter Francis (Pt. Leo), Peter Glenn (Portesea), Jim Fountain (Lorne), Jim Heard (Lorne), John Ryan (Torquay), Peter Doak (Torquay), Tony Strahan (Torquay), Ray Brewin (Torquay), Damien Flouch (Pt Leo), Rowan Nash (Pt Leo), Jeff Van der Graaf (Torquay), Michael Phelan (Portsea), Harrow Morgan (Pt Lonsdale), Bill Knott (Anglesea), Bruce Morgan (Portsea), John Olsen (Pt. Lonsdale), Misho Vasilsevich (Torquay), Rob Elmore (Lorne), Gary Richardson (Pt. Leo), Allan Trickey (Lorne), Andy Wright (Portsea), Ted Gallagher (Lorne), Robert Byrne (Pt Leo), Mac Greening (Lorne), Neil Moratty (Pt Leo),

By 1965/66 a number of swimmers were on the Victorian scene. We won the Interstate Championships, not on handicap but outright with Tony Strahan, Geoff James, Peter Doak, Peter Francis (Jnr). This was our finest hour!

Notwithstanding all these achievements, winning the Interstate outright on three occasions was still Victoria's finest hour. On handicap Victoria has been successful on five occasions. The strength of our state in competition can be aligned with the contribution of all these teams and winning outright twice.

The first Victorian Gold at an Australian Championship went to the Point Lonsdale Boat Crew in 1964/65 at Scarborough, W.A. At Coolangatta, Qld in 1965/66 Anglesea Junior R&R came first. Peter Francis of Pt. Leo was first in the Junior Belt and George Day of Warrnambool was first on the Long Board Open.

The 1966/67 Australian Championships at Southport, South Australia saw Victoria's Peter Doak of Torquay Club win the Open Belt Championship of Australia, being Victoria's first Senior to win a gold medal in swimming. Peter Duffin was first in the Single Ski.

However the most important club member in surf life saving is the 'all rounder'. This term describes the fully committed club member who is involved in everything, always there for the Sunday morning swim, for patrol, for special events: The all-rounder makes a great contribution and is always there to save a life.

During the mid 1970s, there were rumblings about females perhaps being introduced, which, in some circles, drew comment of interference into what was a 'man's world'! In particular, one club's constitution specifically laid down the rule that "taking a line to the North of the Clubhouse to the tree and a direct line to the post in line with the other side of the Clubhouse, plus all that area taken up by the deck of the Club, no female shall set foot". However in 1980 females were introduced without a great deal of fuss, and suffice to say that female contribution has been both dedicated and outstanding.

Surf Life Saving Australia-wide has benefited considerably in recruitment of membership, input of expertise and achievement at club, state and national levels from our females. At the end of nearly twenty years, female membership has risen by approximately 3% per annum. Wishart Medal winners, Natalie Hood (Portsea), Kathy Tisdale (Ocean Grove), Naomi McGain (Anglesea) and Rebecca Johnson (Jan Juc) have shown great dedication and there have also been outstanding female competitors such as Natalie Hood (Portsea), Carol Fox (Lorne), Naantali Marshall (Torquay), Julia Cullity (Torquay), Sue Dimmick (Portsea), Caroline Witty (Anglesea), Frances Murphy (Torquay), Cheryl White (Lorne), twin sisters Debbie and Jenny Whiting (Torquay), Elly Hutton (Anglesea), Vanessa Guest (Anglesea), Abby Lewtas (Anglesea), Caroline Ronchi (Seaspray).

Male or female and after fifty years, the swimmers remain the most important member of any club.

The Swimmers

By Luella Paine

With the temperature in the low thirties, a fair groundswell and just the slightest whiff of an onshore, it was looking like picture-perfect conditions as the boys lined up for the start of the Open Surf Race final.

There were about thirty contenders in all, most of them familiar faces. Despite the slight hum among the gathered spectators, it was looking like easy pickings for the strong Torquay contingency. One, two and three. That was my guess. No one could touch 'em on their home beach!

The crack of the starter's gun and they were off, striding out to mid-thigh and then duck-diving under the first breakers. The sea was awash with white water, churning to the thrash of thirty pairs of arms.

The pack split into two as they rounded the first buoy. Five in the leading group, about seven behind and the rest thinning out gradually. Just as I thought. Our three best Torquay boys were looking strong.

With everyone except Robbo now around the buoys (poor Robbo — maybe just a few too many ales last night my friend), I hardly noticed the growing swell as I focused on the leaders.

But hang on. Someone's broken away from the leading pack. For a brief moment he paused, head raised high above the water. From the shore, his cap looked like a tiny beach ball bobbing with the tide. Another second and he turned, swimming back to meet the rising swell. The beach spectators buzzed.

The leaders were about halfway in now, but all eyes were on the tear-away as he stopped, treading water momentarily. Behind him the sea opened up and the big wave towered overhead. In seconds he took off, powering along with the wave in rapid strokes, then head down, arms straight and planing. He'd cracked it!

The crowd roared in unison. The porpoise glided on his wave, past the leaders and all the way in to the shallows. A few more strokes and he was wading, then up onto the beach, legs beating time to our thunderous applause.

A true winner in a fair and equal comp-etition — it's just that sometimes nature likes to lend a helping hand. Now try doing that in a pool race!

In the late 1940s, as Victoria's first surf clubs evolved, and carnivals hit the shores of Torquay and Point Lonsdale, there was a new buzz around Melbourne's main swimming and bay side life saving clubs—surf life saving.

These swimming and bay clubs became an important source for recruiting young, successful swimmers to the thrill of the surf and the camaraderie of surf club life. Lured by the excitement and challenge of surf activities, and keen to hone their skills away from the monotony of the pool, young swimmers came to the fledgling surf clubs for a taste of the action.

Key recruiting centres were the Olympic and Beaurepaire pools—training hubs for Victoria's championship swimmers—and Williamstown's Royal Life Saving Club. Point Lonsdale, in particular, had a reputation as a strong swimmers club, reflected in its domination of state titles in most swimming events in the 1950s. Its affiliation with Williamstown RLSC gave Point Lonsdale members access to a Melbourne-based training beach and facilities all year round.

With many early surf club recruits living around the inner Melbourne bay side suburbs, they would travel by train and bus or pool cars to make their weekend pilgrimage to the coastal beaches for patrols, training, competition and, of course, their fair share of socialising. And if there wasn't room for a lift, there was always hitchhiking—thumbing a lift was easy, especially if motorists could recognise a surf life saver.

Surf clubs had a distinctly one-in-all-in approach, with members actively involved in all aspects of club life. At competitions there was little specialisation, with swimmers participating (and some excelling) in both beach and surf events, camping overnight with club mates on the foreshore and moving on to a new beach for another rigorous round of activities the next day.

At the first Victorian Surf Championships, held on Torquay beach in wild surf on Sunday, 7 March 1948, Torquay swimmers dominated the medal tally, taking all five surf titles.

Up-and-coming junior Geoff Emerson, a Hercules of a man even as a youngster, won the Junior Belt title and went on to gain a bronze in the Australian Junior Belt Race in Manly—the first Victorian to win a medal in an Australian Surf Life Saving Championship.

Geoff was to set the scene that many fine Victorian swimmers followed in the ensuing fifty years of surf swimming events in both Australia and overseas.

In 1975, as Australian society moved slowly forward in its acceptance of gender equality (aided somewhat by the Federal Labor Government's sex discrimination policies), the Victorian Surf Life Saving Association made its first push to accept women members. Despite State Centre's initial 1975 resolution to admit women into the Movement, it was another four years until National Council approved this move, making way for a new wave of elite women swimmers to Victoria's coastal beaches.

Like the men, most women swimmers had moved up through the ranks of the swimming clubs and looked to surf life saving for a new set of challenges, or, in some cases, to ease the pressure of intense training and competition in the pool.

Champion swimmers Carol Fox and Linda Hanel were among the first group of women to join clubs and attained their bronze in the 1980/81 season. With only a handful of women competitors initially, there were not enough to warrant separate women's events until 1983, when the first women's Surf Race was included in the season program and state championships. Other events soon followed, and over the next ten years, women became a strong component of the Movement taking on positions as Life Guards, Club Captains, officials and administrators.

So what makes a good surf swimmer? While recruits from the pools or bays often have the athleticism to cut it in the surf, many's the strong swimmer who found the unpredictable nature of surf conditions a fair challenge. Others with little formal swimming coaching but familiar with the surf had the advantage of first-hand experience, and often gave the trained swimmers a run for their money.

Blustery winds, strong currents, seaweed, sand bars and relentless waves could take their toll on the most experienced pool swimmers. In a surf race the ability to time a wave or read the conditions often meant the difference between a win or a place.

Both the surf and belt events provided their own set of challenges for swimmers and required a fine balance of technique, fitness, strength and a keen knowledge of surf conditions. The rhythmic stroke, kick and breath of pool swimming worked only in the calmest of surf, and instead swimmers would opt for a raised head and variable stroke and kick as they powered through the water.

On the way out, ducking waves was another useful surf swimming technique where an experienced swimmer could gain metres just by diving deep under the on-coming wave, digging fingers into the sand and thrusting forward as the wave passed overhead. Those who tended to skim under the waves would often find themselves fighting a losing battle as wave after wave pounded them back towards shore.

Belt swimmers needed the strength and stamina to counter the pull of the line as it was thrust back and forth in the surf and often trained with a line attached to a tyre tube or bucket to build up strength. (There was even a NSW belt swimmer who did his strength work by swimming upstream in the Parramatta River). Today, a lot of belt preparation is done in the gym, but the focus on building strength and muscle for this rigorous event remains.

Swimmers were also an integral part of R&R teams. The blue-ribbon event at surf carnivals, until its popularity was overshadowed by the iron man competition in the 1980s, R&R required a combination of keen focus, concentration and military precision for the drill, and a strong team of belt and surf swimmers to pick up vital points in the swimming sections.

Despite the tedium of endless hours on the beach working the drills (team members had to be proficient at every position on the six person team), and the uncertainty of actually drawing a swimming leg in the R&R ballot, many swimmers dedicated much of their time to train for this most prestigious event.

Point Lonsdale and Anglesea remained the unrefuted leaders in R&R competition throughout the 1950s and 1960s. In the 1970s, Point Leo and Lorne came to the fore, with Point Leo dominating state titles in the 1980s and into the 1990s (when the team of six was reduced to five set positions instead of the traditional ballot system).

The merits of mixing pool and surf competition have been debated consistently within coaching circles and have drawn strong arguments on both sides of the fence. On the one hand, some coaches, especially those who had been involved in surf life saving themselves, saw surf as a well-earned break from the daily grind of a pool training program and often an incentive to keep older swimmers interested in swimming competition. Weekend surf activities provided a strong social outlet, maintained fitness and offered more opportunities for competition.

On the other hand, coaches saw surf as a distraction, interfering with finely-tuned swimming techniques and putting swimmers at risk of fatigue and sunburn from too many hours spent baking under the searing summer sun.

Most coaches, however, were willing to compromise, encouraging their swimmers in the surf, and in another popular swimmers' activity, water polo. Often it was those that excelled in all three activities who stuck with swimming and have maintained their passion for the water right up to the present day.

Many Victorian legends, the John Marshalls, Peter Doaks, Tony Strahans and Carol Foxes of the Movement, had little trouble making the crossover between surf and pool and enjoyed successful careers in both environments.

Surf life saving's premier swimming events like the Lorne Pier-to-Pub and Anglesea's Rock to Ramp have always been strong drawcards for top pool swimmers, with many incorporating these annual events into their training programs. It is in these straight swims that pool swimmers often excel, although the surfers do not give up without a fight and are always determined to show up their pool rivals.

These swimming events, attended over the years by the who's who of Australian and international elite swimmers— Graham White, Peter Doak, Rob Woodhouse, Michael Klim, Hamish and Angus Cameron, Kieren Perkins— are an opportunity to showcase surf life saving in the public arena, and, like the Uncle Toby's Series and the Kelloggs Nutri Grain iron man, provide strong publicity, not only for swimmers, but for the Movement and its membership.

Despite the glamour of big name events, and beyond the hype of our Victorian and Australian Championships and international carnivals, it is important to remember that swimming is the fundamental skill of every surf life saver. An integral part of surf rescue, and an essential component of the Bronze Medallion award, all surf life savers must exhibit swimming competence and confidence in varying surf conditions.

Not everyone who joins a surf life saving club is a champion swimmer and you do not have to be a champion to succeed in a club. While competition hones the skills essential to life saving, it is the individual's contribution to patrols and to club life that maintains the strong community service provided by all surf life saving clubs around the country.

With Victorian surf life saving heading into its sixth decade, swimming and royal life saving clubs remain a solid recruiting base for swimmers looking to incorporate the fun, fitness and friendship offered by surf life saving into their strict training schedules.

Whatever level of entry —from Nippers to Masters—the surf Movement draws many to its ranks: some looking for the social contact, some for the opportunity to be outdoors in the sun and sea, some to gain vital surf and rescue skills and some who simply enjoy being part of a volunteer organisation.

The champions themselves are quick to recognise these aspects of surf life saving and are indebted to their clubs for the many years of enjoyment they have gained from their sport. The following passages look at the experiences of some of our prominent swimmers of the past half-century, tracing the story of surf life saving through their eyes. For each swimmer, one theme remains constant. Surf life saving has been a prominent part of all their lives and its memories, along with the thrills, the spills, the laughs and the friendships, will be with them always.

Ray Brewin

After joining Torquay in 1964, I progressed through the junior ranks as a swimmer before pursuing ski paddling and the iron man event.

I remember my very first surf race at Woolamai. All I could think about was the possibility of sharks in the water. I stewed about it for hours before the race. But once I was in the water, all my fears were dispelled and I never thought about sharks again.

With my deafness, I found life saving to be a great equaliser. When you're in the water it just comes down to your skill as a swimmer or paddler. Nothing else matters.

Apart from Maurie Rayner, who introduced me to Torquay in 1964, I knew no one at the club. I joined up with the Junior R&R team and got my first taste of what teamwork and mateship is all about. Because I was deaf, we had to work out a system of hand signals for me to use during the drill. They had to be precise but remain subtle enough so they would go unnoticed by anyone but the coach and the team.

I'm indebted to that R&R team. No one complained once about having to incorporate additional parts into the drill. We would literally spend hours and hours on the beach perfecting our systems.

Maurie Rayner was only a few years older than me, but stood out as a great motivator for Torquay's younger swimmers. Maurie was in the junior R&R and surf teams that won Victorian titles in 1961 and 1962. I really looked up to him as a competitor and friend.

In the late '60s, I took up ski paddling and then had my first taste of the thrill of the iron man. Before the iron man became an official event, there was the Jim Wall Memorial Surfathon at Torquay. I remember seeing Terry Wall running up the beach on the final leg. It was one of the best things I'd ever seen and urged me to try it out myself.

I've always enjoyed the endurance aspect of events like the iron man—it's definitely one of my strengths. The further out the buoys in a swim or belt race the more I liked it. I worked hard at the iron man and made the finals in every year I competed.

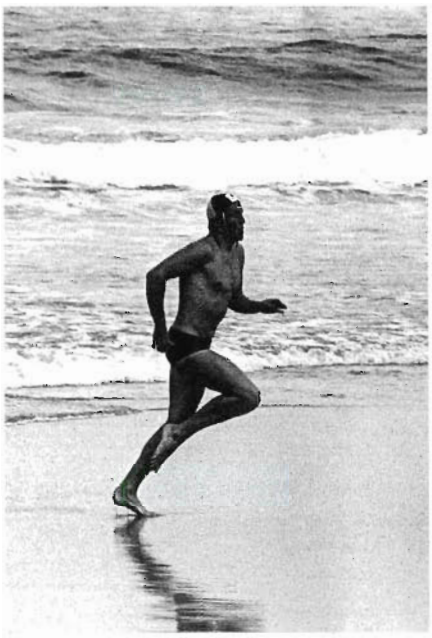

(With a string of achievements at both state and national levels in surf race, surf belt, surf teams, surf ski and iron man events, Ray Brewin remains one of Torquay's most successful all-round surfers. During his time at Torquay he achieved over 50 wins and places in multiple events at club, state and national levels including three Victorian Iron Man titles in 1969, 1971 and 1972).

Peter Doak

When I joined Torquay in 1962, I was still heavily committed to pool swimming and this remained my focus until after the 1964 Olympics.

My swimming history would not be complete without mention of my training partner, friend and staunch rival, Tony Strahan. We grew up together in Geelong, attending the same school and swimming club and competing together in school and club teams. Later, we even pursued the same profession in accountancy.

Tony and I trained at the Eastern Beach Baths, which provided us with an excellent training ground to make the transition to surf. Although in the bay, Eastern Beach was still subject to rougher conditions than you could find in any still-water pool and the baths presented their own set of challenges during training sessions.

I think it was things like having to constantly tread water between training runs (because there was no 'shallow end') and swimming in rough conditions that gave us a strong edge over the Melbourne swimmers. In rough water you've got to work a lot harder on technique.

We'd start training at the beach from early September. I'd run from my house to the beach —it took over an hour. In the morning chill my face would be purple. I had to start shaving the night before ensure my face had a bit of protection from the biting cold.

After the intensity of pool competition, I enjoyed the opportunity to release the pressure valve with surf life saving. In the pool someone with a stop watch constantly records your times. In surf, you could simply win a race on merit without being reminded that you were slightly slower than your previous swim.

Tony and I formed the basis of Torquay's surf team throughout the 1960s, training in the interstate team under Neal Inglis. Neal did a lot of work on my running coming up to the Nationals at Coolangatta in 1966. I was very slow into the water and was losing vital ground in the surf race. The intensive work paid off. Our team won both the Surf Team and Handicap title.

You didn't get much as a Victorian team member in those days and there was no such thing as sponsorship. The year we went to Coolangatta, we were given team track suits but we were told we had to return them after the championships— they were only on loan for the trip. After our Surf Team victory we decided to keep our track suits to mark our success. We simply refused give them back. It caused quite a stir with officials, but we kept them in the end.

I initially focused on the surf race but turned to belt swimming on the advice of Torquay Life Member Ron Hussey. Ron pointed out that in the surf race, it didn't matter if you were the fastest swimmer, you could still get beaten if someone cracked a wave. In the belt it was just swimming technique, strength and stamina.

I worked hard at my belt swimming technique. I liked the line waxed heavily in the first ten metres to keep it away from my feet— I really relied on my strong kick. I also wore my belt up fairly high to keep the rope away from my legs.

I still swim at least two sessions a week and coached until 1996. I coached the state swimming team for 11 years and the state surf team for five. I also had my own squad of swimmers, surfers and triathletes in Geelong.

I got a lot out of my sport and I wanted to put something back. That's why I looked to coaching. There's years of knowledge and hard work that go into preparing an athlete and if they simply retire then a lot of that knowledge is lost.

In surf life saving, you rely on advice from the senior, experienced surfers. There's a lot of information that you can't learn from a book. I hope I've been able to share a lot of that with my swimmers.

(Peter was the Victorian Surf Race and Belt title holder three years running in 1965, 1966 and 1967.)

After ten years of championship swimming and training I began looking for a new sporting outlet— something that would complement my love of the water and make good use of my swimming skills and fitness. I chose two activities, water polo and surf life saving.

After missing selection for the 1964 Olympics I began to look for an alternative to lap after lap in the pool. Most of those I'd come through the swimming ranks with had moved on by now and I started to focus on water polo. Those that came to surf life saving from the pool swimming circles tended to be a lot older than recruits today because we were moving towards the end of our peak years in swimming.

I joined Lorne Surf Life Saving Club in 1964 and teaming up with my friend and pool training mate Mac Greening who had joined Lorne in the late 1950s. The 1960s saw the start of a strong swimming contingency at Lorne including Mac, Graham White, Peter and Paul Lacey, Ted Gallagher and I. Between us, we formed the basis of many successful Victorian teams during this period.

Lorne was an inspiring club and is still close to my heart. My friendships with people like Mac Greening have continued for over 40 years. I've had a holiday-house at Lorne since 1967. Although I'm now living in Queensland, I still manage a holiday at Lorne every second Christmas.

I found my swimming skills best suited me to surf races. While I had the swimming technique, it probably took me about two seasons to build up my surf craft. Speed and good swimming skills are essential in the surf race but its the surf skills that give you the edge. Often if you can get to the buoys in the first half dozen it then comes down to surf craft - and a little bit of luck.

My inexperience in the surf cost me the 1965 Australian Open Surf Title in Coolangatta. I was leading as we came into the beach and then, suddenly, three people passed me on a wave that was only about two feet high. I came in fourth and decided that I'd better start working on my surfing.

After Coolangatta, I adopted a strategic approach to the surf race, breaking the race into manageable sections and working on my strengths in each of these. I looked at things like the beach run and wade, the navigation to the buoys, the turn on the buoys, the return swim or surf, the wade in and, finally, the beach sprint. Physical attributes were important as well. Those with the height are good waders. Some are naturally fast runners. That kind of thing.

Graham White was one swimmer who showed skill and strength in all aspects of the surf race. Graham could do things I'd never seen anyone else do. He could pull a wave that most people could only pull on a surfboard and he was extremely fast on the beach— I've seen him mow down competitors at Australian Championships.

I took up R&R for the physical and mental challenge. Mac Greening, Ted Gallagher and I formed the basis of the Lorne R&R team throughout the late 1960s and early 1970s. While we worked hard to perfect our drill, the Aussie title eluded us until 1973. We were runners up 1972, and finally claimed first prize at Burleigh Heads in 1973.

I always looked forward to the interstate trips and the opportunity to get to know people from outside Lorne. There were people I'll never forget: the Point Lonsdale Boat Crew, Bruce Owen from Warrnambool, Portsea's Michael Phelan and, the funniest man on the team, Peter Duffin. There's story after story each of them could tell. It helped make my surf life saving years all the more memorable.

Sitting in a small hall in the country town of Shoreham in 1955, I joined Alan Forster, Dick Ellis, and a handful of others to officially incorporate Victoria's newest surf life saving club— Point Leo.

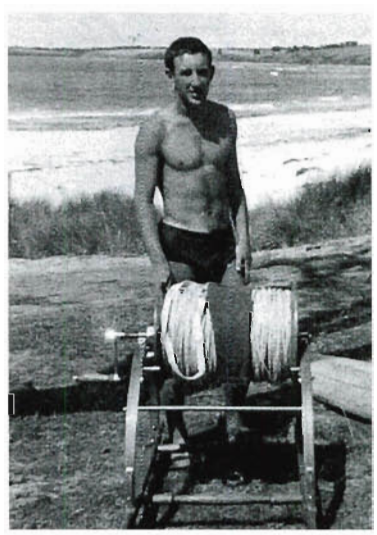

What started some twenty-five years ago, has now grown into a one of Victoria's strongest clubs. Most importantly, however, it has formed the basis of friendships which have grown from strength to strength since that founding night.

I was only fifteen when Dick Ellis, a fellow Scotch College swimmer, asked me about forming a swimming team at Point Leo. I knew the beaches in the area a bit and enjoyed the prospect of spending my weekends in the surf. Since our formation in 1955, I've maintained a strong bond with many of the club's early members. I think that's one of the greatest rewards of the Movement.

The area around Point Leo in the 1950s and 1960s was still very rural and the main towns, Shoreham and Flinders, were close-knit country communities. Many of the early Point Leo officials were local traders and farmers and the club participated in many of local activities. We had a team in the local football competition and organised community dances, which were well attended by everyone in the area. It was that strong club atmosphere that really sticks in my mind.

Undoubtedly, the most prominent swimmer recruited to Point Leo in its formative years was Olympic medallist and World Record holder, John Marshall. I spent a lot of time with John before his tragic death in 1957. He was a charming fellow and a terrific inspiration.Although he didn't have a strong knowledge of the surf, he was always willing to help us with our swimming. I only wish he could have been around longer.

There was always intense competition between the clubs at carnivals. On the other hand, the interaction and friendly atmosphere really rounded off the whole experience.

Often we would arrive at the beach on a Saturday evening to check out the conditions. The first events began at 8.00 am on Sunday morning, with the finals in the afternoon after the March Past. It made for a very long day and we always got terribly hungry, terribly thirsty and terribly sunburnt.

But somehow I kept it up weekend after weekend. And, during summer, if there wasn't a competition I'd spend my days at Point Leo body or board surfing on surrounding beaches. During winter we'd be down there too, helping to build the clubhouse or involved in working bees. I loved the club involvement.

In 1966 when I moved to NSW, I joined Manly Surf Life Saving Club and have remained a constant member. I have always loved the surf and the social side of surf clubs. I wouldn't function without at least an hour of good exercise a day, and swimming and surfing definitely form part of that regime. I've given a lot to the Movement, and, without a doubt, it's given a lot back to me.

(John was the Victorian Open Surf Champion and winner of the Wishart Memorial Medal in 1961. He was also a state team member in 1959, 1960 and 1961.)

I joined the life saving movement in 1981 at a time when there were very few women members. In that sense I guess we were pioneers, although I believe we were more preoccupied with developing our skills and reaching competitive goals than making a mark on the Movement as women life savers. Any mark that I may have made can only really be described on reflection. It's very hard to be consciously aware that you're part of history when all you really want to be is the very best at your chosen events.

I was the Victoria's leading women's freestyler when I joined Lorne in 1981 and my technique, strength and height were all advantages in the surf. I was also pretty gutsy and had no fear of the water— whatever the conditions I'd always have a go.

I was well suited to the Belt Race. As a freestyler, I used a two-beat, cross-over kick, which was unusual in the pool but worked well with the belt. I also had a lot of upper-body strength and took full advantage of the Belt Race's shorter distance and one-way swim. In the 1981 Victorian Junior Belt Race title, I came in third behind Point Leo's Rick Milland and my brother, John. This bronze made me the first woman to win a Victorian Championship medal.

While I still swam some belt races as a senior, it became increasingly difficult to establish a crew, especially with two other very strong belt swimmers at the club. As a strong swimmer, I decided to concentrate on other events that needed work and looked to the board and surf ski. While initially I had little experience with these events, I found them more exciting and challenging than just swimming and set my mind to the task of perfecting these skills.

David Preston, Lorne's board and ski captain, and George Day, a strong iron man competitor, helped me with my early endeavours. They were responsible for preparing me for my first taste of the iron man, at Australia's first all-women's invitation iron man at Southport in 1982. Probably my greatest influence at Lorne was Paul Lacey. He is one of those truly selfless people who spends his life working to help others reach their full potential. Paul dispelled any of my initial fears about the surf and spent many hours with me talking with me about surf conditions, techniques and tactics. It took me almost three years to get the gist of what he was saying, and, looking back, it must have been quite frustrating for him to deal with my ignorance. Maybe he just assumed that I had the understanding!

The season following the inaugural women's iron man, I joined Anglesea Surf Life Saving Club. Anglesea was very focused about developing a strong, competitive club and offered the support, training and access to equipment necessary to develop my fledgling board and ski skills.

Despite the emergence of women's events in the mid-eighties, I continued with the iron man event. I enjoyed competing with the men. They were funny, friendly and always encouraged my single-minded determination to succeed. Many of the men I already knew from years of training at the Olympic Pool. At training there had never been any delineation between men and women and we just carried that attitude across to the surf events. Although I may have been a novelty as a woman surf life saver, I always felt accepted in the men's events.

Perhaps, because I did take competition so seriously, I didn't feel quite as comfortable competing with the women. For me, surf life saving was always about proving myself and I had always been ruthless about that goal. Somehow, if I lost against the men, I had less to lose. I just didn't like being beaten by the girls.

In retrospect, I think my competitive nature was better suited to men's competition. I had to be in an aggressive frame of mind just to conquer the waves— I almost had to be angry at them. I never felt that the women understood that.

I look back fondly at my surf life saving achievements and one of the milestones of my career, becoming Victoria's first professional woman lifeguard. Without my surf life saving experiences, I wouldn't have the tenacity, integrity and strong work ethic that I have today.

John Fox jnr

It's been almost twenty-two years since Wayne Sweeney brought me down to Lorne Surf Life Saving Club for a weekend. I've been at Lorne every summer since 1978 when I gained my bronze and settled into my first year of competition.

Lorne has been one of the most enduring things in my life. Despite living in Canberra now, I still look forward to the summer break when I can re-acquaint myself with the beach and surf.

Some of our members have been with us for over forty years. It gives you a real sense of loyalty and a desire to put back into a club that's been so supportive over the years. Now I really look forward to catching up with my club mates over summer.

Over the last twenty years, I've been heavily involved with water polo, pool and surf swimming. My swimming coach at the Olympic Pool, Bill Atkinson, never actively encouraged me to mix pool and surf swimming. We were not the most popular swimmers at Olympic if we came back tired from a weekend surf carnival. I guess from his point of view it was too much of an interruption to our regular training program.

My first overseas trip was as part of the Wieland Shield team in 1983. I think the thrill of an international competition, coupled with the chance to meet many of the greats in American surf life saving was a strong influence on my surf career. This trip gave me a taste for serious surf competition. It was also great to beat the Americans and it really clinched my resolve to continue and succeed.

My major surf life saving influence was champion swimmer Paul Lacey. Paul was the driving force behind getting the swimmers to really focus on surf awareness. Although there were many good pool swimmers, it was not always a simple transfer of skills across to the surf. Paul showed us how to read the surf and improved our competitiveness in all types of conditions.

While water polo commitments keep me in Canberra, I still look forward to my annual summer pilgrimage to Lorne, although, these days I treat it as more of a break and a bit of relaxation. It's a chance to get back into club life, catch up on the year's activities and enjoy the surf.

(John has been with the Australian Water Polo team since 1985 and trained at the Australian Institute of Sport for the Sydney 2000 Olympics. A strong surf and belt swimmer, John's achievements include first in the 1987 Australian Open Belt, third in the 1988 and 1990 Australian Surf Race Over 24, six Victorian Belt Race titles between 1981 and 1988 and four Victorian Surf Race titles in 1983, 1984, 1988 and 1990.)

Bill Knott

I had my first taste of surf life saving in late winter, 1954, when a friend took me down to Anglesea. I was hooked. I joined Anglesea Surf Life Saving Club that same weekend and, in freezing mid-September waters, completed my bronze just in time for the start of the 1954/55 season.

I had been training at the Olympic Pool since 1950 and continued this through to 1962. In 1955, I was invited to train with the Olympic Squad but my father feared this would interfere with my matriculation year and declined the offer.

I trained with a great bunch at Olympic - Dave Gordon, John Olsen, John Forsyth, Peter Doak, Tony Strahan, Peter Moore, Neil 'The Cube' Mann and John Allen. We were all good mates but fierce competitors.

I always looked forward to any chance to head to Anglesea and would spend school holidays and most weekends at the beach. There was always someone to get a lift with, or we would hitchhike. In those days people were happy to pick up surf life savers heading down the coast, so we made sure we wore something that would always distinguish us.

In 1954, the Anglesea club house had only just been built and things were pretty makeshift in those early days. The club house was really just a small change-room on the foreshore. The shower was set back between the two sand dunes - it was just a piece of pipe flattened at one end and a couple of hacksaw blades, but it still worked!

I focused on the belt swim and was a member of the Anglesea R&R team. I took R&R training quite seriously and would get annoyed when other team members took a slack attitude to drills. It was one of those events that needed the full commitment of everyone and it frustrated me when people let us down.

I remember one Ocean Grove carnival in the late 1950s that really tested my will to win. With national surf champion John Conroy hot on my tail, I struck it lucky and caught a wave right through to the shallows. Unfortunately, the strength of the wave also ripped off my togs. As I lay in the shallows momentarily, I had to decide just how much I wanted to win the race. I remember sprinting home ahead of Conroy (and minus my togs) to the cheer of the thousands of spectators on the beach. I guess I really wanted to beat Conroy!

I still remember the mammoth surf at the Australian Championships at North Steyne in 1955. During the Interstate competition, the waves were like blocks of flats rolling in at you. I had won a bronze in the Junior Belt in the morning and was back for the surf race in the afternoon.

But not long after the start, a young Adelaide fellow got into difficulties and a team mate and I swam over help him in. The race officials were quite perplexed. After some deliberation they offered to re-start the race for us but, let's face it, would you want to head back out into forty foot surf? We humbly declined the offer.

One of my proudest achievements was winning the inaugural John Marshall Memorial Surf Race in 1958. I remember swimming against John in his last race, the afternoon before he died.

He was a great inspiration to all surf life savers and winning that race in its first year was a great honour.

Peter Lacey

There are few surf life savers who have been written into the history books as much as Lorne's Peter Lacey. Peter, along with Steve Warren (North Cronulla) and Ken Vidler (Scarborough) was recognised as the most successful Australian Championship competitor at the Surf Life Saving Association 75th Anniversary Dinner in 1982.

An elite competitor and top surf life saver with a career spanning over 30 years, Peter's single-mindedness and drive saw him excel as a surf and belt swimmer, board paddler and water polo player. Peter was involved in surf life saving right up to his death, aged 51, in 1997.

By the time he joined Lorne for the 1971-72 season, Peter was already a renowned competitor, winning a medal at every Australian Championships since a junior in 1963 (he had joined Surfers Paradise in 1960).

Peter and his brother, Paul, both moved to Victoria from Queensland, and were keen to join a strong, competitive surf team. Initially considering Lorne, Torquay and Point Leo, the Laceys finally chose Lorne and joined other swimming greats Graham White and Rob Elmore to form one of Lorne's finest surf teams.

Peter's time at Lorne, from 1972 to 1974, helped forge a long-standing friendship with another Queenslander, pool and surf champion Graham White. While Peter had met White at Australian Championships in previous years, he now had the opportunity to get to know 'Whitey' as a team mate and competitor. Paul Lacey recalls the firm mateship that developed during their time at Lorne: "There was no love lost between Graham and Peter as competitors, but they remained good friends ever since their Lorne days."

Although White was, without doubt, the stronger pool swimmer, Peter's sheer focus and determination, particularly when under pressure, proved a strong challenge in the surf. Paul recalls his brother's performance in the 1972 Victorian Open Surf Race at Fairhaven: "This had to be one of Peter's finest swims. Peter had burst his ear drum during a water polo match only days before and was advised not to swim until it had healed. He swam the race with his head bandaged, catching a wave to come in first ahead of Graham White. Undeterred by his injury, he then went straight on to swim in the Aussies."

Paul believes his brother's competitive edge and incredible consistency were central to his solid track record in swimming, longboard and water polo. "Peter worked long and hard at his disciplines. He was without equal in his ability to focus on the tasks before him— he would sit down at the start of the season, plan what he wanted to achieve and then systematically go about it.

"You couldn't find anyone who would give you 110% in every race he entered. He never had a bad day, and even under incredible pressure, he would always rise to the occasion."

A true team player, Peter was part of Lorne's strong senior R&R team during his three years at Lorne. Peter aptly sums up the R&R event during his speech at the Movement's 75th Anniversary Dinner: "It is such a complex event that no one has ever owned up to inventing it. Einstein would have trouble understanding it and even the competitors have numbered caps so as not to get mixed up during the event."

Despite its inherent complexity, Peter and his team withstood many a sub-zero training session at Lorne under the guidance of coach Don Heathcote. "Don was particular about training in difficult conditions, so it wasn't unusual for us to be out there in the cold, wind and rain," says Paul. It must have paid off. Lorne's senior R&R team won state titles in 1972, 1973 and 1974 with the Laceys on board.

Throughout his phenomenal career, Peter remained a committed surf life saver, indebted to the friendships and memories of his many years in clubs throughout Queensland and Victoria.

Concluding his speech at the 75th Anniversary Dinner, Peter thanked all those in the Movement who helped make surf life saving such a unique humanitarian movement. "The camaraderie of surf club life and particularly competition will live with you forever... We have all enjoyed some fantastic competition and had the pleasure of watching or racing, or just meeting the champions over the years. This competition and these champions have made Australia the leading country in the world in surf life saving and in surf racing. It is with this in mind that I say 'Thanks for the memories.'

Naantali Marshall

I've always loved the water. My parents taught me to swim when I was very young and I grew up body-surfing at summer vacations to Anglesea. Joining the Anglesea Nippers was a natural progression.

At Nippers there were no girls events, so I always had to compete against the boys. When you're eight years old, swimming with boys just isn't that much fun. At age 11, I decided to move away from life saving to focus on pool swimming where girls' events were the norm.

I had been pool swimming since I was eight and decided to make this my main activity. My swimming commitments were all based in Melbourne which meant I had to forsake the family holidays to Anglesea over summer. For the next five years, the State Swimming Centre became my defacto home and the still water and endless black line replaced the sun, sand and surf of my childhood.

In 1990, Rob Woodhouse encouraged a few of us to form a bronze squad and join Point Leo. There seemed no point in returning to Anglesea - I had lost touch with the club and didn't know anyone there any more - so I followed a lot of my friends to Point Leo for a taste of surf club life on the east coast.

After a year at Point Leo, Hamish and Angus Cameron, who trained with me at the State Swim Centre, asked me to come to Torquay and I've continued with the club ever since. For the first few years of surf life saving, I still focused much of my time and energy on the pool. I guess my fitness and technique made the crossover to surf fairly easy and I competed in my first surf life saving national title as a junior in 1993. I've been to every Australian Championship since then.

Three years ago, I stopped pool swimming to concentrate on the surf. I thought I'd try my hand at board paddling, and this, coupled with my swimming strength, made the progression to iron woman an obvious choice.

My board technique needed a lot of work and it took some time to master it well. I owe a lot of my current skills to the persistence and advice of Stuart Fox (Anglesea). Stuart has been one of my greatest influences and is probably one of the reasons I have persisted with surf life saving. He would often take women's board paddling groups at Anglesea and spent a lot of time assisting us with technique.

Tony Strahan (Torquay) has also been a great support. It was through him that I managed to get my own board at Torquay. It's also inspiring to see him still competing and succeeding at carnivals. He is without doubt one of the all-time great swimmers.

The club is also lucky to have the continued support of Peter Doak, another swimming legend. His summer swimming squad in Geelong is very popular and, despite my continued commitments in Melbourne, I've been able to participate in a few invaluable training sessions with him.

While I've enjoyed the challenge of the iron woman event and have been fortunate to win the Victorian title for the last three years, I am not sure whether I'll continue with this event now that it incorporates the ski as well.

Along with the surf race, my main event is the Board Rescue. My partner is board paddler Julia Cullity and I'm certain that I couldn't find anyone in Victoria who was a better standard than Julia. Together we've won the state title in 1997, 1998 and 1999 and we're looking forward to a strong up-coming season.

My most consistent rivals have been Stacey Gartrell (Wanda, NSW) and Karla Gilbert (Surfers Paradise, QLD). I really admire Karla's ability to pick a wave in almost any conditions. The surf can be so unpredictable. It can be flat where you're swimming and peaking just a few metres away, so someone else catches the vital wave. Each year at the Nationals I just haven't been able to catch a wave, so a win or place in an Australian title still eludes me.

But it's always good to have a goal and I love the excitement of surf swimming. Despite the less glorious moments— let's face it, not every day is warm, fine and sunny on our Victorian beaches and the water isn't exactly a nice twenty-seven degrees— I wouldn't be without the thrill of competition and the pleasure of lasting friendships that go hand-in-hand with surf life saving.

When I joined Torquay in 1988, we had very few women members and even fewer women's events. The 1988/89 season saw our first women's surf race in under 16s. Slowly more events were introduced. First there were the surf teams, then the board rescue, the wade relay race (a most enjoyable event) and the women's taplin.

Finally came the women's iron woman. I loved the iron woman and worked very hard at this event over my years of competitive surf life saving.

As a pool swimmer in Ballarat from the age of eight, I found surf swimming an easy transition. I seemed to have a natural instinct for direction and catching waves and was the leading woman surf swimmer in Victoria for six years.

I loved Torquay. The friendships, the team work, the laughs...even the patrols were good. At Torquay the girls did everything. There was never an attitude of 'you can't do that, you're a woman'. It just wasn't an issue.

As most of my major competitors were interstate, I needed to focus on developing a mental toughness that would give me an edge in interstate competitions. I had strong faith in my coaches and am indebted to Bryan Hayden and Peter Doak for their invaluable advice and continued encouragement.

I remember doing some crazy things— all in the name of developing that competitive edge. On one occasion we decided to paddle from Bells Beach to Torquay for a training session. The surf was quite big, and after a couple of minutes I'd lost sight of everyone in the group. They just disappeared under the swell. It was pretty eerie but I just kept on paddling to Torquay. I didn't sight another person the whole way.

My early years of surf life saving competition were dominated by the men. In the 1989 Victorian team trip to New Zealand there were only four women - Natalie Hood, Kerry and Cheryl White and me. In 1992, I was the only woman in the Wieland Shield team that went to the USA.

Being in the minority was never a problem. In that 1992 USA trip I had a ball. I was just one of the boys and they included me in everything. During that trip I beat the top American woman surf swimmer in the two mile Pier to Pier swim at Manhattan Beach, California. It was a great thrill.

I've had a pretty successful surf life saving career, with four Victorian iron woman titles and six wins in the Victorian Women's Surf Race. I've worked hard to reach my goals but I think surf life saving develops the discipline and focus necessary to reach elite levels.

But surf life saving isn't just about being an elite sportsperson. It's a wonderful pastime, especially for teenagers. Where else can you get that magic combination of beach life, camaraderie, beautiful, athletic bodies and fun times? While I've left the movement now to pursue my career as a television journalist, I look back fondly at my time in surf life saving.

I hope that many more young men and women take advantage of the skills, fitness and fun that surf life saving offers.

Bruce Morgan

I still remember my first time on Portsea back beach; the crisp, beautiful air, the angry roar of waves, the sizzle of the swell. That was freedom.

I was studying architecture at Melbourne University and heavily involved in the university swimming team when decided to give surf life saving a go. I joined Portsea in the spring of 1958.

Everyone was keen to be involved in surf activities at Portsea— it wasn't just a social club. Of course, there were no rubber ducks in the 1950s and 1960s and there were many dangerous beaches. We'd be called to rescues all over the Mornington Peninsula.

Portsea was a particularly dangerous beach and not suited to board riding. We'd be pulling people in constantly, no matter how much we encouraged swimming between the flags.

The club's good mix of social and competitive aspects attracted young people. It was a great way to get them involved and teach them how to handle themselves in the surf. Despite of the fun side, you have to admit that many people are alive today because of surf life saving.

I enjoyed the surf and belt events but disliked the military nature of R&R. We tended to shun those more historical carnival events. When it came to March Past we always used to hide so we didn't have to do it. I remember one occasion where we had piled into someone's Volkswagen to hide and one of our cigarettes started a small grass fire...not a exactly a smart way to avoid attention.

At Portsea we never excelled at R&R. It was impossible to get six top swimmers into a team and we were just too busy with patrols and rescues to dedicate too much time to R&R training. We left that to strong R&R clubs like Point Lonsdale and Torquay.

As well as pool training, I trained under Stan Nicholes at Sedgeman's Gym in Little Collins Street. You couldn't just rely on swimming technique in the surf and I did a lot of weights to build up my legs. You had to focus on an all-over strength and fitness to deal with the ever-changing surf conditions.

Running ability also played a big part in many surf races and I dreaded the long, shallow beaches that favoured the strong sprinters. Bill Knott from Anglesea was an excellent sprinter and he'd leave us for dead in the shallows. We hated that.

Tactics were also a serious part of the surf races and we'd study the race just like a golfer studies the course. We'd sit up in the dunes watching the surf and deliberating the best path to swim. It was all part of using the surf to your best advantage.

(Bruce's achievements include second in the Victorian Senior Belt in 1962 and third in the Victorian Senior Belt in 1963. He was a member of the interstate team in 1961, 1962, 1963 and 1966 and won John Marshall Memorial Surf Race in 1962 and 1963.)

Harrow Morgan

I had been a member of Williamstown Royal Life Saving Club for some time and was attracted to Point Lonsdale, which was well known for its swimming and R&R strength.

In the 1950s, Point Lonsdale had a reciprocal arrangement with Williamstown that helped attract a number of good, young swimmers the calibre of Ken Knox, Bob MacKinder and John Olsen. I think it was a combination of our royal drill experience and our sheer determination to excel that made us quite a force in during the 1950s.

Point Lonsdale and Torquay R&R teams literally dominated the competition in the 1950s with the Point Lonsdale A Team winning the state title seven times between 1949 and 1961.

A key to our R&R teams was our coaches, Bill Tyrell, Jack Meehan and Alan Drydle. Jack, Bill and Allan weren't competitors, but as coaches they could observe all of those subtle things that go into the precision of R&R.

Lonsdale was so strong in the R&R that it entered an A and B team in most carnivals. The Senior R&R A team was a powerhouse of swimmers and were unbeatable if each member drew their strongest position. With Bob (MacKinder) as the patient, Laurie (Gunn) on reel or resuscitation, Maurie (Lovell) in the drill and me with the belt we were virtually unbeatable.

One of the big attractions of the Point Lonsdale club, particularly for the younger members, was its accommodation arrangement with Toc H. For just six shillings a day, we would have a bed and a roof over our heads. Toc H was a real drawcard for us. We felt very accepted by the locals and our parents felt more comfortable with us sleeping at Toc H, rather than camping down on the beach.

Jack Meehan and Bill Tyrell ran a tight ship at Toc H, which was strictly a 'no girl zone.' Anyone caught overstepping the mark would not be allowed back the following weekend. It made sure we 'toed the line' — most of the time.

I believe a good knowledge of surf conditions was essential to success in the surf. Belt swimmers in particular needed strong physiques and a good lung capacity. You can have all the technique in the world but you still needed to know the beach, know the shallows and judge when it was better to swim or wade. You also needed to be a gutsy swimmer.

My inexperience in the surf cost me first place in the Junior Belt Race in the 1950 Australian Championships at Coolangatta. While I was thrilled to win bronze, a little more experience would have given me the winning edge. I was in front as we headed in but I was too far down the beach. The more experienced swimmers made sure they didn't swim so wide.

In the early days there were only five or six clubs competing at carnivals and you got to know everyone pretty well. It was things like our bun fights —where the host club would supply a keg and some tucker for all competitors at the end of the carnival— that helped make the Movement very strong and drew together a good blend of social and competitive activities. They're days I'll never forget.

John Olsen

I joined Point Lonsdale in 1957, part of the natural progression of swimmers from the Olympic Swimming Club.

John Gibson was responsible for recruiting a lot of strong young swimmers from Olympic in the late 1950s. As 15 and 16 year olds, John drove us down to Lonsdale in the hope that we'd join. The surf was an instant hit.

I was an accomplished pool swimmer and adapted easily to the surf. At my first carnival at Lorne in 1958, I won both the Junior and Senior Surf Race. I was a strong swimmer and my long legs were always an advantage in the shallows. Often I'd still be striding out over waves when others were already swimming.

I was selected in the State Team in 1958, but declined the offer because of commitments at Melbourne University. There was no way I was going to miss out the following year and I joined the Victorian team on the trip to Mooloolaba in 1959.

It was a long train trip to Queensland but it was these trips that helped us get to know our fellow team mates very well. On our stop-over at Sydney, we had time for a quick swim at Maroubra Beach and got a first hand look how NSW life savers lived it up at the bar in Tamarama Surf Club.

I wasn't long before I'd been recruited into the Point Lonsdale R&R team. R&R was such a funny event - if you so much as blinked or looked sideways, points would be deducted. All these little things seemed to have nothing to do with actually saving lives but had to be included as part of the military drill.

Despite the sometime tedious R&R drills, and the level of contortion I had to achieve to bend my long legs low enough to lift the reel, R&R training provided a solid skill base for rescues. I remember some years after I had left life saving, I had to pull a woman out of the surf and my R&R training came back like it was only yesterday.

In 1963, I took up a coaching position with Lilydale Swimming Club. This unfortunately excluded me from surf competition on the grounds that I was now a professional. I knew that Victorian life saving had always maintained strict protocols regarding amateur and professional status but I never realised just how rigidly these were applied until I took up coaching.

I received only a token amount for my coaching but at that time surfers couldn't even receive payment to clean pools. If you received any money as a result of swimming-related activities (pool or surf), you were deemed a professional and could not compete at surf carnivals.

I spent a lot of time negotiating my eligibility to compete and eventually got so frustrated I quit the Movement. It was a crazy situation where I could compete as a professional in events that used surf life saving equipment, like R&R or the Belt Race, but I was excluded from the surf swimming events. It just got too frustrating in the end.

By 1966, the professional ruling became less rigid and I rejoined the Movement, this time as a member of Torquay. Torquay had become a strong swimming club and I was approached by some club members who wanted to get a strong R&R team together.

I continued coaching and sent many of my best junior swimmers down to Torquay. I believe surfing gave my swimmers a well-earned break from the pool and I encouraged them to enjoy both the social and competitive sides of surf life. Surf life saving was often the only way to keep a lot of my good seniors in swimming. If a swimmer was over 17 it was very difficult to keep them in training. Surf offered a them a good mix of fun, fitness and skill.

(John was club champion from 1960 to 1962, ran second in the 1962 Victorian Senior Surf Race title, represented Victoria in the Australian Championships in 1959, 1961 and 1962 and won the John Marshall Memorial Surf Race in 1959 and 1961.)

Michael Phelan

I came to surf life saving because I was bored with competitive swimming. A few of us in my school swimming team joined and we were instantly attracted to the freedom gained away from a strict training program and the endless laps of the pool. But it was always the surf that kept us coming back. We lived for it.

I joined Portsea in 1961, the first of coach Bill Atkinson's 'half-serious' pool swimmers to go to the surf. And so began the weekend vigil to Victoria's east and west coast beaches. Even without a car, transport was never a problem. There was always someone going down and if not, you'd get there any way you could - bus, train, hitchhiking— one day it took me thirty lifts just to go from Melbourne to Portsea.

I participated in the surf, belt and R&R events, taking full advantage of my years of swimming training and high level of fitness. We didn't do a lot a specific training in those days. I treated surf life saving as an outlet and focused primarily on enjoyment. But because I spent so much time surfing, I kept naturally fit and had a lot of strength in my arms and upper body from paddling. I think that's what helped me in the belt events.

One of the major challenges for swimmers in any belt or R&R event is the line. It's easy to tangle in feet or snag on submerged rocks and drags you constantly as it pulls back and forth in the surf. I spent hours perfecting a special blend of wax and a technique for preparing and coating the lines which was used extensively by Portsea (and other clubs) in the 1960s.

Lines needed special preparation. First I would stretch the line from end to end, often using a car to get the line as taut as possible. Then, using a bicycle wheel rim fastened to a tree or ladder, I passed through a bucket of molten wax, around the wheel-guide and, when dried, back onto the reel. It was a complex process to stretch about 400 yards worth of line. The aim was to keep the line floating a foot or two off bottom during the swim. That way it wasn't so susceptible to churning around in the water.

We'd prepare a line just before a competition and it would last about a month. The coated line was best for most conditions. The lighter lines really only worked when the sea was flat. At the 1958 Australian Championships at Scarborough, for example, it was so dead flat we decided to use the coralline line.

Some clubs thought our line technique was just a lot of hot air but other clubs, including some from interstate, would get their lines prepared at Portsea. One year at Ocean Grove we caused a stir when we arrived with a green line — we'd just mixed some green food dye with the wax for a bit of a laugh. Some teams were quite perplexed by our secret weapon. Unfortunately the laugh back-fired when our team was ordered to reel out the line for official measuring.

I think I enjoyed the interstate trips the most. We'd all get up to a bit of no good in those days. There were a lot of larrikins but you've got to put it all in context. These were the days before women joined the Movement and we treated it like one big boys club. It was our chance to be a bit raucous.

It seemed the further away from home we went, the more carefree we became. At the end of the day, it was the easy mix of fun, competition and surf that kept its appeal. Where else can you spend the morning surfing before you nip across for an afternoon of serious competition?

(At his first Victorian Championship at Ocean Grove in 1962, Michael won both the junior belt and surf titles. Further achievements include winning the Victorian Senior Belt title in 1965 (and third in 1963). Michael was also a member of interstate teams in 1963 and 1965.)

In 1967 Geoff Waters, the Point Leo Club Captain, approached me during a training session at the Olympic Pool and invited me join the club. I joined, completed my bronze, swam in the state titles and went on to Adelaide for the Nationals all in my first season of 1967/68.

Point Leo was a major club for swimmers, wirh a great reputation for excellence in R&R and swimming. A number of guys from the Olympic swimming club joined along with me and we would spend every possible weekend at the surf club.

We stayed in makeshift bunkhouses built on government land on the Point Leo foreshore and each one had its own name: Ponderosa, the Exclusives, the Town Hall. There was even one bunkhouse we dubbed Taj Mahal that far outclassed our little shacks. I seem to recall that someone's builder-father designed and built it.

I loved the unity and strong mateship of Point Leo. No matter what their specialisation, club members were always willing to lend a hand. Swimmers would help the boaties or muck in if extras were needed for a belt crew. It was a real team spirit that I missed a lot when I moved to South Australia.

Point Leo had some strong surf and belt swimmers and we were very serious about our R&R. We'd spend hours in the car on the way to carnivals studying the blocks for the R&R ballot. We thought that we could master selecting our positions just by feeling the numbers stamped on the blocks!

Geoff Waters coached the junior R&R team and was an inspiration to me both on and off the beach. Geoff was a disciplined coach and great motivator.

He also kept me on the straight and narrow during my wilder years and was, in many ways, quite a father figure.

One of my fondest memories was the day I won the John Marshall Memorial Surf Race in 1968. John was one of Point Leo's founding members and an inspiration to us all. Since the trophy event was introduced in 1958 it had eluded Point Leo swimmers. To break the drought in 1968 was one of my greatest thrills. John was a legendary swimmer and had meant so much to many of us in surf life saving.

I still have some vivid memories— blustery days at Portsea where you couldn't even see the buoys from the beach, the carnival at Ocean Grove where we had to endure a severe hail storm before the start of the R&R event, and surf races in mid-winter where the cold was so unbearable, we would swim with our heads out of the water.

Despite sometimes difficult conditions, nothing ever really frazzled us. The overriding factor was always the great camaraderie and the strong competitive spirit that made us believe we could achieve anything.

After retiring from competition, I continued as a nippers' swimming coach at club and state level in South Australia. I think it's important to ensure that our nippers remain motivated, have solid surf skills and water confidence and gain a taste of the rewards of being part of a club.

With kids I try to back off on the 'win at all costs' mentality, especially when coaching at club level. At the end of the day, if the kids feel like they're contributing and enjoy being around the club then, with any luck, they'll be the one's holding their clubs together in years to come.

I guess you could say I grew up with lifesaving. My dad, Garry, was life saving since he was 16 and I started as a nipper when I was six years old. My family camped down at Point Leo every summer, so nippers was a fun way to pass the days on the beach.

When I started, there were only twelve nippers at Point Leo and only two girls. Now nippers is the biggest section of membership, with over a hundred members.

I got my bronze at the end of 1995. I must admit, I was quite nervous about the examination. Our supervisor was always telling us that everything had to be perfect to pass and I dreaded examination day. Actually, it was a bit easier than we'd expected and the whole squad passed without a hitch.

I've never felt I've had to prove myself as a woman in surf lifesaving. I've always had a strong pool swimming background and I've virtually grown up on the beach, so I've had a lot of confidence in my ability.

The size of the surf or difficult conditions have never worried me; I'm always keen to have a go. When I was younger, however, I never swam with my head in the water. It wasn't until I tried wearing goggles, when I was about 13, that I actually felt comfortable with my head in the water. I still hate looking at the bottom when I'm swimming. All those rocks and seaweed make me squirm.

My first carnival in really big surf was at Freshwater, NSW, in 1996. The waves were bigger than anything I'd ever seen, but I was keen to give it a go. Unfortunately, lack of experience landed me a broken nose on the day. I fell off my board as a wave was breaking and the force of the wave pushed the board into my face. It was a good lesson in surf craft, but hopefully one I don't have to repeat.

In the last two or three years, Point Leo has come alive with strong swimmers. I've encouraged some of my swimming squad to join and Hayden, my brother, has recruited his friends as well. While a lot of the pool swimmers come with strong swimming backgrounds and would beat me easily in a pool, I often have an edge in the surf. I think that my experience and familiarity with surf is definitely an advantage.

I alway prefer surf carnivals to pool carnivals. At the end of the day anyone can come in a winner in the surf. There's so many possible outcomes and, while skill plays a strong part, often luck plays a major role. I love the unpredictability, although it's always frustrating when luck doesn't quite come your way.

I try not to idolise anyone famous, but I do admire many of our top life savers. One of my major influences has been my dad. He still competes at Masters level and I look at him as a kind of mentor. Even in the non-swimming areas, he's always encouraged me and sought out advice and information to pass onto me.

Caroline McGill (nee Bates), who came down from Queensland to join Point Leo about three years ago, has also been a tremendous friend and mentor. Caroline is my board rescue partner and, with her husband Cameron, has helped a lot to develop my technique.

I wouldn't say I excelled in either swimming or paddling but I'm good in both, which makes me a strong iron woman competitor. In 1997, I won the Victorian Iron Woman championship and, on that basis, was selected in the interstate team to Adelaide. I've been in the Victorian team in 1998 and 1999. This year was my first year as a senior and I was very pleased with my effort at the state championships.

I'm always drawn to surf life saving, it's been a part of my life for so such a long time. Most important are the friendships I've made over the years. My best friend is Anne McKenna from Jan Juc. Anne, along with Naantali Marshall, is one of my main rivals but our friendship is always an over riding factor. That, along with the thrill of big surf, will always keep me coming back. I guess it's in my blood.

Tony Strahan

I joined Torquay in 1962 although I didn't seriously focus on surf life saving until the 1964/65 season.

Peter Doak and I trained at Geelong's Eastern Beach baths under the watchful eye of coach Herb Jeffrey. In the 1960s, the baths were the only pool in Geelong. We trained from October to April and, as you could imagine, the water was freezing all year round.

Being on the Corio Bay, the water conditions in the baths were much more akin to surf swimming than any still water pool. The changing tides altered the level of the dive into the pool, the water was sometimes calm, sometimes choppy, there were jellyfish to contend with and, on a windy day, we would alternately swim against and then with the swell.

It certainly made training more interesting. We got used to the cold pretty quickly. During winter I would hitch-hike to Melbourne once a week to train there just to experience the warmer water and static conditions of a competition pool.

Peter and I went to school together and had trained together in the pool daily since we were 15. That gave us the advantage (or disadvantage) of knowing each other's swimming and training habits almost as well as we knew our own.

Our friendship has continued throughout our swimming careers in both pool and surf. If we were competing against each other, we'd both switch to a competitive frame of mind as soon as we stepped up to the start, but this never got in the way of friendship.

I began to focus on surf competition in 1965 and won a place on the Victorian team at the Australian Championships at Scarborough, Western Australia. In those days, teams would travel interstate by train, so we would spend days and nights together. It really helped the team spirit. On the Scarborough trip, they even arranged for the team to have a complete carriage so we could hold a party to celebrate Peter's 21st birthday.

I wouldn't know what it was like to be without swimming. After seniors I became involved in Masters and was a Level 2 & 3 Official from 1994 to 1998. The great joy of Masters competition is remaining in contact with many of those who have been part of the Movement for 30 years or more. Bruce Morgan, Bill Scott and Bryan Hayden are just some of those stalwarts that come to mind.

Over the years I've noticed a transition in the training habits and focus of swimmers. On the weekends, we would dedicate a couple of hours each day to training in the surf. We'd do wading, practice catching waves in the shallows, run continuous sprints in the shallows and do a lot of beach running. Now I think there is more focus on pool training and swimmers just use the surf for additional competition experience.

I think goal setting is a high priority and a great motivator.

It's important to set challenges and then work hard to achieve them. Surf swimming, in particular, has always been a great outlet for me. When you work hard five or six days of the week its good to know that you have a chance to hit the beach with a great bunch of people on the weekend. That's what keeps me going.

(A Victorian team member in 1965, 1966, 1972, 1980 and 1987, Tony captained the team to New Zealand in 1980 and the USA in 1987. He has continued his swimming prowess through to Masters level winning the Australian Masters Surf Race in 1989, 1993, and 1994. In 1998 Tony was the World Masters Swimming Champion in the 50m freestyle.)

I started surf life-saving as a nipper at Kempsey-Crescent Head Surf Life Saving Club, NSW, at the age of five. I couldn't have asked for a better induction into life saving. Nippers balanced out fun, healthy competition and friendly camaraderie with the more serious side of surf rescue and I felt at home in this environment.

At my first carnival, aged eleven, I joined the Junior Surf Race (U/18) by invitation and, to the surprise of those present, caught a wave from the middle of the field to come home a winner. Ironically, a similar invitation was not so forthcoming in future years!

As a competitor and coach, I have always tried to avoid the 'win, win, win' attitude that can sour many a budding swimmer's career. While I encourage my juniors to focus on their individual goals, enjoyment is a key factor at this level, closely followed by strong surf skills and a commitment to the Movement.

I joined Lorne Surf Life Saving Club in 1964 and was fortunate to receive help and support from some of Victoria's finest surf life savers including Robbie Elmore, Mac Greening, Howard Hughes and, the best R&R coach of all, Don Heathcote.

My first surf carnival as a junior was at Jan Juc in 1965. The surf was enormous, 12 or 15 feet, and I picked up a wave right at the buoy and rode it all the way in. Actually, I'm not sure if I rode it or it rode me, but it was a magnificent wave.

Coming to Lorne, I didn't have a lot of big wave experience, but was quickly initiated by my club mates Robbie and Mac. I remember going around to Wye River one Sunday when a big southerly swell was running and Robbie and Mac took me out and left me there until I got up the courage to catch a wave in. I'm sure I spent hours in the water, but it was the best way to learn.

While competition and training dominated my swimming career both in the pool (my primary focus initially) and in the surf, I have always maintained a strong commitment to my role as a surf life saver. A lot of elite swimmers had little time or interest in patrols and club commitments. At Lorne if we didn't turn up for patrol we didn't compete. In life saving, there's a responsibility when you join that supersedes the competition, and I took that responsibility very seriously.

As coach of the Queensland State Nippers Team for ten years from 1983 I also encouraged this same commitment. The nippers Movement is all about teaching young people skills as life savers. Of course there was a competitive edge— my nippers ran consistently first and second at every year of interstate competition— but we don't want to see these up-and-coming youngsters burnt out by the time they reach junior and senior levels.

I love the team spirit, skill and thrill of surf activities. That's the spirit of surf life saving and I am proud to have such a long and fulfilling association with this, the greatest Movement of all.

(While Graham's fine list of pool swimming achievements include an Olympic Silver Medal in 1972 and three Gold Medals at the 1970 Commonwealth Games, his equivalent surf achievements are equally remarkable. Graham was the Australian Open Surf Race Champion 1969, 1970, 1972, and 1973, Open Surf Belt Champion 1970 and part of the Australian R&R Premiership Teams in 1973-75.)

Rob Woodhouse

We spent most of our school holidays at the family holiday house in Sorrento, which provided easy access to Point Leo. For me, surf life saving was a great break from the rigours of pool training, but offered enough competitive edge to keep me interested.

My pool coach Julie Dyring (nee McDonald) encouraged all of us to participate in the surf. She saw surf as a great alternative to our pool training. Although sometimes I might have been a bit washed out for Monday morning training, a weekend of surf activities kept up my fitness and provided an important mental and social relief from the constancy the pool.

Point Leo had a good reputation as a swimmers club and I joined in 1979 when I was 14. I immediately warmed to Point Leo's friendly, encouraging atmosphere and soon struck up a friendship with a young board and ski paddler, Clayton McDonald. Clayton was one of the first people I met at the club and we've been good mates ever since. We've been in teams together at club, state and national levels. It's just one of those friendships that has kept on and on.

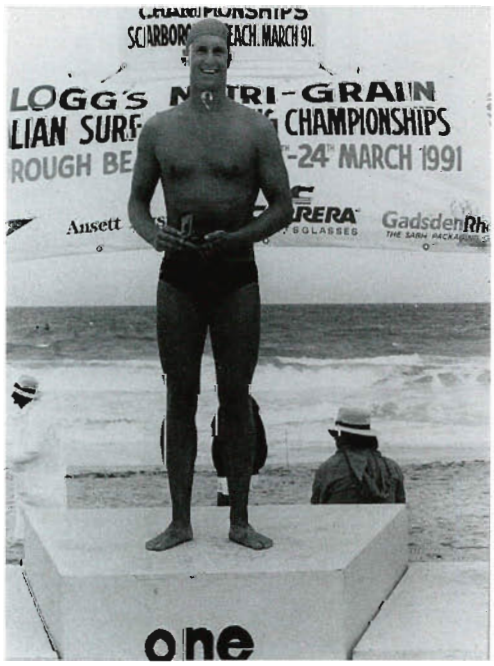

I focused on the surf swimming events, and won the Victorian Open Surf Race five times in 1987, 1989, 1993, 1994 and 1995. I'm particularly proud of my consecutive wins in the early 1990s. This was actually a time in my career where I was a bit unfit and overweight. Given my overall fitness, I was thrilled to achieve what I did over the three years, although, I suspect that the favourable surf conditions may have helped me out a bit as well.

Often the luck of a big wave can make the difference between a win and a place. I've had my fair share of good waves, for sure. There were also times when I was at peak fitness and really should have pulled off a big win but was not so lucky with the conditions. But these factors are part of the whole surf swimming attraction and what makes it so different to the pool.

I always enjoyed our Wieland Shield carnivals. I captained the Victorian Team in 1994 - the year we reclaimed the cup from the Americans. There was a great camaraderie between us and the Americans. I really looked forward to every Wieland Cup . It was very rewarding both competitively and socially.

The two mile pier-to-pier swim was a traditional post-carnival event at Manhattan Beach, California. It was a chance for all of us to have a swim without the usual pressure of competition. I remember the 1992 swim well. We'd been partying quite hard the night before I was nursing a pretty big hangover. Clayton was my guide for the swim and we'd worked out this neat plan where Clayton would wear an orange vest to stand out among the paddlers.

Some plan! I rounded the pier and came face-to-face with a sea of orange vests. Somehow, despite our groggy heads, Clayton and I found each other and, between the two of us, I actually managed to pull off a win. Clayton was also entered as a swimmer, so he just left his malibu and ran up the pier to the finish. I think he was recorded as officially sixth!

This mix of fun times and competition kept me involved in surf life saving. I think the balance really helped me in the pool. The mental refreshment of a weekend on the beach has no equal. I owe it to my club for their support, friendship and encouragement. Even though I'm living in Sydney now, I'm still loyal to Point Leo and will be for a long time to come.

Andy Wright

I've always loved those Portsea northerlies and the big surf, so the chance to join a strong team of junior swimmers at the Portsea SLSC was too good to refuse. I joined Portsea in the Olympic year, 1956, when I was fifteen.

There were only about a dozen of us, but we'd hit the water rain, hail or shine and surf all year round. The water was freezing, but it never mattered.

We soon formed a strong junior R&R team and began to put Portsea on the map in the blue ribbon R&R event. We'd drill for hours and hours on St Kilda Beach. Later, in seniors, we had an excellent R&R team with swimmers the calibre of Michael Phelan, Des Glynn and Bruce Morgan.

In 1960, Portsea won the BP Australia Surf Boat at an Ocean Grove carnival, the result of a memorable swim by Terry Smith. It all hinged on the surf team race and Portsea needed to come in strong if we had any hope of winning the boat. Michael, Bruce, Terry and I made up the surf team. Terry wasn't renowned for his strength as a swimmer and he was a heavy smoker, so we didn't like our chances. But then, out of nowhere, Terry caught his miraculous wave and came in about eighth in the race. It was enough to win us the boat.

My main focus was belt swimming. Along with Bruce Morgan and Michael Phelan, we had a strong contingency of belt swimmers at Portsea. I think our strength in the belt was because it was an integral part of rescues. I've lost count of how many people I pulled out of the water during my time at Portsea. And it wasn't just single people, it was often groups. I think that helped make us into good belt swimmers.

You couldn't rely on catching a big wave with belt swimming, it was all sheer strength. We took our belt training very seriously and often swam with a tyre to build up strength. And then, of course, there was the ritual waxing of the line. We had our own bee's wax mixture to coat the line so that it would float about six or eight inches above the bottom and wouldn't get dragged by the current as much. Michael Phelan was an expert at preparing the line.

I guess I've had my fair share of memorable swims but I still remember the best wave I ever caught during our Aussie team tour of the USA in the 1960s. Long Island wasn't known for its big surf but we were getting the effects of a cyclone in Florida. I caught a huge wave in the surf race — it took me all the way into shore, about 300 feet (90 metres) in all, just a beauty.

I was high and dry on the beach when the rest of the race came in to finish.

I'll never forget my time at Portsea — they were great years. I remember shooting rabbits in the scrub on the way down to the club and cooking them on the beach. I remember hours of laughs at our local haunt, the Nepean Hotel. And I remember the 'bad old days' when the army would let us through the quarantine area to catch the best surf around Point Nepean. They're great memories and I'm sure if we could get together over a few drinks there'd be some fabulous stories to tell.

(Andy's string of wins in surf competition include a bronze in the 1961 Australian Open Belt Race, winner of the Victorian Senior Belt Title in 1961 and 1962 and second in the Senior Belt in 1963. He was in the interstate team from 1961 to 1963.)

Belt Racing

It can be said that there is no greater satisfaction than a rescue effected by a belt swimmer in strong surf.

Alas, those feats have been replaced by the utilisation of the inshore rescue boat (IRB), thereby relegating the old reel and line to a collector's item, and rendering obsolete the age old six man rescue drill as instructed for over 40 years. The reel and line was a permanent fixture at many beaches. At Lorne there were three permanent reel houses located at intervals along the beach. A reel and reel-house was also located at Moggs Creek (near Fairhaven) where no club existed, provided by a grateful donor for rescue service at that location. A reel is still available and used by Point Lonsdale when the IRB requires rescuing before it drifts onto Glaneuse reef.

Fortunately there is a following amongst strong swimmers to continue belt races at surf carnivals. The race is conducted along age-old lines using the same linesmen and reel man. Many beltmen had their own preference for line types relevant to the size and side sweep of the surf and bottom profile with regard to underwater rocks, choosing between cotton, waxed cotton and terylene lines.

Traditionally the carnival program commenced with a heat of the senior belt so that surf conditions could be gauged before starting the junior events. The results were relayed to the beach by the judges-in-boat who carried a set of coloured flags to match the buoys. In the case of junior competitors, only the beltman and first line were required to be of the required age level. Quite often the belt swimmers also competed in the R&R. Depending on the draw, they often swam in a belt heat, the R&R, and the belt final. Any surplus energy left could then be expended in the open surf race.

From the time competition was first introduced within surf life saving, the belt swim has been one of the most important and prestigious event for obvious reasons. Right from 1908 when the use of the reel line and belt was written into the Surf Life Saving Training Handbook as the accepted main form of rescue, the beltman was the most important part of the beach patrol.

In competition there have been some fantastic swimmers who have 'donned the belt' and in Victoria we have had our share of greats who, in the early days, include Geoff Emerson, Brian Whiting and Mick O'Donnell (Torquay), Harrow Morgan and Des Webb (Point Lonsdale), John 'Ned' Moray, Jim Fountain and Henry Love (Lorne), Bill Knott (Anglesea), Peter O'Rorke (Warrnambool), John Marshall (Pt.Leo), Peter Phelan, Andy Wright and Bruce Morgan (Portsea). These were followed by a number of great swimmers including Graham White and John Fox (Lorne), Stuart Fox (Anglesea), Graham Bennett, Hamish and Angus Cameron, David and Simon Strahan (Torquay), John Van Ooi (Jan Juc) and Cameron Dixon (Half Moon Bay), etc. However it is with rescue that there are any number of memorable and heroic occasions in which the ability of the beltman has been the major contribution to the saving of a life.

The use of the reel line and belt finished in 1989 after 82 years when it was replaced with the use of the rescue tube. This new approach originally developed by Major Bond of Bondi way back in 1908 was further refined by the American Lifeguard organisation of Orange County in California during the 1980s.

This finally meant that the old idea of hanging onto the end of the line so as to ensure neither rescuer or patient could drift away was no longer seen as necessary. It also meant that the ever present risk of the beltman drowning through being dragged under due to kelp or rock shelves was gone, that the swim out was easier and quicker, plus the options of getting his or herself plus the patient back to safety were greater.

From olden days and the use of the lifeline fired out to the shipwrecks particularly along the Victorian coastline where people were hauled from the foundered ship to a high point on shore by way of a Boatswain's seat, it could be said that this lifeline mentality was responsible for the development concept of the reel line and belt.

This has finally gone, however it is fitting that the belt race is maintained by way of tradition in the life saving competition program. There will be many stories told for many years to come about the dramas and feats of those heroes of the surf, the beltmen.

Jim Fountain, Lorne SLSC

From his early days Jim was at home in the sea. He grew up in Edithvale on the bay and was a junior competitor for the Edithvale Royal Life Saving Club during which time he won more than his fair share of swim wade events and a Victorian Championship. After his family moved to Sandringham, he joined Sandringham Royal Life Saving Club and competed successfully winning junior championship events.

At school he won his age freestyle events in the Associated Grammar School Sports while at Mentone Grammar and then the Open 150 metre event for Brighton Grammar in 1952 in the Combined Schools Association Swimming Sports.

However, it didn't take long to make the surfing scene and in 1952 Jim joined Lorne Surf Life Saving Club as one of the first four Melbourne members, one of those being well known surfing identity Bruce Tayler. In his first State Championship that year, Jim won the Open Surf Race from well-respected swimmers Whiting, Bennett and Allen, and was second in the Belt Race. Jim threw himself into the surf life saving scene from then on and as the Club's Assistant Chief Instructor for the Melbourne-based membership, coached a large number of Bronze teams building up the Club's Melbourne membership. Some of these were known later swimmers for the Club such as Bob Lease, Gordon (The Seal) Ferguson, Rob Elmore and Mac Greening. Jim gained his Instructor's Certificate in 1954 with the number V6.

Between 1952 and his trip to the USA on a swimming scholarship in late 1958, Jim won three more open surf race championships and two open belt race events. He represented his state in the Australian championships every year in that period and recalls some frighteningly large waves at several of those championships, the most notable being at Manly where several surf boats were totally wrecked by the huge seas. In those days the state's swim competitors were disadvantaged in big seas because most had learned their surfing skills from limited weekend opportunities whereas the Sydney and Queensland swimmers grew up in the surf. Jim's best overall year in the surf was in 1956 when, after winning the State Open Belt Championship, he then won the Australian Interstate Belt Race at the Olympic Surf Titles at Torquay. That year he also won the prestigious 3-Mile Yarra Swim.

Jim went to the USA in late 1958 on a swimming scholarship to the University of Southern Illinois and competed in the US collegiate competition each year until his graduation with a B.Sc in 1961. He competed mainly in 200 and 400 metre events and won more than his share of races. His proudest moment was when the University became the US champion for the Small Colleges Association and Jim swam 19 minutes 11 seconds for the 1500 freestyle at his first and last serious attempt at that event. It was a strong time for 1960.

While in the US, during the summer of 1961, Jim gained a three-month job as a lifeguard at the beautiful Island Beach State Park, N.J. The group, at the end of the summer, competed in the Shore Lifeguard Tourney where Jim won two events at the meeting. After that Jim went to study at Syracuse University, NY where he obtained a Master of Business Administration Degree in 1963.

Back to Melbourne in June 1963 Jim was looking forward to rejoining his beloved club, Lorne but was transferred promptly to work in Sydney. He joined Palm Beach Surf Life Saving Club and won a number of surf and belt races at various carnivals for his new club. In 1965 Jim was working for his company in Melbourne for several months and was invited to swim for Lorne in the Victorian Championships in Feb 1965. He joined with Ted Gallagher, Mac Greening and Rob Elmore to win the State Event, which Jim says was one of his greatest thrills. They travelled with the State team to W.A. and were confident but finished out of a place.

That event was basically the end of his truly competitive swimming and it was not until the early 1990s that Jim got back into swimming by competing in the Masters both in the pool and the surf. He won two Queensland State events but was disqualified on the grounds of not having done any surf patrols immediately before the championships. He did win several Queensland masters titles in the pool and several well-known long distance surf swims. Today, Jim enjoys working out at the gym and doing some long swims in the pool for general fitness. He is still working full time and vows he will get back into the masters events when there is more time for training at a civilised time, eg. 10.00 a.m. in the morning while the sun is shining.

Jim has some fond memories of the early days of the surf clubs in Victoria when competition successes did not seem to count for everything. The early clubs, Torquay and Point Lonsdale were very strong but had some very playful members. Laughs abounded, eg. the classic pranks of Yateman and Beck and the variety of practical jokes played on all and sundry. Jim recalls with delight the prank played by Torquay on Lorne in the mid 1950's. Lorne was labelled Lake Lorne (I wonder why?) and at one carnival at Lorne, the large crowd watching the March Past was overcome with the appearance of a new club marching with its unusual banner, etc. which read 'Lorne Social and Yachting Club'.

This point was even more strongly brought home when a yacht was seen sailing out in the surf not far from the buoys. Torquay again rolled out a not to be forgotten practical joke when one or several of its members placed rotten egg gas in the library hall in Lorne. This was doubling up as a bunkhouse for visiting club members and the location where the presentations were made after the carnival. You can be sure the presentations were not made and many visitors had to burn their blankets, sleeping bags and clothes because the smell just would not go out of the fabric.

The trad-jazz band playing after the carnivals accompanied by the traditional kegs is Jim's fondest recollection of those days, when after a quite competitive carnival, all competitors would adjourn to the clubhouse or similar venue for a presentation ceremony which would be dominated by the great jazz sounds of gifted performers led by Owen Yateman. Members of all the clubs joined in these sessions and the spirit of camaraderie this generated was unbelievable. These early days of the surf movement we can be sure are much treasured by all of those lucky enough to have been there.

Stuart Fox, Anglesea SLSC

Stuart Fox joined as a nipper, was a member of Victoria's first Junior Team 1982/83, competed for his Club, Anglesea and for Victoria from 1983-1993 with an incredible success over a range of events, iron man being one of them. Stuart was an exceptional swimmer, strong and very capable in surf. He gained his Bronze in 1985.

He grew up with the benefit of having a father who was a past Olympian (who gained his Bronze in 1987) in the Anglesea Club and was often handler for Stuart when competing in the iron man events. The whole family spent a lot of time on the beach encouraging Stuart in all his events, the very best way to be introduced to dealing with the surf.

In recent years Stuart has assisted the Anglesea Club with its youth development programme.

Whilst Stuart stood out as an iron man, his achievements as a belt swimmer include two Australian Championship gold medals and two bronze medals.

Stuart's sporting highlights include 70 Victorian surf championships including six iron man and eight belt race titles; two Australian belt race championships and one junior belt title; 265 Victorian surf carnival pennants with 40 interstate and international race wins; 22 state canoeing titles; 38 Country swimming championships. He has represented Victoria in teams on 28 occasions. From six starts in the Pier to Pub swim classic he has been placed 6 times with 3 wins.

In the 2000/01 season Stuart was awarded an Australian Sports Federation award for his services to surf lifesaving.

Victoria's R&R
(Rescue & Resuscitation)

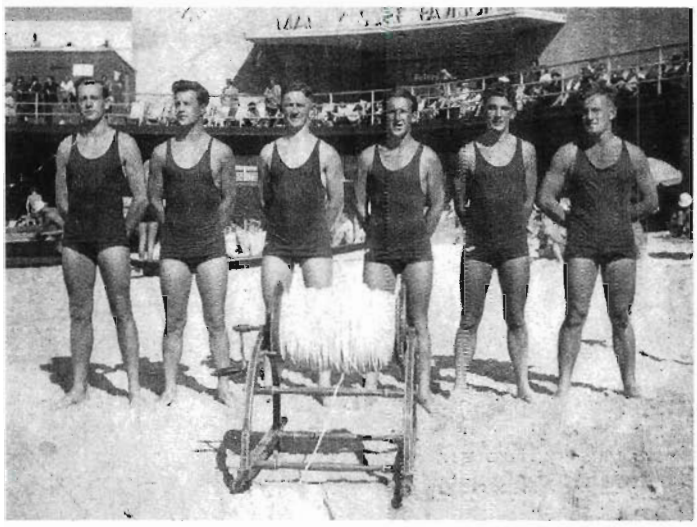

Contributed by Ted Gallagher

The Rescue and Resuscitation (R&R) event is the very essence of surf lifesaving. It is the ultimate demonstration of technique, co-ordination and physical fitness which epitomises the Surf Life Saving Movement's main reason for being, namely saving lives. Consequently it is not surprising that the open six man Rescue and resuscitation event is the only event at each year's Australian Championships which decides the Association Premiership.

The Association Premiership has been dominated by New South Wales and Queensland since Bondi first won it in 1915. In fact the Premiership has only been outside of these two states on five occasions.

Competing in Rescue and Resuscitation

R&R is a simulated rescue and resuscitation performed by a team of six. One member acts as the patient and swims to a designated buoy two hundred metres from shore. Another member acts as beltman, towing a waxed cotton line out to the patient. The swimming time of each is recorded and points are deducted from each team's score for every second they finish behind the team winning the combined swims. Of the four remaining members of the team, three act as linesmen and one as the reelman and together they pay out the line as the beltman swims to the patient at the buoy.

Once the beltman secures the patient, the linesmen haul the line in until they reach the beach, whereupon the patient is resuscitated.

The whole procedure is carried out to a drill requiring co-ordinated and precise movements by all team members. Points are deducted for incorrect and uncoordinated movements. The winner is the team which scores the least deductions for the combined swimming and drill sections of the event.

R&R has reflected progressive improvements in life saving techniques, in refinements into equipment and most importantly in the methods of resuscitation. Earlier methods, such as the Holger Nielson and the Silvester Brosch were replaced in 1960 by expired air resuscitation and later with cardio pulmonary resuscitation.

The six man R&R event is demanding of each team member because the positions— patient, beltman, linesman and reelman— are decided by ballot at the start of each event. Consequently, all team members must be proficient in each position as well as be a competent swimmer.

Early R&R Battles between Point Lonsdale and Torquay

The early years of R&R in Victoria were dominated by Point Lonsdale and Torquay. The first State Cham-pionship in 1948 was won by Point Lonsdale's team of Don Negus, John Urquhart, Sid Wookey, Les Higham, Ron Hodgson and Brian O'Brien. The team was strengthened by the introduction of Doug Macardy, Alan Love, Bob Chapman, Eric McGee and Harrow Morgan in 1949 and by Barrie Marr and Laurie Gunn in 1950 to win the titles in 1949 and 1950. Actually a Tasmanian team won the 1950 Victorian R&R event, however the title went to Point Lonsdale, as the first home team.

The majority of Point Lonsdale members were also members of the Williamstown Life Saving Club and had gained valuable experience doing 'Reel and Line' in the Bay. Harrow Morgan was perhaps the Club's greatest asset, winning many junior and senior surf race and belt titles as well as being a member of winning R&R teams. He represented the state for ten consecutive years from 1949.

Torquay's early R&R teams also benefited from experienced bayside club members, in particular Albert Park, West St Kilda, St Kilda, North Road, Elwood and Esplanade.

Torquay's team of Brian Whiting, Mick O'Donnell, Bill Silsbury, Graham Gilbert, Ian McConnochie and Sam Henson won on their home beach for the 1951 State title, following a run of seconds to Lonsdale in 1948, 1949 and 1950. In 1952, Geoff Emerson replaced Silsbury and Arnold Goetz replaced Henson. Originally scheduled for Portsea, the championship had to be transferred to Torquay. Arnold Goetz drew the belt, but was unable to make the buoys in the large surf. On his return to shore, it was discovered that his line had become entangled in a heavy steel finishing stanchion. The event was re-run the following weekend at the Torquay back beach (later called Jan Juc) and Torquay were victorious. Graham Jones joined the team in 1953 for Torquay to take its third consecutive state title.

1954 saw Point Lonsdale resume its dominance as the Torquay team split up. The Pt. Lonsdale team of Maurie Lovell, Harrow Morgan, Bob Chapman, Rob Mackinder, Ken Allen and Laurie Gunn won the State title in that year and the next.

A re-formed Torquay team of Tony Knight, Graham Jones, Neal Inglis, Neil Mann, Graeme Baker and Peter Wallace were coached by former Point Lonsdale champion Laurie Gunn to their fourth state title in 1956.

Lonsdale again turned the tables in 1957 with a team of Ken Allen, Rob Morgan, Rob Smith, Keith Tobrady, Cliff Deacon and Rob Mackinder. 1958 looked like being Torquay's turn after winning at most of the carnivals. However, Point Lonsdale (now with Dave Gordon) just pipped them for the title at Lorne. 1959 was also Point Lonsdale's year.

At the end of the fifties the score was Point Lonsdale eight, Torquay four.

In Junior R&R, Point Lonsdale's dominance was even more pronounced. In 1952 the Lonsdale juniors, consisting of Brian Fowler, John Peckham, John Fewster, Cliff Deacon, Theo Nelson and Tam Calderwood, became the first Victorian team to gain a place in an Australian R&R championship, coming third at North Wollongong.

Performing at the Australian Titles

Despite having such dedicated coaches as Jack Meehan, Bill Tyrell, Allan Kennedy, Jock Smith and Alan Drydle of Point Lonsdale and Phil Bennett, Frank Inness, Gordon Dann, Harry Pittard and Laurie Gunn of Torquay, Victorian teams of the fifties could not match it with New South Wales and Queensland clubs.

The depth of knowledge and experience in the northern states, combined with their longer summers and close proximity of their beaches, lead to a significant difference in drill standards.

As well, most of the best Victorian pool swimmers were banned from the surf by their coaches because of its "detrimental effect on their styles". It was not until 1959 that a Victoria state team won anything at the Australian Titles. In that year Mac Greening (Lorne) and Andy Wright (Portsea) combined to win the interstate Junior Brace Surf Teams race.

The Coaches: John Worrell, Anglesea

The year 1960 was somewhat of a turning point. Over the next few years three men, all R&R coaches, emerged with the vision and determination to seriously contest the Australian Premiership — and one was to achieve that ultimate goal.

The first was John Worrell who had competed in and later coached reel and line at Brighton

Within a few years John's experience and professional approach brought the Anglesea team's standard to a level where it was vying with Torquay and Point Lonsdale and eventually Anglesea broke through in 1960 to win the State Championship. However Point Lonsdale turned the tables in 1961 before Anglesea began a long period of domination, winning in 1962, 1963, 1964 and 1966. Although they won at every carnival in 1965 the team suffered a surprise loss to Point Lonsdale in the 1965 Victorian Championship.

John Worrell had a profound influence on R&R during this period and raised the standard of R&R in Victoria to national level.

After gaining experience at the Australian Championships in huge seas at Merewether (Newcastle) in 1960 and at Hobart Carlton in 1962, the Anglesea team of Bill Knott, Rob Kennedy, David Kennedy, John Allen, Ian Smith and Tony White drilled the best at the 1963 Australian championships at Warrnambool, but lost the swim and the event by just point one to Cottesloe. The following year the same team recorded a third at Collaroy in large seas and strange tidal conditions caused by an earthquake in Alaska. Robert Morgan and Bob Brown joined the team which competed at Coolangatta in 1966 and took fourth place in seas infested with jellyfish.

Whilst an open R&R title eluded Anglesea, John Fidler and Rob Morgan had better luck with the junior team of Barry Anderson, Grahame Fletcher, Mick McConnell, Wayne Lesly, Doug Solley and David Young, winning the Australian Junior Championship by defeating Manly at Coolangatta in 1966.

The standard of swimming steadily improved in the 1960s. Point Lonsdale recruited a number of leading pool swimmers and a team of John Wagstaff, Brian Baker, Vin Davies, Danny Blake, Terry Lane and Clarke Warnock were coached by Ken Allen to the 1965 state title.

During this time Portsea also had a strong swimming line-up which included Andy Wright, Michael Phelan, Bruce Morgan and Marcus Bourke. However they were unable to drill well enough to be a serious threat.

Torquay also had many strong swimmers, and in 1966 Tony Knight assembled a very strong team of Peter Doak, Tony Strahan, John Olsen, Bruce Morgan (who had transferred from Portsea), Rob Carson and Col McFarlane, a former Australian senior and junior belt champion from Manly. Despite their swimming prowess, the team's drilling let them down and it finished out of a place in the state title.

By the mid 1960s, Anglesea's and Pt. Lonsdale's domination of R&R in Victoria was starting to be challenged by Pt. Leo and Lorne.

The Coaches: Eddie Kidd, Pt. Leo

Eddie Kidd started coaching in 1963, forming a junior team at Pt. Leo which won the State Junior Championship in their first year. The following year they repeated that performance and went on to compete at Collaroy. Despite a gutsy belt swim in the huge seas by Roger Simpson, Pt. Leo lost by a small margin to North Steyne. Again in 1965 the Leo juniors came second, this time to Surfers Paradise, which included Paul Lacey who later made a great impact as a member of Lorne.

Eddie Kidd then took over as coach of the senior team and lead Pt. Leo to a trio of state title wins from 1967 to 1969. In all three years Pt. Leo gained a place at the Australian titles. The 1967 team of George Dummett, Colin Shugg, Geoff James, Ian Ward, Michael Caraher and Graeme John was placed third at Southport (SA). The next year (1968), with Gary Tierney replacing Michael Caraher, the team went one better at Elouera to be just pipped by Kirra.

1969 saw Hugh McKinnon and Steve Vash join the team, which went on to gain third place at Clifton Beach.

The Coaches: Don Heathcote

Lorne first won the State title in 1970. However the Lorne story started in 1961. Whilst Lorne could boast some excellent swimmers such as Jim Fountain (first in the 1956 international belt race at Torquay) and Mac Greening, its record in R&R was, at best, mediocre (an odd carnival win and a third in the 1958 State title). After some experience with the A team and as captain and coach of the B team, Don Heathcote in 1961 determined that an Association Premiership was attainable. He did not broadcast this vision for fear of ridicule, because Don had to start from scratch. Interest in competition generally had waned at Lorne, so Don formed his first team from two bronze squads of juniors who qualified in early 1962. With little knowledge of R&R, the Lorne juniors competed for two seasons without making the final of the state title in the eleven strong field.

Don's other vision was to lift Lorne out of the doldrums to become a force in Australian competition. In 1964 Don became Club Captain and set about realising his dreams with earnest. When the team graduated to senior ranks, Mac Greening was able to join. His considerable competition experience was a boon to the young team.

Inspired by Anglesea's success, the team slowly improved, both in knowledge of R&R drill and swimming ability. 1964 saw the start of a brilliant surf lifesaving and R&R career by Rob Elmore, who was already a national 800 metre pool champion. Rob Elmore and Ted Gallagher (who was a member of Don's original junior team) and Mac Greening formed the nucleus of Lorne's R&R team for the next decade.

Lorne finally broke through with its first carnival win in 1967 and later that season Don Heathcote was appointed as State team coach.

Business, study and national service commitments caused many changes to the Lorne team over the next few years and in 1968 Mike Kennedy became the first man to swim across Port Phillip Bay. This took him many months to recover from. Despite these difficulties, Don's dogged persistence and coaching ability ensured that Lorne's rise continued. In 1969 Lorne won at most carnivals. However a jammed reel at the State title cost them the gold medal.

Finally after eight years of trying, Lorne won the Victorian Championship in 1970. The team of Rob Elmore, David Evans, Ted Gallagher, Mac Greening, Mike Kennedy and David Tiller went to Ocean Grove for the Australian Championships. Dreadful weather and huge seas caused many delays, and the R&R was eventually conducted at the Torquay front beach where Lorne came second to Kirra.

After a loss at the first carnival in the 1970-71 season, began an era began where Lorne was undefeated in Victoria for many years. Keith Marshall replaced David Tiller and the team went to City Beach (WA) hoping to go one better. Fourth place was a great disappointment. In his usual analytical style, Don Heathcote ascertained that the R&R manual was being interpreted differently by judges in the different states. His solution? Compete in every state between then and the next titles! So the following season, Lorne competed at Burleigh Heads (QLD), Freshwater and Manly (NSW), Seacliffe (SA) and the Tasmanian Championships at Carlton Park.

For the 1971-72 season the swimming strength of the team was enhanced by the inclusion of Peter and Paul Lacey who already had outstanding records as competitors for Surfers Paradise. Thus, the team that went to Blacksmith Beach was the strongest ever R&R team from Victoria. Lorne comfortably won the drill sections. However a huge variation in beach conditions across the arena put Lorne at a two minute disadvantage in swim times and Bondi eventually won by the smallest margin on record. A very disappointed team was rallied by its coach with his dogged determination to win the premiership, as Don set about preparing his team for the next year.

Not only was Lorne's 'A' team dominating R&R in Victoria, but its 'B' team qualified for the Australian Championships in 1973 at Burleigh Heads. The 'A' team's prowess was further strengthened by Graham White, who had by then firmly established himself as the greatest surf swimmer of all time. Don's aim was to prepare the team to a level where no eventuality or adverse beach conditions could deny it victory. So, when confronted with even conditions at Burleigh Heads, Lorne succeeded in achieving one of the largest winning margins on record.

Don Heathcote and his team of Rob Elmore, Ted Gallagher, Paul Lacey, Peter Lacey, Keith Marshall and Graham White had finally won for Lorne the title of Premier Club of Australia.

Don's other vision was also achieved that day, as Lorne won many events and gained many places, to establish itself as the strongest club in Australia.

That same weekend at Burleigh Heads in 1973,

Victoria won the interstate R&R with Don as coach and five of the six members of the team coming from Lorne. To be certain of winning this event, which had bonus points, the state team selectors had chosen an R&R specialist (Ted Gallagher).

This meant that Peter Lacey was required to compete in the board race to keep numbers within the prescribed team limit. This decision caused quite a storm at State Centre and some 'craft' clubs promised to make an issue of this selection after the team returned. On the day of the interstate competition the sea was calm and Peter lined up against the state board champions from New South Wales and Queensland. Peter then produced a superb performance out-paddling the presumed two best paddlers in Australia.

The selection issue was not raised again at State Centre.

Following the 1973 success the 'A' team suffered many changes. Graham White went to live in Queensland, Paul Lacey went to the USA to study, Ted Gallagher retired from full time competition and Peter Lacey had Australian Team commitments. Despite these losses Lorne continued as a strength for many years. Don's strategy of having strong 'B' and 'C' teams, ensured that Lorne had a reservoir of knowledge and talent that enabled Lorne to win every State Championship until 1978 and make the final of the Australians on many occasions.

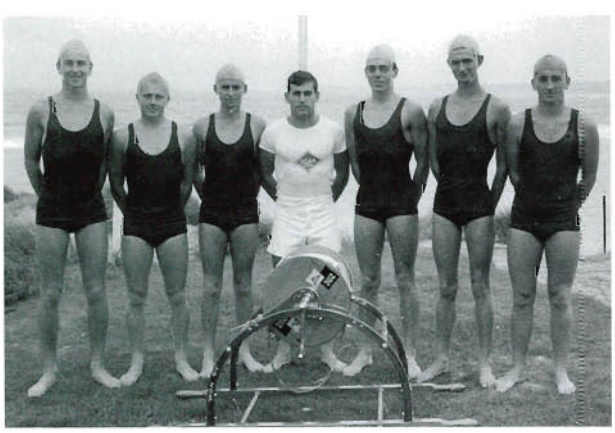

Lorne's run came to an end when Don went overseas in 1978, leaving Point Leo to win the State title in 1979 and 1980.

A fortnight before the 1981 State Championships, Don re-formed a team comprising Charles Kovess, Rohan Skea, Ted Gallagher, Rob Elmore, Lance Johnson and Paul Lacey. A weekend of intensive training was sufficient for the experienced team members to hone their skills and again win the State Championship. The latter four of the team combined to win a new event, the four man R&R (now the 5 man R&R). These successes were repeated in 1982 and 1983 and with creditable performance at the Australians.

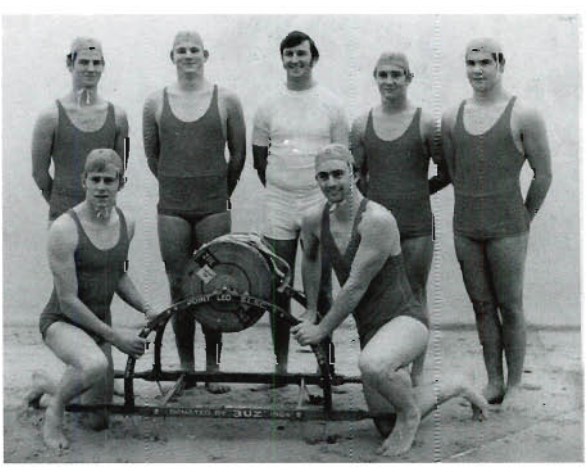

1983 was the end of an era. Don Heathcote had undoubtedly established himself as Victoria's greatest R&R coach. Given the climate and distance problems that Victorians have to overcome, Don can be compared with the top coaches from Queensland and New South Wales.

Other Lorne members who were members of State Championship teams include Scott Nicolson, Peter Hunter, David Tiller, Lachlan McKinnon and Howard Fuller.

It is interesting to note that three of Lorne's 1973 team went on to win Australian titles with Queensland clubs— Peter Lacey (Southport), Graham White (Kirra) and Ted Gallagher (Southport).

Point Leo's turn

The end of the Lorne era created the opportunity for Point Leo to assume the dominant role in Victorian R&R. Geoff Waters who had had early success coaching the winning team of Gary Richardson, John Buising, Phil Newman, Gary Rydberg, Bryan Dennis and Rob Cogger to the 1969 Australian Junior Championship, took over the senior coaching role from Eddie Kidd in the early 1970s. Until recent times Geoff has coached numerous Pt Leo teams in the various R&R categories and has achieved a long string of State Championships. He has also won Australian Championships in 1998, 2000 and 2002. Undoubtedly, the backbone of the senior teams was Gary Tierney and Gary Rydberg who each accumulated over 30 years of R&R competition and together with David Russell, Ian Knight and Steve Morgan-Taylor can boast an impressive number of Victorian Championships.

The last serious attempt by Pt. Leo to win the Association Premiership was in 1991 when these five and Warren Clarke (who was lured back from Anglesea) went to Perth after a dominant season in Victoria. However they were narrowly beaten by Emu Park.

The Next Generation

The second half of the 1990s has seen the emergence of the next generation of R&R competitors. Obviously, the qualities required of a top R&R competition are hereditary.

Pt. Leo won the 1998 Australian under 16 five man R&R title with a team which included Gary Rydberg's son, Hayden, together with James Anderson, Simone and Khali Williams, D'Arne Longwill and coach Geoff Waters. The following year Ian Knight coached the team to repeat the performance. The only other change saw Morgan Lacey replace Longwill. Morgan, daughter of Paul, had previously teamed with Hayden Rydberg to win the interstate nipper R&R in 1997. In 1999 her win with Point Leo capped off an outstanding season in which she had won eight state titles.

After decades at Pt. Leo, Geoff Waters transferred to Ocean Grove in late 1998 and immediately had an impact on the club's R&R, coaching the winning women's 5 person R&R team at the 1999 state titles. The team included Ted Gallagher's daughter, Sarah.

Finally . . .

Over the past fifty years, R&R in Victoria has been dominated by a handful of clubs, those with the best coaches. Success at Australian Championship level has been hard to achieve against the strong New South Wales and Queensland clubs. Whilst there have been some successes at junior levels, only one Victorian club, Lorne, has achieved the ultimate goal — the Association Premiership.

Gold & Silver comes to Victoria

By Bill Scott

The 2000-2001 Australian Championships saw a number of Victorians winning in a number of events. However the five man U/19 Rescue & Resuscitation team from the Torquay club came up with the big surprise! Gold medals in an event that this club had not been seen in for many years. The team spirit and the deduction very much showed through with the team, coach and the team manager overjoyed with success. There is one person, Geoff (Blab) Waters, in the background of really the whole resurgence of R&R in Victoria. Single-handed he gathered up a number of people in the interested clubs. Geoff, originally of the Pt. Leo club and now a Life Member, had successes at Pt. Leo then moved during 1998 to Ocean Grove where the club was strong on promoting R&R to its members. Geoff was a driving force behind the 1985 Australian Championships at Pt. Leo, encouraged this young and enthusiastic Torquay group to go on with their R&R.

With the season about to start, Torquay and Maroochydore member Bill Scott returned to Melbourne for work and to Torquay SLSC where it was agreed that Bill would take over the coaching of this U19 R&R team. Some of Bill's comments from his National Championships report to the Torquay Club include his recognition of the work that Geoff Waters had done in getting this young team up to speed.

This team was doing well at Victorian Carnivals and so were encouraged to compete at Freshwater, NSW. Then the State Championships were held at Lorne, however the team success fell back, with a number of contributing factors. Undeterred, the team prepared for the Australian Championships at Kurrawa.

Coach, Bill Scott relates: "Our goal now was to qualify for the final at Kurrawa and we went back to training weekends at Torquay and during the week at South Melbourne. It was about this time that I encouraged Rohan Frame whom I had coached previously, to work with the team on section one, the 'march on' and 'belt lay'. The reason being that by this time the coach and the repetition can become boring to the team and we were not gaining points in this critical area. This proved to be a good solution as we went on to improve in this area and Rohan became the motivator at Kurrawa while I was involved with the national judging panel.

We achieved our goal not only on the Friday, but Saturday as well with expectations of a hard day on the Sunday.

The day of the finals dawns brightly for us. Ours is event three, on at 9.00 a.m. We arrived at the competition arena early to watch the other events, also to give ourselves a chance to check the conditions and and try to settle the nerves. The buoys are again set in the gutter inside the outer break. Conditions are pretty much as yesterday, so it will be a tough event again today. This bodes well for us as Rohan has been first to the buoys all weekend and today will prove to be no exception. Everything runs pretty smoothly at the finals.

After a warm up with Rohan we were on the line at 8.45 a.m. in the marshalling area ready for a start.

We had made it! Twenty minutes later it was all over. We had looked good but with R&R you never know.

The results and the announcer started to read out:

Sixth place on 9.98 points —Collarroy, NSW.

Fifth place on 9.16 points — Burleigh Heads, QLD.

Fourth Place on 8.80 points — Bronte, NSW.

By now everyone knew our team was in the medals and there was a nervous excitement.

Third place on 8.68 points — Wanda, NSW. It's now Silver.

Second place on 6.96 points — Ocean Grove, Vic. (Coach, G. Waters)

We all knew, and then the big announcement: First place on 5.00 points — Torquay, Vic (Coach, Will Scott).

Finally the medal presentation and everyone received their Gold medal including the Coach. The presentations were made by Ron Tallon, a long time friend to many and Life Member of both Queensland and National Council.

As coach this was my greatest moment at the gold medal presentation. My mentor and R&R stalwart of long standing, Ron Tallon, presented the medals. When he placed the Coaches Gold Medal around my neck, he said: "Bill, this gives me enormous pleasure as I know how hard you have worked for this medal"

Proud team, proud coach and after lots of hard work and commiserations to Geoff Waters, but each recognised that this was a great result for Victoria.

The Torquay team now creates history by winning two Australian R&R championships in a row and only the fourth Victorian team to ever win Australian gold.

The 2001-2002 team was made up of the following competitors: Angela Johnson (Patient), Ryan Duell (Beltman), Zac Rudd (Reelman), Teagan Arnold (CPR operator), Mahoney Rogers (Resuscitator). Coach, Bill Scott, veteran of forty years in R&R competition, added his praise indicating Victorian R&R and the spirit of this team was good for the surl life saving movement.

End note: "Ever so few will know just what they went through!" commented Charles Lyne. "What each member of an R & R Team had to do to commit to the team and to the Coach can only be described as the ultimate in dedication. With sincere appreciation to Ted Gallagher for the time, the patience and the fortitude in providing this chapter."

Surf Boats

In The Beginning . . .

Small oared boats capable of handling rough surf conditions were involved in rescue situations well before the Surf Life Saving Association of Australia was formed in 1907. Many stories have been recorded about rescues by the old whale boats and life boats of the 1800s and early 1900s.

Most 19th Century ocean-going sailing ships carried a 'whale boat', so called after those who hunted the famous giants of the sea. The only means of propulsion then was wind or rowing, so the importance of a sailing ship having one or more whale boats was necessary to transport cargo or personnel to and from shore.

The ability of these craft to 'surf-in' supplies was a major factor in the successful construction of the Cape Otway Lighthouse, for example, which had no overland access.

Even the Lady Loch, a steam powered lighthouse supply ship in the late 1800s, relied on the use of a whale-boat to land the keeper's supplies at the Palmer River or Blanket Bay.

The whale boat's construction was similar to our current model of surf boat, the main feature being the fitment of a 'steer-oar', as it was called. Significantly, the whale-boats were pointed at both bow and stern, (thus known as a 'double-ender') to better handle waves from astern.

Prior to the formation of the Surf Life Saving Association of Australia in New South Wales in 1906, there were 'brigades' or groups of men who gathered as volunteers to watch out for fishing boats in trouble, as well as an ever-increasing number of surf bathers. This practice was not just restricted to New South Wales. In Victoria there were older type life boats at Portland, Port Fairy, Warrnambool, Queenscliff, Flinders and down as far as Lakes Entrance.

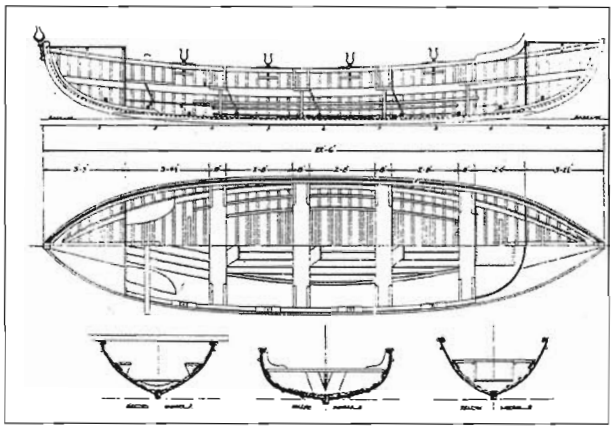

The overlap from the Brigades to the Surf Bathers Association and then SLSA brought with it the use of boats for rescues.

In Victoria much of the experience and development of suitable surf orientated craft was available from New South Wales. In 1946 the movement in Victoria had taken off with the Torquay Surf Life Saving Club leading the way. A small number of Victorian representatives went to the Australian Championships at Southport, Queensland in 1947 and returned with Victoria's first surf boat. The following excerpt from an article written in 'Vic. Surfer' outlines the story of how this first craft, dubbed the 'White Boat', came to Victoria.

The 'White Boat' - Victoria's First Surf Boat

The boat was a donation from Southport (Qld) to Torquay and was thought to be so valuable a part of our surf history that for many years it stood mounted on a post near the Torquay club house. Today only the bow and stern remains and the bow is now mounted inside the Torquay club house.

In tracing its history, we find that four early members of the Torquay Club, namely Dick Garrard, Roy Parker, Joe Parkin and Ron Hussey (foundation member of Torquay and ex-boat vice captain of Surfers Paradise SLSC) were responsible for obtaining this boat. Apparently these four went along to the 1947 Australian Championships held at Southport, with the idea of negotiating a sale. As it turned out, no sale was made, only a very gratefully received donation of the boat itself.

The boys then had the problem of how to get the boat to Victoria. However, our four boat lovers managed to obtain finance, and the boat was transported by road, then installed for a complete overhaul at Jim Wall's work-place, Johnson's Tyne Foundry Pty. Ltd. But what about oars? No problem, this same firm supplied a set of rather large and heavy hard-wood oars designed as emergency equipment for steel barges.

Ron Hussey had the honour of launching the new boat, one never-to-be-forgotten weekend at Torquay. Two attempts to get on waves failed but on the third, the 'old girl' gathered enough speed for a slide down the front, and she continued, down the mine. As oars had no leather buttons fitted and the manoeuvre 'trail oar' was not in practice, the drill was to ship oars. This meant that you had to pull the oar across until the blade jammed in the rowlock. Nevertheless, a great deal of fun and experience was had and it wasn't long before a good crew was gathered together. The crew comprised Ron Hussey (fearless boat captain and sweep oarsman); Howard Glover (first Gear Steward); Howard May; Frank Innes (member of Board of Examiners); Alvin Cairney (Honorary Secretary of Torquay SLSC at that time); and Graham Beck (prominent in Aussie Rules umpiring circles).

The boat and crew spent many long hours on duty for surf carnivals and examinations. The day the crew recalls best of all was the 'huge' day at Portsea's Victorian Championships in 1952. It required 20 men to lift the boat and 20 men hauling on a rope to lower and haul it over the steep cliffs. The waves were not kind either- a 'dusting' was appreciated by the crowd and because of the big seas, the carnival was cancelled. Portsea's waves were 25-30 feet in massive lines which defied all attempts to get out through the break. Rex 'China' Gilbert, surfboard champion turned boatie, is remembered on that day as only a speck beneath the mountains of water, as he attempted to beat the break on his 16 ft. board. China went closest by far but no-one succeeded in getting past the mountainous break that day. The Championships were transferred to Torquay then around to what was called Half Moon Bay (Jan Juc). This was before the Jan Juc club was formed.

Strangely enough the boat was never named the White Boat and more often than not was referred to as the Muscle Barge. Torquay took possession of a new, lighter boat and passed 'M.B.' onto Anglesea on the understanding that it would be returned when finished with. It lasted only one season with the Anglesea Club. Torquay's next boat was a privately purchased clinker built double-ender named Ralph Dean."

Early Clubs And Their Boats

The early 'double-ender' boats which appeared in the late 1940s and in the 1950s were virtually NSW cast offs, starting with Torquay's White Boat. Other clubs' imports were Warrnambool's Doug Kemp and Aeroplane Jellies of 1948 and 1951 respectively. Torquay procured the Mary Drysdale which gave excellent service both in competition and recreation. The Mary Drysdale was donated by the Drysdale family after the Torquay Club's successful rescue of Mrs Drysdale from the surf. The boat was named after the Drysdale's daughter, Mary. However the frustration of having only one competitive boat at Torquay led the enterprising crew of Don Nicholls (sweep), Graeme (Scrooge) Patrick, Rex (China) Gilbert, Sam (Sammy) Henson and Bill (Social) Clymer (bow), to raise funds for the 'private' purchase of their own double-ender boat from the Manly Club in 1951. This boat was named Ralph Dean, after one of Torquay's earliest Life Members and became the forerunner of the Ralph Dean II, III and IV over subsequent years.

Other clubs which procured double enders were Ocean Grove with Almora, Lorne purchased a North Steyne boat to be named the Brian Whitcombe (after a deceased member). Seaspray and Portland had Struggles. Portsea subsequently purchased the Mary Drysdale from Torquay renaming it Fred Matear after the donor.

This double-ender design was superseded by the 'tuck stern', which had a flat transom but was still a plank-and-rib type construction. Typical boats of this method of construction existed until the late 1950s. The last boat of this type to compete in Victoria was Ocean Grove's Gladys Bell which was in service right up until 1962. Of these old boats, the Warrnambool double-ender Aeroplane Jellies is currently under restoration at the local museum.

In 1954, Victoria's State Centre was keen to promote local boat manufacture. It offered an incentive of 100 pounds to any club prepared to support a local builder. Anglesea won and the club's boat captain, Harold Menelaus, commissioned a boat from the firm, Ronstan, at a cost £347/6/11. Launched with the name Meldrum, it was rowed for four seasons before being sold on to Lake Entrance.

Point Lonsdale supported their local Queenscliff builder, Cayzer, by commissioning the Alex Lowe. This boat replaced a tuck stern boat from North Bondi in 1952 named the E.M. Anderson. In 1957, Portsea had the Lady Nelson built, naming it after the first settlement vessel to enter Port Phillip Bay.

In 1961, the Pt. Leo Club was sponsored by MacRobertsons' chocolates to commission a special design of laminated hull which had an airtight false bottom and a vented transom for water flow-through. This was the Old Gold. Bruce Bowman supervised the project which was undertaken by Mouldcraft of Frankston. Although not the easiest boat to row, it rendered good service and was handed down to Kennett River in 1968/69. Anglesea also purchased an identical boat.

Pelaco also donated a boat for presentation at the 1956 Victorian Titles.

In contrast to the old rib-and-plank boats of the early1950s, which required eight strong bodies to carry them to the water. The introduction of moulded ply followed by modern sandwich constructed boat in the 1970s reduced the weight of the hull and the boat could be lifted by four people.

However, manufacturing costs rose with the sophistication of production methods. The prices paid can be traced from the old 'imports' from N.S.W. in the 1950s at £100. This price rose in the 1980s to $600 (£300). The first laminated plywood manufactured boats cost $1600 (£800) in the mid 1970s. The current fibreglass sandwich type boats are now $25,000.

In 1958/59, a surf boat sponsorship from BP was gained and helped more clubs become involved in surf boat rowing. The 'BP Boat' gave encouragement never seen before, and the amount initially made available by BP to Victoria was spread nationally to all states from 1959 to 1971.

Following is the list of that remarkable BP contribution.

A hand-down system was introduced to ensure that all the Victorian Clubs received a surf boat. Woodside Beach, as one of the younger clubs ended up with some 15 various surf boats by the end of the BP boat sponsorship.

Surf boat design and construction continued to advance over the years. Considerable changes occurred in design, shape, features, construction type and material on an on going basis. Often a banana shape boat was substituted by a flat keeled boat on the flat days by those clubs fortunate enough to have several designs of boats. Progressive development of materials went from the old wooden planked to moulded ply to foam/glass reinforced plastic (GRP) sandwich to solid fibreglass.

Introduction Of The Aluminium Surf Boat

The first aluminium surf boat used in Victoria was at Portsea.

The boat was manufactured by Highgate Engineering Pty.Ltd., a division of Comalco Products. It was trialed in Sydney and presented to Portsea by Repco. A second aluminium boat was presented to Surf Life Saving Australia by BP Australia. In 1965 when an Australian Life Saving Team, (including Victoria's Andy Wright of Portsea and John Turner of Pt. Lonsdale), went to compete in America at Redondo Beach, Santa Barbara, San Diego, Santa Monica and Long Island, they took an aluminium surf boat with them.

The 'Repco' remains as a monument at the bottom of the walk at the Portsea Clubhouse, Portsea Beach.

In May, 1966 the Vic Surfer reported on the development of the aluminium boat:

The first aluminium surf boat in the world used a revolutionary technique of aluminium fabrications and was a practical example of a relatively cheap method of forming compound curves in aluminium sheet. The method will have application in the construction of Marine Hulls.

The two main advantages of this new technique of surf boat building are:

(1) the lighter weight of aluminium can be used without loss of strength - the metal weights 40 per cent less than the conventional hull fabrication methods.

(2) the method results in far less weld distortion which gives added strength to the structure.

Sydney's boat, which the BP Company presented to the Cronulla Surf Life Saving Club in 1966, was 25 feet 3 inches long, 5 feet 3 inches beam and 1 foot 9 inches draught.

Cronulla helped in testing the boat and reported that it had a useful tendency to buoyancy at the bow when proceeding into, or running off a wave. The club said that the boat was very stable, and because of its lightness, easy to manoeuvre.

The boat has a lower friction value and greater strength in both the nose and the stern area than conventional timber boats. The seats, which are welded into place were found to give the boat great cross-member strength.

In use, the boat has two practical advantages over wooden craft:

- it is lighter in weight, because of the use of aluminium, which means easier handling, both in and out of the water;
- the use of a magnesium alloy gives the boat a high corrosion resistance factor, which results in far less maintenance.

Alcoa donated an aluminium boat, built by Hawker de Havilland, to Anglesea in 1968.

The modern surf boat of the 1990s evolved into fibreglass sandwich construction with inbuilt flotation and purpose designed foot chocks and thwarts. 'Sliding' seats became universally accepted throughout the rowing fraternity, taking advantage of the leg drive gained in river racing craft. Laminex type surfaces were utilised with the necessity for rowers to use'bare cheeks' to facilitate sliding. Detergents became the accepted lubricant, initially with their tight shorts.

The other major improvement was the replacement of spruce-shafted oars with carbon fibre material. This not only reduced weight but increased strength and are still in use today. These changes have barely kept up with the popularity and the enthusiasm of those hard headed competitors, the 'boaties'.

The Crews

It is often alleged that boaties cannot swim and many attend the South Melbourne Club's annual requalification program to take advantage of minimal surf to requalify each year.

Critics should remember that boat rowers joined clubs and passed their Bronze Medallions as regular patrol serving members, graduating to rowing on the invitation of the Boat Captain.

In defence of their pursuit, I doubt if we could find a harder training, more dedicated and widely travelled group as the surf boat rowers.

Their work-outs in gymnasiums, or on privately owned ergometers, are just a fraction of the time spent bending their backs to an oar.

The training locations vary from rivers, the bay and lakes to the actual home surf beach, and many crews select a regular course such as the Port Campbell crews who row from their home club inlet to Lace Curtains (half way to Peterborough) and back.

Special mention should be made of the sweep oarsman who not only commands the 'A' Boat, but often the juniors and a ladies crew, and is in charge of training, carnival entries, boat preparation, fund raising and often towing the craft to and from events. Heading into the new millennium, a number of clubs now have non-competing boat managers as well as specialist coaches 'to keep on the pace!'

Pt. Lonsdale in 1965 was the first Victorian crew to win an Australian Open Boat Championship. This was the first gold medal event won by a Victorian crew. Competitive surf boat rowing does not come easily. The hard work and training leading up to a season and particularly, a major event, will include much pain along with many hours training, gym work and hours of rowing.

Training In The Late 1950s And Early 1960s

By John Turner

John Turner gives a hands-on recollection of how, in 1965, the Pt. Lonsdale Australian Championship Boat Crew won at the highest level against all odds.

"When I first commenced rowing surf boats, there was a great emphasis on 'follow the leader'. In those early fifties there were still many wooden clinker built boats around, which, by today's standards, were very heavy.

Torquay had some success in both Victorian and Australian circles and their training consisted of very heavy workout training at Mal Cowdrey's Gym (under Graeme Richmond - eventually famous as Secretary of the Richmond Football club). There was some emphasis on circuit training and much hard work on muscle building and strength. There were also long hard rowing sessions on the bay and down the coast with very little science in training methods and hours of blistered/shattered bums and hands. Diet was not really considered and booze was constantly the staple diet of the boat rowers with 'bun fights' after all carnivals and enormous amounts of grog consumed to equip us for the long trip home towing our boats.

This type of training virtually changed forever after an introduction to Percy Cerutty's training camp at Portsea and also after Richard 'Whip' Knight (Champion Torquay paddler) introduced me to Stan Nicholes, a well known Gym Instructor at Frank Sedgeman's Gymnasium in Little Collins Street, Melbourne. Stan knew nothing about surf boats in those days but he was probably one of the best all-round sports coaches in the world, having constant contact with leading coaches in Germany and in the U.S.A. (Dr. Karl Adam and Jim Councilman) and learning all the time. He was famous for his coaching and masseur role with the Australian Davis Cup Team and he was then working with many Olympians in different sports.

Stan Nicholes was to become an inspiration to hundreds of rowers, both surf and river, who followed in our footsteps. He personally changed the shape of surf boat training in Victoria and consequently had a profound influence on the sport Australia-wide. He had a similar effect on river boat rowing and many World Cup oarsmen would testify to that fact.

Well, what was so different from the past? In two words, "total commitment" to our great sport. That's all Stan wanted. At the time we did not realise what that meant, but this was the beginning of an inspirational learning curve on what physical training was all about: how to condition and understand our bodies and maximise our individual performances to lift us to another level. We knew results would not be immediate but we were confident that with Stan's guidance and a little luck we would win Gold at the Aussies.

The difference in training was also total. I always remember Stan saying "I fail to see and understand the actual rowing action in the surf boat in surf conditions". Frankly the day we chose to introduce Stan to the surf was "a little lumpy", 5-6 ft. swells. So Stan (a non swimmer) was tucked under the sweep with old boat jackets around both his arms and neck and out we went.

The results of this little surfing sojourn were immediate. A change of emphasis in weight training to legs, back and arms and increased circuits and weights. Gym sessions twice a day, isometric training/isotonic exercises, fartlek training, wheat germ oil, Sustagen food supplement. (Diet was sometimes broken for the odd glass of stout.) Training camps at Percy Cerutty's Portsea Camp were all new forms of torture for us. Much of this still applies today. Even in the boat we were trying new things: a new style of angled reshaped rowlocks: Teflon sliding seats; extended seats (to enable full body slide as per river boat style); larger oar blades; different blade shapes; sea anchor training but still the same old Barnett moulded ply boat. That's all we could afford and that's what we won Gold in. It took at least six to lift it! Although I must say that the professionalism that Stan had indoctrinated even went to having our own boat handlers on the beach and our own boat towing vehicle, and of course, Alfie our driver.

ness of timing and warm ups before races and this led to many 'dust ups' on the line with Keith 'Hot Dog' Hodgson becoming a 'real Pro' in that area. A scientific approach to rowing was supported by the 100% professional approach to all aspects.

Stan was always keen to compete and train with other clubs and we worked hard with the Anglesea crew who had also joined the gym at this stage.

I always remember winning a Victorian Title at Wye River and returning 'knackered' to the beach and facing Stan, who said "I've organised another race with Anglesea, you'll need that extra one at the Aussies".

He was right as always. We did need that extra one at the Aussies and we did win, thanks to Stan, at Scarborough in WA on 13th & 14th March, 1965 (the first occasion that the Open Boat Race Championship had been won by any crew other than NSW). We had broken the NSW dominance.

The results at both Victorian and Australian Championships by Victorians advanced most markedly from that 1965 win. Coaching and training techniques were then moulded more around the Stan Nicholes methods by most of the boat crews in Victoria with further refinement occurring all the time. Coogee NSW discovered and copied our training methods, particularly emphasising the strength work, with resultant success in the 1972 Australian Championships.

The surf boat has always been a fairly major purchase item for most surf clubs, usually being the centre of much deliberation by the Committee and seen by other sections of the club as an amount of money that could have been put to better use. However out on the water in competition or on the beach, the club surf boat is the item that draws the largest sponsorship! Sponsors have gained great exposure in return, consequently the list of sponsors in Victoria over the years has been enormous, e.g. BP, Carlton United, and others.

The one thing that is of great value in club life is that of the team spirit, in training and in competition, the crew has to be totally united.

Advancement In Surf Boat Rowing

The advancement in surf boat design has never really stopped. The enthusiasm and popularity of surf boat rowing has not only pushed the numbers of surf life saving members now rowing boats to something over 6,000 Australia-wide, but has prompted enormous advancement in craft design.

Early craft used in surf life saving in the early 1900s were clinker built, then carvel construction followed by moulded ply. In the 1970s it was sandwich foam and fibreglass and finally, boats with inbuilt flotation cavity were developed.

The shaping of craft plus any number of necessary design items of the surf boat are restricted under the rules of SLSA This ensures conformity within the parameters set down in the interest of fair competition but it does not mean that design betterment is restricted - it is just controlled.

Victoria's successes in surf boat racing advanced quickly from that first win at the Australian Championships by the Pt. Lonsdale crew, even though places at Australian Championships had been gained by the Torquay crews in the late 1950s and during the early 1960s.

The list of results in World, Australian and Victorian Championships show that a number of Victorian clubs have now, and indeed for some years, been as good as anyone else anywhere. With the introduction of boat rowing for women, the Pt. Lonsdale Ladies Boat Crew swept by Steven Blewett, showed the way for other female boat crews by not only winning the SLSA Inaugural Boat Race for Females which was for plaques not medals, but followed on by winning the first Gold Medals in surf boat racing at the Australian Championships for Women. Women have, in the years since 1995, made great advancements in boat rowing.

Some of the famous sweeps over the years include Ron Hussey, George Packham, Don Nicholls, Harold Menelaus, Peter Grant, Keith Hodgson, John Pettigrove, Jeff Stott, Steven Blewett, Ray Heathcote, Trevor Clauscen, Ron Blackney, Russell Hughes, Ron Murray, Doug Solly, Peter Humphris, Barry Smith, Basil Hunt, John Russell, Scott Tannahill, John Sneezby and, of course, Bill Clymer. Jeffrey Stott, an early member and first boat sweep of the Warrnambool S.L.S.C. has fond recollections of his days in the Aeroplane Jellies.

From the introduction of females into surf life saving in 1980/81, it took more than 10 years before women crewed surf boats. Today female crews are rapidly increasing in numbers. Currently there are 60 female crews competing at the National Championships.

In later years, surf boat rowing has become even more popular within surf life saving with some smaller Victorian clubs having more than one crew.

The Lorne under 18 crew in 2000, the last winning Australian Champion boat crew to be recorded in this history, had a remarkable season winning in more than their actual age group and are truly representative of the future in surf boat rowing. Lorne's U21 boat crew achieved an outstanding result at the 2002 Austrlian Titles at Kurrawa. They came third in the U21 Boat Race and third in the Open Men's Boat Race. The crew was J. McCombe, B. Kerr, A. Duffield, J. Halloran. Their sweep, Alistair McCombe, added to the list of great Victorian sweeps.

So, from the 1940s Muscle Barge to today's fibreglass self-draining cockpits with carbon fibre oars, rowers and their boats will continue to be training before dawn on bays and rivers, preparing for the race to the future with those bathers 'cheekily' displaced to avoid the chafing as they slide to and fro heaving on the end of that heavy old oar!

One important change to boats was the replacement of the old James Boyle style rowlock. Keith Hodgson was the instigator for clubs changing to the more conventional offset type.

Keith Hodgson had a Bill Clymer boat built whilst he was sweeping for Point Lonsdale in 1966, incorporating a hinged liftable (dagger board) centreplate situated towards the stern. It was considered to be an assistance to stability and straight running. The sweep would retract the plate during buoy turns and lower it for running. No advantage was forthcoming.

Shipping of water and its disposal always posed a problem. Some early double enders were equipped with a rotary pump which was usually situated under the number 3 seat and operated using a vertical crank, all very well for recreational rowing but impractical for racing.

The Riley Venturi, a type of one way flap valve, was a great innovation and was used with limited success on a number of craft. The valves were effective in that they could be opened and closed by the sweep's foot action. The Riley Venturi's capacity was unable to cope with the amount of water usually shipped by a surf boat. A few craft were made with self-draining hulls, but in level rowing they proved unstable.

Eventually clubs fitted high speed electric pumps powered by a small battery strapped to a thwart which are still used today in all surf boats. John Russell of the Torquay Club fought hard and long to have these introduced. In 1986 his crew used the first of these battery operated pumps, despite them being disallowed by National Council. However there was nothing in the rules relating to such a device and the following year these appeared in many of the craft at the Australian Championships.

Up until 1966 each crew member had to wear a flotation vest. These were thought to be necessary in case of any crew being left in the water for periods of time until a rescue could be performed. The vests were later found to be a disadvantage in more ways than one, for example they restricted the rowing actions and rowers could not dive if swimming to avoid errant craft, and were dropped.

Australian Surf Rowers League

In October 1960 the first Australian Surf Boat Crews' Convention was held with Bondi being the host club. Records indicate that Anglesea, Portsea and Pt. Lonsdale attended from Victoria.

Events included a 2-mile marathon from Bronte to Bondi; a construction, handling and maintenance lecture; heats of Open and 'A' Boat races; a boat rescue race followed by the finals. The program was concluded with a general conference. For the next thirty years, the Australian Championships was the only occasion when all these crews came together calling themselves the International League of Boat Rowers.

In 1989, a group was formed called Surf Boat Rowers Assoc-iation in Victoria and affiliated with the International League of Australian Surf Boat Rowers.

The initial committee consisted of Alistair McCombe (Lorne), Brian Millman (Torquay), Peter Ford (Pt. Leo) and Greg Davies (Secretary, Pt. Lonsdale). Membership was open to all rowers.

Sponsorship was gained from C.U.B. The annual winner of a boat plus other trophies was decided from a seasonal point allocation system from club carnivals.

The National body also holds an annual 'Grand Prix'. Previous locations have been at Terrigal, Dee Why, Ocean Beach, Ocean Grove (Victoria) and Fingal. The second weekend in February is the regular date and attracts about 150 crews.

After the Australian titles, the National body also organises a Grand Boaties' function at Jupiters Casino and is attended by at least 1,200 guests.

Surf Boat Building Memoirs

One of Australia's best known surf boat builders today is Bill 'Social' Clymer, who was one of the early members of the Torquay Club. Many will remember his big black boat-towing Packard and the old camp site, 'Stars Haven'. In those days Bill lived in Newbay Crescent, Brighton. When not working as a physical education instructor at Wesley College, he was building surf boards and skis in his backyard. He later progressed to become one of the country's finest boat and oar manufacturers after moving to Sydney. The decision to move related to the number of orders for boats coming from the NSW clubs, the strongest state.

In spite of his mediocre eyesight, he was an excellent sweep and enjoyed a wonderful sense of humour. He related that one day at Torquay, whilst sweeping a recreational wave, a swell dislodged his spectacles. With much profanity and cursing but assisted by his crews' advice, they caught a good wave back to shore. On tipping over the boat to drain it, there were his specs, neatly folded and tucked under one of the stringers!

Bill related: "I decided to move to Sydney in 1957, the reason being that I was sending surf boards and surf boat oars, etc. to Sydney. Sydney was the centre of the boat building industry and I figured it would be more profitable to relocate there. The change from for and aft planked surf boats was then changing to the lighter and more serviceable diagonally laid ply (three one eight inch cedar sheets glued). Palm Beach, NSW asked me to design and construct one. The boat was successful and the orders came in That original boat was smashed to pieces trying to back over a huge wave at Manly's Fairy Bower.

Today my son, Matthew makes the fibreglass hull surf boats. These are stronger again than the moulded ply and easily fixed when damaged. The oars are carbon fibre. "Good sitka spruce is impossible to obtain and so the carbon fibre oars are it".

The demand for surf boats is increasing. The Australian Championships would be the largest rowing event in the world. I occasionally help with the training of crews at Manly Life Saving Club and keep in touch with my friends at Torquay Surf Life Saving Club."

Sabrina At The Point Leo Carnival

In the late 1950s, Melbourne was graced with a visit by the well known English show girl, Sabrina, well known for her well-proportioned (42-22-32) figure.

Her attendance was so welcomed by competitors and public alike that her experience in the Pt. Leo boat was a feature. Bruce Bowman perched her over the box-line reel and introduced her to some waves which drew various exclamations as they lifted through the surf, which ultimately destroyed her pristine appearance. A plate was subsequently affixed to the front thwart reading "Sabrina sat here!"

The Birth And Death Of The 'Marajobri'

The Portland Club, after procuring the Struggles from Shellharbour, N.S.W. in 1957, and acquiring three further boats as 'hand-downs', needed a new craft.

In 1973, a couple of athletic members hit on the idea of gaining sponsorship for a marathon run from Melbourne to Portland. The project was enthusiastically supported and the runners, Brian Anderson and Graham (Joe)

Eldridge endured the challenge.

A new laminated ply boat was purchased carrying the name Marajobri after the vision of the marathon by Joe Eldridge and Brian Anderson: Mara from marathon, jo from Joe and bri from Brian.

This boat rendered excellent service until 1981, when a crew inspecting the cliff faces for rescue potential was surprised by a couple of 'rogue' waves and the boat was destroyed on a reef. The crew, Shane Maslin, Roger Trewavis, Andrew Murrell, Ian Eldridge and Peter Yuill were rescued by abalone fishermen.

As an indication of Bass Strait currents, a portion of the wreck was found some weeks later washed up on a King Island beach, about 300 km to the south east.

'The Bombora'

Every now and again there are those wonderful days when waves are 'falling out of the sky', and it so often happens that the connoisseurs are not there to witness the occasions.

In C. Bede Maxwell's book 'Surf' (1949), Bede spends many paragraphs relating to the cause and effect of the famous Bombora which appears from the deep in many locations around the coast, commanding the respect of all surf lifesavers. She also quotes the age-old adage "He who looks and rows away, lives to row another day".

The Rip, which is the name of the 3-km passage of sea between Point Lonsdale and Point Nepean, commands the respect of international sea captains and pilots alike. On one particular occasion the Port Phillip pilot refused entry and the tourist ship Strathnaver was unable to enter Port Phillip Bay. The public, with awe, regularly marvels at the huge seas whipped up by a prevailing south westerly blow, as they view the Bombora that performs just inside the Rip.

It is estimated that the waves can peak at 25 feet and in 1960 the temptation was too great for a boat crew swept by John Turner. Some body surfers will be familiar with surfing a wave twice their height but compare that with a wave two boat lengths in height with the top edge foaming.

Only two 'monsters' were caught before it was necessary to empty the boat. It was decided that the beach next to the pier was the nearest point to perform this task, even though a sizeable swell prevailed.

This was when disaster struck. With the crew attempting to hold the boat prior to beaching, a large swell lifted the hull then dropped it onto the flat limestone and sand shelf. Unfortunately the sweep's foot slipped under the stern of the boat, which, half full of water, landed on John Turner's foot, severing three toes.

The trip to the Geelong Hospital with the patient was affected in the club's towing vehicle, an aged 'Hupmobile', which even passed the police escort on its mercy dash.

On another occasion, the Portsea surf was excelling itself as only that beach can, when Phil Franet was sweeping a recreational crew and a monster wave popped up. In a moment of reckless bravado they cracked it and made a 'copy-book' ride to the beach. Not one of the crowd on the beach acknowledged their feat.

At Lorne when an easterly blows, the surf at Point Grey performs and is rarely challenged by a boat.

On one occasion, the temptation was too much for Russell Hughes and his crew. They picked up a huge swell off the pier. At a spot where the water deepened, the crew hit their blades again to maintain the momentum but finished on the beach with perhaps one of the longest boat waves on record to their credit. The patrol was at the time packing up the gear so the feat went unnoticed.

Those familiar with Pt. Lonsdale front beach opposite the shops will be aware of the big surf which develops from a westerly blow. Normally the waves operate for one hour either side of high tide and can vary in height from 1 to 3 metres.

The famous Pye (Pt. Lonsdale) had received a name change resulting from Geoff Sanderson negotiating a new sponsorship with Stegbar, but it was the same craft which Keith Hodgson chose to surf the front beach on 18 April 1965.

Unfortunately a large wave took charge of events and dashed the boat against the wall. The boat broke apart. The bow section was salvaged which Keith cut down to make a 2-man surf boat, plus sweep. Although quite manageable, it suffered the unfortunate fate of burning by uninformed club members.

Marathon Boat Rowing

The first couple of marathon efforts were staged by individual clubs, more for the achievement than for publicity. A Torquay scratch crew rowed from Torquay to Lorne as a challenge of ability. The first attempt was in 1950 with Bill Clymer, Don Nichols, John Pettigrove, China Gilbert and Mal Seccull. They did not make it to Lorne as a full head wind pulled them up short somewhere about Eastern View. On the second attempt in 1952 the crew made the trip easily with a south easterly blowing.

Another milestone was established in 1953 when Point Lonsdale (with relief crews) rowed from Williamstown to Pt. Lonsdale in the ex-North Bondi boat, the E.M. Anderson, taking four hours.

During 1955, Harold Menelaus, sweeping the Anglesea crew at a club carnival at the Pt. Lonsdale 'Springs' beach, attempted, during a lull in the program, to become the first surf boat to row across the Rip. Unfortunately he was unfamiliar with the six knot current normally exiting on the ebb tide. After an involuntary detour out to sea. The nickname 'Rip Man Menelaus' was coined in response.

Albeit illegal and foolhardy, it was also in the 1950s that a crew from an unnamed West Coast club, finding themselves stranded at Portsea after a surf carnival bunfight, 'borrowed' a surf boat to row across the Rip to Queenscliff. The crew members suffered SLSA's most severe penalties as a result.

Probably the first major distance competitive race was held from Bronte to Bondi, NSW, a two mile course which was conducted on the occasion of the first Australian Surf Boat Crew's Convention on 29 October 1960. Conventional carnival events were also conducted such as an 'A' Boat race and a surf boat rescue race. Trophies included two sets of oars and individual tankards.

Another 'one-off' event was staged in 1970 during the Bicentenary of Captain Cook's landing in Australia in 1770 and was called the 'Captain Cook Marathon'. It was a single day event with the course run in three stages, from inside Botany Bay to Maroubra, then to Bondi and finishing at Watsons Bay. Crew changes were permitted but visiting interstate crews could rarely afford transporting extra personnel. The Torquay boat, swept by John Pettigrove, in spite of lack of local knowledge and direction and having only one crew, managed to gain equal second place.

The five day 'George Bass Marathon' (named after the early explorer) is held annually between Christmas and New Year and is conducted between Batemans Bay and Narooma, NSW. Each leg of the race covers 10 to 12 miles per day and crew changes are permitted. The normal arrangement is for a crew to have an IRB back-up to transport the relief rowers. The procedure is to drop the 'fresh' rowers ahead of the competing boat and the changeover is completed. A number of Victorian crews have competed, with Woolamai Beach being successful in the boat named Tom Thumb. Victorian popularity for this event waned in view of this holiday premium timeslot and the safety concern by competitors having to float around in shark-prone waters three miles out to sea. The hazard of dodging speeding IRB's was another factor.

In 1970 Lakes Entrance club organised a 'Race around the Lakes'. The eight kilometre circuit was a good scenic work-out but the main attraction was the barrel at the clubhouse afterwards.

Geelong City Spring Carnival included a marathon race only held for two successive years in the late 1970s. This was between Point Henry and Corio Bay, but lack of spectacle and support caused the cessation of this event.

John Marshall Memorial Day

The John Marshall Day, first conducted in the 1959/60 season , was to commemorate the loss of the great swimmer John Marshall from a car accident. The Pt. Leo Club staged this event for boats, boards and skis from Flinders to Pt. Leo on Boxing Day, plus other events. The inaugural boat race was won by the Lorne crew, who won on two more occasions in later years. Categories that covered 'A', Reserve and Junior crews were introduced in the later years. The lesser crews were started first but the Open crews experienced difficulty in overtaking the slower crews. Greater spacing of the categories caused a judging problem when crews of different levels arrived at the beach close together.

Boards and skis raced over the same course with Dick Knight and Peter Duffin (both Torquay members) being the winners of the inaugural contest on 26 December 1960. The event was held just prior to the start of each season, thus proving extremely popular. The marathon day was at its peak in the 1960s and 1970s with 18 senior boat crews participating The perpetual trophy, which ranked in size with the Davis Cup, was engraved with the winning club. Crew members received small replica cups.

Most crews used this day of racing as preparation for the shorter surf carnival races that were to follow during the season. The Flinders to Pt. Leo marathon was keenly contested with some memorable races held. There was also a high correlation between the winner of this race and the winner of the Victorian Senior Boat Championships.

Originally the race was an open event and boats from all grades set off together. The race stopped when the John Marshall day ceased in the 1970s, however it was briefly revived in the early 1990s when points were allotted for the overall boat premiership. The race was then sent off in grades with 'A' grades being sent off last. This detracted from the spectacle as crews sent off some minutes before the 'A's could reach Pt. Leo first and the actual winner of this most important part of the race often finished in the middle of the pack.

In the early days the 'A' crews established their superiority early in the race proceedings and the winner had the prestige of being first onto the beach, duly recognised as the best crew of the day.

In the 1970s the boat segment of this event lapsed but other craft competition continued. In 1993 the Memorial once again included boats but their final year was 1995 when the Pt. Leo club decided to concentrate on holding only a swimming event as before.

The Admella Marathon

The Admella Marathon was instituted as a revival of the 1881 regatta held in Portland Bay and became a part of the Admella Festival at Portland in 1990.

The name derives from the steamship 'Admella', which serviced Australian coastal ports but was wrecked west of Portland in 1859. To assist with passenger and crew rescue, the regular Portland lifeboat was towed to the site and succeeded in rescuing 19 people.

As part of the overall program, a surf boat race was promoted and entry forms sent to clubs. Portland Aluminium Smelter donated prize money of $10,000, making it the richest marathon race in the country. Crews competed from NSW, Queensland and South Australia as well as a large contingent from local clubs. At one stage there were 20 'A' crews competing for the $500 first prize.

The 14.5 kilometre course commenced from Whaler Point proceeding out and around St. Lawrence rocks and return. In the seven years the event was conducted, three open crews won twice, namely Torquay, Lorne and Bulli (NSW). Unfortunately this popular and well supported marathon lapsed when the prize money was not available.

Echuca Rich River Festival

Echuca Rich River Festival committee challenged a surf boat to race against the restored paddle steamer Pevensey in 1978. Ray Heathcote (Torquay), sweeping the Ron Hussey, accepted the challenge over 1.5 miles. The surf boat easily won the $100 prize money, with the paddle steamer incurring blade damage resulting from its haste.

In 1982, a race for a maximum of 25 crews was held in conjunction with the Rich River Festival. The one mile course was started in town to maximise spectator appeal. The crews raced upstream for half a mile, turned and rowed back past the viewing area and made another turn 100 yards past the state line. They then made a final turn to complete the race over the start line. The inaugural winners were: 1st Pt Lonsdale, 2nd Freshwater, 3rd Seaspray, all of them winning a surf boat.

One Other Marathon Boat Race

A one-off race about 15 km from Bancoora to Torquay was sponsored by UDL in 1989 and was won by Pt. Lonsdale. In order to produce a finish with the boats appearing to be close, it was decided to finish the actual racing on the Torquay front beach. The crews then rowed around the point and beached in front of the Torquay Club house in correct order of placings. UDL supplied their products for the 'after race celebrations', which put an end to any rowing for several days.

Moomba Boat Race 1965-76

The first Moomba Boat Race was conducted on 5 March 1967 on the Henley Course on the Yarra River. It started at the Anderson Street Bridge and finished at the Henley Tower finishing line. The course was initially 1000 metres but this distance presented a problem because of the curve in the river. In subsequent years the races were 800 metres which made it a straight, fair race. There were no grades and so 'A', 'B' and 'C' all rowed in an Open Section.

The three finalists had to appear through the Swan Street Bridge just as the interval of the Moomba Water Ski spectacular was starting. Our announcers called the race and the winner was presented with a surf boat donated by BP on radio station 3AK. This was all completed within 10 minutes and required careful timing to conduct the last 300 metres of the race, assemble the winning crew, bring the boat from a trailer parked nearby, present the boat and tow it away. No rubber duckies (as they were not yet invented) or radios were available and leg muscles and bicycles were used to carry results back to the start area. There were some weary judges as well as boaties at the end of the day.

Ballots for lanes were supervised by all the Boat Captains because the No.1 lane (north side) was the slowest, due to the slow current flow which was further complicated by the tide level. The boats usually gave an extra surge of power when they could not see each other whilst under the Swanston Street bridge and the race could be won or lost in this small section. The event was a most popular one on the Boaties' calendar and it gave excellent exposure and publicity for the movement. We had to ban the 'bare bums' on seats because the rowers were fully visible at all times and we did not want to offend anyone.

It was a great picnic day for the supporters on the lawn under a shady tree and was much more pleasant than a cold windy surf beach and there was no long drive home.

The crews who were eliminated in the heats generally returned to the finished line area to observe their colleagues row the semis and finals. After indulging in the consumption of the contents of their 'eskies', riotous behaviour ensued, much to the intrigue of bystanders, but this general misbehaviour incurred the wrath of Victorian State Centre.

The winning crew had to hand a seaworthy boat to the second place-getter and so on down the line to the last place so that every club got a better boat. For this reason every boat and crew from Victoria competed. Heats were run and semi's for 4 hours without a break. The event was replaced by the Moomba organisers with a 'Bath Tub Derby' and we were asked to provide rescue boats (rubber duckies were available by then). We also provided rescue boats for the Moomba Bird Man Rally which offered $10,000 to anyone who could 'fly' 80 metres from a platform near the Swan Street Bridge. Of course nobody ever won the money and our boys were kept busy rescuing 'drowning' pilots and their broken aircraft.

SLSV provided a float and March Past Teams in the Moomba Parade for several years. We always had problems getting suitable people because this event was held on the long weekend in March, one of the busiest for patrols, and the surf was usually good. The hard work in getting our act together paid off with prize monies up for grabs and the hand down too good to miss.

There was one other river event which was held to promote a film, 'The Vikings'. The crews were required to dress as Vikings with helmets and skins and a boat was provided by the movie company with prizes for the best dressed Viking.

Anglesea 'Bargain'

In 1968 at Jan Juc, the Anglesea Alcoa boat had a 'For Sale' sign on it at $500. During the carnival it was virtually chopped in half by Ocean Grove in the 'C' grade heats. The wreck was dragged up on the beach and an '0' was removed from the price. It was subsequently purchased by Torquay SLSC who re-built it to surf again and was handed down the following year.

Women Start Rowing In 1990s

By Bruce Tayler

Tradition in the past usually meant a sweep oarsman approached rowers to form a competitive crew. The reverse applied in the case of four women river rowers who had, for a long time, observed surfboat crews training alongside them on the Yarra River.

In 1994 the women made an initial approach to Portsea club but club officials were uncertain as to the girls' commitment to the task. They then spoke to Steve Blewett at the river, who agreed to accept them on behalf of the Point Lonsdale club.

The initial 'four' were Deb Bassett, a Commonwealth Gold medal winner, Anna McFarlane, a World Junior Champion, Mandy Loftus-Hill, a member of the Victorian Youth Squad and Lucy Howdern, an ex Pt. Lonsdale nipperette and river rower. The crew trained throughout the winter and used the Baillieu-Knight Frank boat (subsequently renamed the Fila). Rebecca Joyce (a World Lightweight Scull Champion and Olympic Bronze Medal recipient in the double sculls) joined the group to replace any unavailable rower.

The first event to test the girls was the Newport (NSW) marathon in 1995, and although it had always been a men's race, their entry was accepted. A handicap of one hour was awarded, but respecting the complaints of other crews, this was subsequently reduced to ten minutes.

The course for this race is from Newport Beach along to Palm Beach, NSW, into the beach and out again, then finishing at Pittwater. Unfortunately the shore break eliminated the handicap advantage as all crews experienced this hazard. The two metre swells, combined with a southerly sweep plus the backwash from the cliffs, provided a new and frightening experience for the girls who were trained on a flat river. The Palm Beach segment was also challenging with 1.5 metre shore break but they were first off the beach and into Pittwater finishing tenth outright and seventh on handicap. As the best competition was interstate, the women were keen to compete at the 1995 Australian Championships, although their primary goal was to win the Victorian title. The Fairhaven venue had three metre surf on the day, which deterred other crews from starting. As a special gesture the Pt. Leo and Fairhaven crews came to the starting line to enable the race to commence with the minimum three crews.

At the Championships, National Council permitted the women's race to be of title status but declared it an invitation only race. Pt. Lonsdale were successful in winning their first major race as well as a first for Victoria.

It is rare for an R&R team to deviate from a swimming and discipline-orientated competition but in 1994/95 four Pt. Leo girls persuaded Ron (Bomber) Murray, father of one of them, to sweep for them.

The crew of Nadine Maguire, Narelle Hearn, Tarena Murray and Deanne Davis trained at Sandridge, rowing the boat named after Geoff 'Dude' Kinsey. They competed in the first women's surf boat State title at Fairhaven.

By 1995/96, there were 32 women's crews nationally but the cancellation of events at Kurrawa stopped competition.

Pt. Lonsdale woman's crew won the Clontarf to Manly marathon and the Admella at Portland as well as the State Titles at Torquay plus most local carnival races.

In 1995/96 season, Tamara Brawn migrated from Lorne to stroke the crew with Pt. Leo's Garry Mackellar sweeping. This crew remained together for three seasons. Also in this season, an Anglesea ladies crew was formed under the guidance of Barry Marsh and crewed the 'Mazda' boat. The complement consisted of Bree Smith, Jessica Nunn, Peta Clarke, Nicola Paton and Nicola Plummer.

The 1996/97 season was regarded as a strong one for this Anglesea crew when they utilised Perer Cagley as a fitness coach resulting in first places at six club carnivals and winning the Portland Admella marathon. This same year saw the temporary disbanding of the crew, leaving Pt. Leo and Portsea to dominate the season except for the State Titles at Lorne. The girls re-united for three days training prior to their State Titles win. At the National Titles against 60 crews, the shore break of 1.5 metres decimated crews except Newport. Their 20 length lead was reduced to 15 but they were lost in the break. By waiting for a lull, Pt. Lonsdale won with only one other boat finishing.

In 1997/98 the Pt. Lonsdale crew were winners at nine carnivals including the State Titles at Ocean Grove, the Pier-to-Pub boat race event at Lorne, San Remo to Cowes and fourth in the World Boat Titles at Mooloolaba. In 1998/99 Katrina Hubbard took over the bow seat. Again this Pt. Lonsdale crew continued to win five Club carnival races including the Lorne State Titles and coming fifth in the Nationals. Unfortunately injury and illness plagued them in 1999/2000 with only one win and fifth at Warrnambool at the Victorian State Titles.

From the inception of ladies boat crews, Portsea, Fairhaven, Lorne, Pt. Campbell, Seaspray, Pt. Leo, Anglesea, Pt. Lonsdale and Waratah Beach were competing regularly.

Fairhaven Women's Crews

By Nancy Joseph

The first crew at Fairhaven originated in the summer of 1995/96. It came about with four girls just 'wanting to row' but were told it was only for the 'boys'. However after much persistence and harassing the men's crew, we were taken out for a row at Pt Roadknight and we have never looked back.

The crew consisted of John Theisz (Sweep), Nancy Joseph (stroke), Kim Vohmann (2nd stroke), Karen Fiedler (2nd bow) and Kate Perry (bow).

We rowed in a Clymer boat with round rowlocks sponsored by Smythe Real Estate. We were all very green, myself being the only one who had rowed before and we had a lot of fun. Women were the novelty in the surf boat section and I don't think anyone could have envisaged that women's surf boat rowing would be so strong and successful.

Fairhaven has supported a women's crew for five years and I have been in every crew. Over the last two years Fairhaven has been very strong in the Women s section, always finishing in the top three at each Victorian Carnival and also having a lot of success in interstate racing.

In season 1998/99, Fairhaven decided to move with the times and purchased a DKG boat, built by Drew K. Griffiths, boatbuilder in Surfers Paradise, with the help of some generous sponsors: Freestones Transport and Huon Corporation. All crews at Fairhaven enjoy rowing this boat and we now have three blue DKG boats.

Saul Kybartas Trophy

The boat fraternity competed for the 'Saul Kybartas' trophy which was awarded to the Club that won the Victorian Senior Boat Championship. Saul was a champion rower and a magnificent physical athlete who looked most impressive carrying the pennant for Point Lonsdale Club in the March Past. He was a member of Pt. Lonsdale's crew that won the Australian Senior Boat Championships in 1965 and was Victorian Senior Boat Champion crew member in 1962, '63, '64 and '65. He retired after the 1965 Season and went to live in the USA where, tragically, he was involved in an accident in the early 1970s and he has been confined to a wheelchair ever since. Saul typified the bronze Aussie lifesaving boatie and it was most fitting that this trophy was named in his honour.

The boat rowers themselves, in the 1992/93 Season, resurrected the Saul Kybartas Trophy with a new trophy made by Steve Blewett. So after a lapse of some twelve or thirteen years, this great rower was again remembered, and since 1992/93 the trophy is now given to each of the grades from 'A' right down to the Junior crews, all made possible by CUB sponsorship. In those earlier days the trophy was presented annually at the Victorian SLS Ball/Dinner Dance held at Nine Darling Street, South Yarra.

Boards and Skis

Introduction

The first recorded use of surf boards along the Victorian surf coastline dates back to the early 1920s. Lou Whyte, who had a holiday house at Lorne, purchased four solid redwood boards from Hawaii during a visit there in 1919. With friends and other family members he frequently surfed the waves mainly at the Lorne surf beach in front of the present surf club. Surf skis were first developed in 1930, they began to appear on our surf beaches a few years later.

Initially in Victoria, boards and skis were used only for recreational purposes, particularly wave riding. Surf skis were often to be seen on Port Phillip Bay, ridden mostly by Royal Life Saving bayside club members. Boards and skis became popular, too, on inland rivers and lakes. However using board and skis to rescue people from overturned yachts, rowing boats and assorted craft, quickly proved their effectiveness in lifesaving situations.

Their use in inter-club surf competition from the 1947/48 season onwards brought about dramatic changes in design, length, width, weight, construction methods and materials.

Surf Board Developments in Victoria

Ken Pollard in his History of Torquay relates: "Surf-board riding in Australia was first recorded in the Manly district around 1912 when Charles D. Paterson, who was a foundation member of the North Steyne Club, procured a board from Hawaii. It was solid redwood about 9 feet long and weighed nearly 90 lbs. (3 m, 45 kg). Neither Charles or his fellow members from North Steyne could manage to ride or even handle this heavy board and after many injuries and bruises, they decided that our surf was not suitable for board riding. The board, now regarded as a 'lethal weapon', was taken to Mr Paterson's home for use as an ironing board. When Duke Kahanamoku, the world's leading sprint swimming champion from Hawaii, was touring Australia to compete against the Australian champions in 1915, he was prevailed upon by members of the Surf Bathing Association to give a surf board riding exhibition. As there were no suitable boards available to suit the Duke's requirements, one had to be made. A local timber firm, G. Hudsons donated a piece of sugar pine, 9 foot long, 2 foot wide and 3 inches thick. The firm roughed the board out to the Duke's instructions and he then shaped the bottom of the board to ensure it would 'lift' once the wave was caught..."[1] After visiting several beaches, the Duke decided Freshwater would be most suitable. So on a Sunday in February with a large crowd watching, the Duke gave a superb exhibition of board riding.

"One of Victoria's first acknowledged ocean board riders was (Victoria's State Centre foundation President) and Torquay foundation member, Ainslie 'Sprint' Walker, who was transferred to Melbourne from Sydney in the late 1920s by his firm of stock and station agents and wool brokers, Grascos Ltd. Sprint, a former champion body surfer and surf swimmer from Manly club, made trips to Portsea and Pt. Leo beaches, where he rode a solid redwood board. He and his fellow mates from the Melbourne Swimming Club decided the surf at

... he buried his board in the sand

By SNOW McALISTER

Lets hark back a few years to 1920 when the solid wood surfboard was gaining favor after the introduction of surf board riding by Duke Kahanamoku at Freshwater beach, Sydney, in 1915. Duke came here to compete in swimming contests, he - being the world champion swimmer, a title incidentally he held until 1920 when he was defeated by Johnny Weismuller. While on holiday at Freshwater Duke saw such good surf rolling in he decided to make a surfboard which he carved out of sugar pine timber. The locals had no idea what he was going to do with the board and offered to take him out through the break in their fishing boat. He refused and amazed spectators by paddling this 70lb board out to sea. He made for the southern end of the point at Freshwater and startled the locals by riding several waves standing up across the bay, reaching the shore on the northern side of the beach.

This spectacular display set the young surfers keen to design and make surfboards. For the most part they copied the Duke's original board (incidentally the Duke's original surfboard is mounted and on display at Freshwater S.L.S Club.)

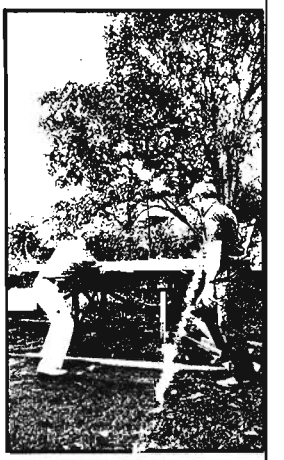

Sprint Walker, a member of the Manly swimming club and Manly life saving, gained honours in both clubs in the competitive field. He made a board like Duke's after witnessing his Freshwater display, using one made of solid redwood 9 feet long, 24 inches wide and 3 inches deep. In the early 20's, when his Sydney firm appointed him to their Melbourne office, he packed his ports including his surfboard.

He was unaware at that time but he was introducing the sport of surfboard riding to Victoria. It was a disappointment to Walker to discover that all the life saving and swimming activities were centred exclusively around the city baths and the life saving clubs on Port Phillip Bay, St Kilda and Elwood, etc. This didn't satisfy Sprint who loved broken water. He managed to get transport to the coast at Portsea and Sorrento beaches and he was delighted to find beautiful rolling surf. Rather than commute each weekend with the heavy board, he would bury it in the sand.

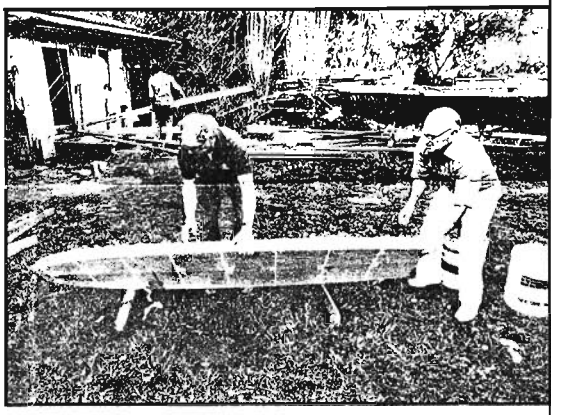

It was lonely for Walker on these weekends so he decided to entice some of the best bay swimmers to visit the coast and see what surfing and board riding were all about. Many prominent swimmers learned the art of body and board surfing through Sprints endeavours. As he gained the confidence of the local sportsmen, numerous keen groups would visit and surf on the virgin beaches of the Victorian coast. Out of these trial and error journeys to various beaches one beach stood out in Walker's mind as the best and most consistent surf spot on the coast.

That was Torquay beach some 14 miles from Geelong. It had the greatest possibilities with its long rolling breakers, consistent surf, a good beach and a fair 45 mile road from Melbourne. He didn't know it then, but the area was to become the Mecca of the surfboard rider and body surfer. Walker's father was secretary of the then Royal Life Saving Society while Sprint was a member of the Surf Life Saving Association of Australia. He and the Victorian stalwarts had gathered around him and decided to form a Surf Life Saving Club at Torquay. The club had direct membership and affiliation with the NSW clubs since Victoria did not have its own Association. From this start the Surf Life Saving movement spread along the Victorian coastline. It now numbers 30 clubs.

Unfortunately some years back the Torquay club house burned down, destroying all records including Sprint Walker's original surfboard which the club had preserved and mounted in the clubhouse. A new clubhouse is now built and opened recently at Torquay beach. Well known Sydney surf boat builder Bill Clymer an ex-member of Turquay Life Saving Club, was commissioned to build a replica of Sprint Walker's original surfboard. The pictures here illustrate the manner in which those beautiful redwood boards were fashioned. Quite a difference from today's methods of shaping and glassing. But the care and attention put into those sturdy craft of the Duke's era was the same, for they were made by men who loved waves every bit as much as their modern counterparts who ride the waves that today can still be found on those magnificent beaches.

these beaches was unsuitable for board riding and on subsequent trips to Torquay they found the surf far more consistent, safer and rideable." [2]

"Boards were purchased from Sydney builders, Bill Wallace, Gordon Bennett, and Bill Barnett, also from local builders, Col Downey, Bernie Main, George Evans, Laurie Nelson, and Bill Clymer. The boards fast became 'works of art' as construction methods improved with the use of stronger, lighter ply, copper nails, waterproof strong gripping glues, better shaping of frames etc. Shaped sides and bottoms with increased 'banana' in the overall length helped eliminate nose diving or 'going down the mine'". The start of board racing evolved from the early experience of board riding exhibitions at Surf Carnivals where a few friendly races were organised. By this time the boards were much longer (12 ft and more) constructed from half inch Redwood stringers and plywood top and bottom to make them lighter and lighter. Known today as the Longboard they served us well. From the heavy and cumbersome beginnings by Dick Garrard and 'Spud' O'Hara, to the super light board which, by the time they were deleted from SLSA competition in 1987, were constructed from polystyrene on ply stringers and coated with fibre glass.

They even fitted rudders. The Malibu or 'short board' had been around for some time and a number of board builders were manufacturing them. Some surf life saving names who built both long and short, or in later times just short, were Bill Clymer, Bill Wallace, Gordon Bennett, Bill Barnett, Bernie Main, George Evans, Bill Luscombe, Peter Duffin, Laurie Nelson, Snow McCallister and Vic Tantau.

Bells Beach became the place to go ride a wave and the Torquay members of that era who pioneered Bells will tell you that on a good day "Bell's is a perfect wave". Alan Read, ('Okanui Al') of Torquay was an early exponent, using a plywood version built for his large frame, as were Vic Tantau, Owen Yateman, Peter Troy and others.

Board paddlers have also done extremely well from the early 1970s at the Australian Championships particularly with the entry of Peter Milburn.

Malibu Boards and Shorter

1956 onwards proved a momentous era for surf life saving in two ways: the first being the staging of the International Surf Carnival at Torquay in 1956, which brought together competitors from venues around the world.

The second reason was the introduction of short surf boards by the USA lifeguards and team members on their visit to Torquay for that International Surf Carnival. In 1956 Tom Trahn, Mike Beight, Bob Burnside and Greg Noll brought out Malibu boards and surfed beaches from Avalon (NSW) to Torquay, thus establishing the craze for short boards from 2.5 m to 4.0 m long. Leading manufacturers using balsa wood and fibreglass were Wallace, Woods, Bennett, Casey and Clymer. In 1959 there were 1,500 Malibus built in Australia. Styrofoam construction commenced in the 1960s. These 'new' boards had a slow but permanent effect on surf club membership and created a new breed of surfer.

Prior to their introduction, the majority of riders, using their 'toothpick' boards (16 footers) were surf club members. The new 'Zip' board (as it was christened) enabled car roof mobility and underarm portability to surfing locations not visited before. Without the need to store their boards at the usual surf club venue, surfers ceased to join clubs which eliminated their club commitments such as surf patrols. Over the ensuing years, membership recruitment slowed as potential members opted for a pastime of obligation free surf beach visitation. Warrnambool Club lost 30 potential cadets who chose to form their own boardriders club rather than joining the surf club.

The shorter boards led to the introduction of the 'hot dog' style of riding and terminology such as 'walking the board', 'hang five', 'cutback' and 'wipe out'. These phrases became regular terminology. Whilst early Torquay members surfed Bells earlier, it was really in 1961 that Torquay club members discovered the beautiful swells of Bells Beach which has now become a world famous surfing venue. Some other short board venues include Bridgewater Bay, Johanna, Pt. Impossible, Urquharts Bluff, Lighthouse Left, Pig Farm, Little Sunset, Corsair and many others.

The 1960s saw the introduction of racing Malibu boards at surf carnivals, originally in a non-championship capacity. Elevation to championship status followed when the Australian SLSA titles at Ocean Grove in 1970 included this event for the first time. But by 1987 the Long board was dropped from competition altogether.

In the 1966/67 season, an event of 'surf board riding' was tried in SLSA competition but judging problems led to its discontinuation. The first venue selected was Woolamai Beach but entries in the event were disappointing.

Generally speaking, the use of short 'hot dog' type boards by club members was limited due to people preferring the longer malibu board. Many members were content to use the malibu rescue boards for their 'competition' and their relaxation time 'cracking the waves' or 'shooting the curl'. Competitors who originally raced the old 16ft. long boards readily adapted to the new racing malibus. The malibu also became a component of the Ironman event. Board designs have changed over the years with models becoming narrower and deeper in the nose, thus providing improved buoyancy to give more lift over waves.

Eleven foot malibus designed with full length 'patient' handles became standard. Patrol rescue boards and rescue techniques embracing their use were then included in the bronze medallion award. Since their introduction they have become one of the major methods of patient rescue.

After the first Malibu (wooden) boards appeared in 1956, development led to balsa and fibreglass construction in 1959, with the first styrene/fibreglass unit made by Greg McDonough in 1960.

In the mid-1960s and early 1970s, regular competitors were Graeme 'Horra' Hazeldine, George Day and Ray Stevens of Warrnambool, Mike Wilson of Portsea, Frank Flynn of Anglesea, Howard Hughes of Lorne, Peter 'Troy-boy' Troy, Rex 'China' Gilbert, Vic 'Claus' Tantau, Ken 'Chooks food' Pollard, Dick 'Whip' Knight, Peter Milburn and Doug Warbrick of Torquay. Torquay's Chris Nicol and Stephen Taylor were magnificent competitors on 16 foot boards. They benefited from increasing competition along the Victorian coast, but had a background of training on Port Phillip Bay.

A body board with two fins, constructed of balsa and fibre glass and called the Lumaroo, was an alternative to the rubber surf mat. The best exponent of this form of surfing at the time was Arnold Goetz, frequenting Torquay and Bells. About 25 years later these once again became popular and known as the Boogie Board but the malibu was probably one of surfing's greatest and most innovative components over all those years stemming from that International Surf Carnival held at Torquay in 1956.

Shorter Rescue Boards - At Last

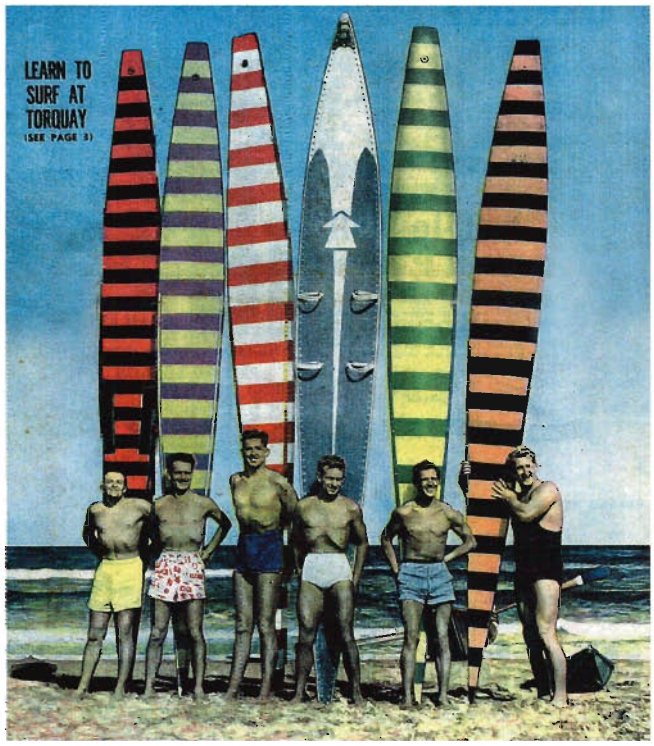

For some years the standard rescue board which is 3.21 metres long has been the backbone of all patrols. National statistics showed that between the 1984 to 1988 seasons, 22% and 29% of all rescues were conducted using rescue boards.

In 1987 a shorter 9 foot rescue board was designed by Frank Flynn, a physiotherapist and member of the Anglesea club and a recreational board rider of long standing. With the increase in female membership and the annual re-qualification including a board rescue segment, it became obvious that the standard board was of excessive length and difficult for members of lighter stature to handle. Even the National Council's permission to fit leg ropes to the standard board, did little or nothing to encourage training or patrol use by these members of the standard rescue board. In 1993 approval was given for the fitting and use of leg ropes on rescue boards but little use has been made of the accessory other than on the 9ft unit. This innovation prevents losing the rescue board at sea, but not of 'lost patients and boards' on return to shore.

Two prototypes of the short board were produced by Hughes Surf Boards of Aireys Inlet. Oke surfboards provided the initial prototype, then as progress was seen, further consultation with Howard Hughes led to the production of the 2.8 metre short rescue board with special features such as extra nose and tail rocker, and front concavity to create lift in steep surf. After years of testing, they are now available for club use nationally after some twelve years of encouragement and trialing by the Development Officer, Bruce Tayler and the Victorian Board of Lifesaving.

Anglesea obtained the first unit and a sponsor purchased one for the Pt. Lonsdale Club. Approval from National Council was not forthcoming but use as a training board was acceptable and so trials began. Within both clubs the popularity for the short boards was exceptional. Peter McDonald, a lifeguard at Pt. Lonsdale, liked it so much he effected 15 rescues and even competed on it in local club malibu competitions successfully.

In 1999, and after thirteen years of persistence by Frank Flynn and Victoria's Development Officer, Bruce Tayler, final approval was granted by SLSA. It is now an approved alternative patrol board available to all clubs in Victoria.

The vision and patience of Frank Flynn, and indeed all those who contributed to this successful piece of rescue equipment being added to SLSA's range of rescue equipment is very much appreciated, particularly by the lighter patrol member.

Something Special - The 16ft Long Board Era

by Bruce Tayler

The day dawned windless, quite a change from the previous few days when the wrath of Bass Strait was directed through the passage between Cape Otway and King Island. A few early birds, recovering from the night before and needing to respond to the call of nature, rolled out of their tents and sauntered over the rise to investigate the source of the roar. "The waves were on", and word rapidly spread throughout the camping area.

Soon all available boards were launched and before long it seemed that all Torquay club members were taming the big sets coming around the point.

This was a typical day in the early 1950s when these graceful 16 foot (approx. 5 metres) frame and plywood surfboards were the prime source of surfing pleasure amongst the clubs. If the truth is known, they were the most difficult of all lifesaving equipment to master but that challenge made them more pleasurable. Unlike the later introduction of the short Malibus, the 16ft. boards were owned exclusively by surf club members and became the recreational item of a large complement of the west coast club members.

It is claimed that the Torquay club had the highest ownership and number of riders of these boards, followed by Lorne, Warrnambool, Anglesea, Apollo Bay and an odd one each at Portsea, Port Fairy and Wye River clubs.

The best feature of the long board was its ability to pick up a green wave as it was building and a long corner could be enjoyed before the break occurred. A common rider's trick was to turn about and face the wave while coming in. Sir Adrian Curlewis (late National President) would perform headstands on the board. Other tricks would be for two riders to exchange boards or to cross over on a wave with one riding the crest whilst the other rode the base of the wave.

Many rescues were performed using long boards, their main asset being the ability to reach the patient quickly. Although not the easiest equipment to return patients to shore, their chief role was support while the beltman swam out and retrieved the patient.

Carnival long board competition was very keen with Torquay dominating this area for many years. Originally, competitors started in a novice race, progressing to open when they had won an event. This system was subsequently changed to A and B grade divisions. Team races where four paddlers competed as a relay were popular and this event was included in State titles.

A Board Rescue race was included in many carnival programs and it was an event encompassing ability, strength, judgement and luck. The board rider usually enlisted the services of their club's fastest swimmer to fulfil the initial leg of the swim to the buoys. It was advantageous to choose a fast swimmer with a small stature as selection of a heavyweight more often led to an unmanageable return to the beach, ending in a loss of patient and board.

Geoff Ewart of Pt. Leo always enlisted champion swimmer John Marshall who usually 'blitzed' the other swimmers. The Lorne pair of Bruce Tayler and Jim Fountain were regulars, but the team of Peter Troy and Jon Myers of Torquay had the lightweight advantage. Where other competitors prone-paddled back to shore, Troy and Myers, both being board riders, were able to kneel, so that their speed through the water was exceptional.

The departure of the 16ft. long board can be coupled with the obsolescence of the reel and line and 'plank' surfboats. However the long board will be fondly remembered for its challenging but graceful wave-riding ability and the camaraderie of all club members who owned them and still do.

Surf Skis

by Bruce Tayler and Bruce Owen

The surf ski is an Australian invention and was fashioned for seated surfing by Dr. G. Saxon Crakanthorp, NSW in 1930. In 1937 these were adopted as standard life saving equipment.

Sports Craft in NSW produced the earliest commercial boards and skis. Many of these came to Victoria and the demand for them led Colin Downie, retired RN Officer of Hampton, Victoria, to manufacture them locally.

The Mulcahy Brothers (Sydney) were also building early skis being used in Victoria, as was George Evans for the Albert Park Boys. Many paddlers built their own skis as the cost of a new single ski in the mid 1950s was about £40 ($80) and paddles were £5 ($10), at a time when the weekly wage was only about £10 ($20).

"The first ski, similar in shape and construction to the 'hollow' long board, was approximately 14 foot long and 2 foot 6inches at its widest point, where two timber blocks fitted with leather straps had been screwed to the timber decking. The rider inserted his feet into the straps and with the use of a paddle, also designed by Dr Crakanthorp, propelled the craft out to sea. The timber paddle was similar to a row boat oar, approximately 8 feet long with a blade each end."[4]

Lindsay Bock was one of the first to paddle a surf ski at Torquay in about 1936. Kevin Twomey rode a 15 foot ski called 'Myrtle the Turtle' at both Anglesea and Torquay. One of Lindsay's skis was found standing against a tree on a farm out of Torquay being used as a home to a swarm of bees. The ski, now completely renovated, stands in the Torquay Clubhouse as a good example of that early period. Later reports indicate the use of surf skis expanding to Lorne, Anglesea, Warrnambool and Portland during the 1940s.

Milton Roberts of Torquay won the first Victorian Surf Ski Championship on 7th March, 1948. At National competition level the first medals in skis were won by Warrnambool Double Ski pair Steve King and Doug Sheppard who won Bronze Medals in Double Ski at the 1951 Australian Surf Championships, at Scarborough Beach, W.A. These two significant results in the history of surf ski paddling in Victoria were the beginning of a long and successful domination of ski paddling by Torquay and Warrnambool Clubs over 50 years.

Victorian ski paddlers have been responsible for many developments made to the surf ski. Early racing single skis used in the early 1950s had been developed in N.S.W. and were generally about 5.4 m. (18 ft.) long and 600 mm. (24 inches) wide. They were made of plywood, flat on the deck and underside of the hull and had two sets of footstraps about 450 mm. (18 inches) apart (examples of this type of ski hang in the Torquay S.L.S.C.). The purpose of these footstraps was that normal paddling was done with the feet in the front straps. On catching a wave, the rider would slide back to the back footstraps to lift the bow coming down a wave to stop the ski nosediving down the mine and facilitate steerage, there being no wave deflector or rudder in those days. During this era, Brian Beck of Torquay was an innovator in ski design, experimenting with various lengths and shapes of skis in the transition from 'wave skis' to 'racing skis'.

Originally the blades of paddles were straight. Offset paddles were introduced in the mid 1950s. During the 1950s, skis 'imported' from Sydney generally carried brand names of Sportscraft or Bill Wallace. Bill Clymer was a successful sweep of Torquay's boat crews during the 1950s, before moving to Sydney to build surf boats and skis in the late 1950s. Clymer built 'V' bottom/front dished deck double and single skis, also excellent spruce paddles and boat oars at Brighton, Victoria. The basic design of the racing ski remained until the mid 1950s when Bill Clymer developed and built a wider tail/dished deck design for Jon Nicholas, who had great success with his explosive 'off the beach' style.

Warrnambool's Bruce Owen, over a five year period, cut back the width of his skis from 600 mm to 450 mm which is now the standard minimum width. In 1960 Bruce Owen used, for the first time, a rudder with pedal steerage (as used today) to easily win the ski race at the Interstate Surf Race at the Royal Patrons (Duke of Edinburgh) Carnival conducted during the Commonwealth Games in Perth in 1962. In 1967 Owen also produced the lightest ski (9 kg or 20 lb) at the Australian Championships in Moana S.A. which led to the introduction of a minimum weight of 18 kg as used today. In the late 1980s, Bruce Owen became National Surf Craft Officer and has held that position for 10 years, being responsible for the enforcing of specifications for boards and skis throughout Australia.

Torquay paddlers also had a major role to play in the development of surf skis during the 1960s particularly when fibre glass became available as a suitable construction material. Peter Duffin developed the first removable wave deflector which allowed the elimination of the second set of foot blocks in preventing skis nose-diving coming in on waves.

According to Torquay's Peter Hayden, (one of the three Hayden brothers competing at the highest level and indeed with those other great Torquay paddlers), it was in the mid 1950s that the Olympic kayak paddlers, Brown, Green, Stuart, Huessner and later Phil Coles attached the first rudders to their double skis. Mike and John Hayden copied this soon after and eventually also fitted them on their single skis. Bruce Owen of Warrnambool designed and introduced the foot pedals. The reference to the weight of the skis became a major part of the rivalry between the Torquay and Warrnambool paddlers. Both Peter Duffin (Torquay) and Bruce Owen (Warrnambool) produced paper thin plywood skis for the flat water of the Moana Australian's in 1967 which Peter Duffin won with a ski of approximately 20 lbs.

Always looking for an advantage, Peter Duffin instigated the most radical changes in ski design. Firstly he attempted to convert a standard kayak into a surf ski by taking a kayak shell and fitting a flat top on it. This craft caused a major problem with the Australian championships at Coolangatta in 1966 when, because of its lack of shape (banana) it was almost impossible to handle and wiped out half the competitors in the final when Peter broached on a wave halfway back to shore. Undeterred, Peter Duffin came up with the idea of the wave 'deflector'. This was constructed in the crudest of ways. According to Peter, it was: "down to the beach with your ski, place it upside down in the sand, make a mould shaping in the sand around the tip of the ski and then cover the sand and tip of the ski with glad wrap (or similar), lay fibreglass over shape and upon drying, roll the ski over, place two further bands of fibreglass over nose of ski to hold the deflector in place".

Peter Duffin was an exceptional water skier at this time (Australian Champion). He had heard that fibreglass was being experimented with for boat construction and began to wonder, "if boats, why not skis?" He negotiated with a cabinet maker kayak paddler, Brian Harper, to make a mould suitable for the forming of fibreglass shells for a single ski. During Christmas 1968-69, the three Hayden brothers, plus Peter and John Duffin, proceeded to make those first five fibreglass skis in Mick Hayden's garage in Zeally Bay Road, Torquay. Three real estate agents and two trampoline and trailer manufacturers did not make very good craftsmen. However over a number of weeks all five shells were made.

Many late nights and hundreds of hours later all the internal struts to keep the thin shells straight were fitted.

Making up the seat and foot wells meant another trip off to the Torquay surf beach where each of the five paddlers sat in a kayak seat, selected an appropriate leg length and foot well depth and made the appropriate sand mould and subsequent middle top deck for each of the five skis. Some flat sheets of fibreglass were laid to form the tops, rear and aft of this seat mould to complete the ski hulls. Finally, externally attached rudders, foot pedals and two wooden starting blocks on each side of the seat mould were fitted and the skis were ready for racing. These five skis all finished at between 28 and 34 lbs. depending on how much fibreglass was used and what strengthening bits were left out. At this time the typical wooden single racing ski being used was 40-50 lbs.

These five ski paddlers then headed to the Australian Championships in Tasmania at Clifton Beach and swept the pool. Peter Hayden won the Interstate Championship on the Saturday and on the Sunday the five skis all featured in the final 12, with Peter Duffin and Peter Hayden first and second, Mick Hayden fourth and John Hayden with Maurie Rayner (on John Duffin's ski) just further back in the field.

These five skis were the start of what has now become the standard, but with one exception. The cross supports used in the five skis did not have enough lateral strength. Consequently a strengthened foam centre support was inserted in future designs from tip to tail, providing the strength required to sustain the force of a wave breaking on the way out, or a nose dive on a larger wave, coming in towards the beach.

As the sport became more popular and with the advent of fibreglass, the number of manufacturers increased quickly. The earlier popular manufacturers were Hayden, Holmes, Jeffries and Pratt. During 1999 there were currently 17 SLSA registered surf ski manufacturers, but only one, Unfair Advantage, was based in Victoria.

While the ski has remained at 18ft (5.5 metres), the design changes have been somewhat remarkable. The changes from those old thick heavy timber construction to the marine ply and urea formaldehyde glue to fibre glass to polypropylene with wave deflectors, foot blocks and rudders—made very fast skis, particularly the doubles, the fastest craft on the water.

After fifty years we have seen the inclusion of the 'state of the art' technology applied to all these craft. The days of boards and skis made by Colin Downie, Seacraft, Bill Clymer, Bill Wallace, Merv Cain, George Conway, George Evans, Bernie Main, Bryan Beck, Peter Hayden and the many other early enthusiasts have given way to modern technology, construction technique and design.

Surf Ski Competition

In the early years, competition was restricted to open single and double ski events. As the sport developed, events were conducted at various age levels, namely cadet (14-16 years) (later dropped); junior (under 18); under 21, women's ski, mixed double ski and more recently Masters events (over 30). In 1965 the ski teams event was introduced leaving ski paddlers with a wide range of events in which they could compete at inter-club, State, National and International level.

The pinnacle of ski competition is the Open Single Ski event, and a win at World, National or State level in this event has always been highly regarded. Only three Victorians have won the Australian Single Ski Championship: Torquay's Peter Duffin (1967 and 1969); Maurie Rayner (1968 and 1971) and Cliff Goulding (1979). At the Junior level, Australian Titles were won by Stan Stevens of Warrnambool, and Torquay's Peter Milburn, Jamie Bounds, Cliff Goulding and Tim Munro.

Victoria has produced some very fine ski paddlers over the past fifty years, in spite of a short season and the cold water. The 1960s provided Victoria's breakthrough when in 1961 Peter Duffin came second in the Open Australian Interstate Ski race. Then in 1964 Warrnambool's Bruce Owen (on a single ski) and Torquay's Bill Luscombe and Peter Duffin (on a double ski) gained second place for Victoria in the Open Australian Interstate Ski title.

Most successful Victorian Single Ski Championship winners with five wins each were Brian Beck (Torquay); Bruce Owen (Warrnambool) and his son Michael Owen (Warrnambool). Brian Beck won the championship five years in succession from 1951-1955, was also placed third in 1950 behind two NSW paddlers to be the first Victorian and was also third in 1959. Bruce Owen (Warrnambool) won the Gold Medal at the State Titles in 1961, 1963, 1964, 1965 and 1966 plus 2 Silver and 3 Bronze Medals. His son, Michael Owen won his 5 State Gold Medals in 1987, 1991, 1994, 1995 and 1998 together with 5 Silver and 2 Bronze Medals, thus making him the most successful competitor at state level in Single Skis.

Other multi title winners were Peter Duffin (Torquay - 4); Maurie Rayner (Torquay - 3); Anthony Orwin (Torquay - 3); and two each to Milton Roberts (Torquay); Jon Nicholas (Torquay); Peter Howard (Anglesea); Ray Brewin (Torquay); Cliff Goulding (Torquay) and Tim Altman (Torquay and Seaspray).

Women's Ski racing was introduced at State Title level in 1985. The first title holder was Carol Fox of Anglesea SLSC. Portsea's Natalie Hood has been the most successful woman ski paddler winning the title in 1986, 1987, 1988 and 1990. Natalie later represented Australia as an Olympic Kayak paddler. Jo Gardner won the title in 1989 (South Melbourne) and 1996 as a member of Fairhaven Club to be the only other multiple Title holder in Women's Single Ski.

In the late 1980s, competition began for Masters (over 30 years) competitors. From small beginnings there has been a steady increase in the number of competitors that now compete at World, National and State level in ski events.

A first for Victoria (and possibly Australia) in double ski competition was the husband and wife partnership of Allan and Mary Corney of the Woolamai Beach club, who competed against all comers for many seasons. In 1997/98 the Mixed Open Double Ski events at Victorian Titles were introduced.

The Double Ski - The Fastest Craft On Water

Double skis, originally built in the 1930s, were first introduced to competition in NSW. Double skis appeared in Victoria from around the early 1950s. However because of the cost of these 23ft long craft, there were not too many around. In latter years, the clubs in many cases have seen fit to invest in one or two of these craft allocating each to a suitable and responsible pair of paddlers. Victoria has had a number of successes in double ski in both Victorian and Australian Championships. The double ski requires hours of practice to ensure paddlers mount and are seated with synchronised harmony. If not, the race can be over before the first wave.

In Victorian Double Ski Championships, by far the most successful combination was Torquay's John and Michael Hayden who won an incredible nine Gold Medals between 1957 and 1971. The Portland pair of Phil Stuchberry and Kevin Patterson won three titles in 1950, 1952 and 1953 as did Warrnambool's bothers Michael and Rodney Owen in 1994, 1998 and 1999. Those to win two Double Ski titles were Brian Beck and Owen Yateman (Torquay—1955 and 1956); Peter Duffin and Bill Luscombe (Torquay - 1958 and 1960); Peter Duffin and Peter Hayden (Torquay - 1968 and 1969); Peter Howard and George Day (Anglesea - 1973 and 1975); David Preston and Michael Leverett (Lorne - 1991 and 1992).

Brian Beck, five times Victorian Champion of the 50s, has in all his more than fifty years continued to ride his ski and remains one of the greatest exponents of wave riding to this day. His ability to find a way out in big surf along with an uncanny and sometimes unbelievable way of catching the uncatchable wave, makes him one of the 'legends'. His enthusiasm for always achieving the ultimate has seen him develop and design both racing and wave riding skis along with beautifully crafted paddles which many of us have used. Several of his skis can be seen hanging in the Torquay SLS Clubhouse. Along with his mates of yesteryears and particularly, Owen Yateman, he contributed some very amusing moments to the world of Surf Life Saving at surf carnivals and functions. Brian has been a fine contributor to the advancement of ski competition in Victoria and elsewhere. He reached the final of the 1955 Australian Double Ski with his double ski partner, Owen Yateman and paddled into 4th place, a most worthy achievement.

Brian recalls some of his experiences: "At Anglesea in 1946 I saw a group of ex-servicemen using surf skis and I thought 'I've just got to get one of those'. In 1947 I heard of a cabinet maker in Geelong who had built a ski from plans in a sports magazine and was trying to sell the craft. So I bought this 12 foot ski and took it to Ocean Grove for use during the summer months. I could not ride it properly and there were no other ski riders to give advice. The next summer I went to Torquay. There were several boards and skis and it was either learn to handle the craft properly or be clobbered. Most skis were tear-drop shaped about 12 feet long. They had a rope attached to an eye-bolt in the nose, the other end to the paddle. To ride a wave you would stand up and lean back with the rope as support holding the paddle in two hands with feet astride. I had met Owen Yateman by then and he had a similar ski to mine, as did Geoff Emerson. Vic Tantau and I decided to attain our Surf Bronze.

In my Bronze squad of January 1950 (trained by Yateman), there was Mick O'Donnell, Vic Tantau, Tich (Eugene) Cullity, Keith Peter, George Packham. Others who went through on the same day were L.H. Deans, W.Giles, D.P.A. Mayson, R. Young, S. Baker and I. McConnachie.

The club President, Jim Wall, had a Sydney built 14 ft. Sportscraft which he lent me to train on and race with. It also had a Sportscraft paddle. The beauty of this ski was the second set of foot blocks to allow you to get back on the ski after catching a wave, thereby giving you steering control. That was the control problem I had with my first ski at Ocean Grove. At this point, we should not forget to mention Milton Roberts and his attempt to make a papier mache ski. Was this the first attempt at making a moulded ski? Unfortunately when it was hung in a garage to 'cure' it collapsed in on itself. They didn't go on with the idea.

Well, I did win my first title and Owen Yateman was second. In the 1950 Vic. Titles, two ski paddlers from Coogee had come to Torquay. They had sleek sixteen and a half foot racing skis, whereas our craft had been wave riders used for racing. This was my first contact with ski paddlers from interstate and shows how there is a need to mix with the best if you want to be better.

In 1952 after talking to Bill Wallace of Bronte on one of his visits to Torquay, Yatey and I decided to try him for our next skis. I designed a 17 ft ski and three were made, the third for Kevin 'Mumbles' Walker. By this time we were using Clymer paddles and some paddlers were using offset versions. Bill Clymer was also making some single skis as well as boards. In 1953 Colin Downie was building Vic Tantau's boards. I spoke to Colin and he agreed to make a seventeen and a half foot racing ski to my design. He was also starting to make wave riders to my design. Bill Wallace built a twenty-one foot double to my design for the 1953/54 Season.

Colin Downie built an 18 ft. single and Yatey and I got a Downie built 22 and a half ft. double. We paddled the double to a 4th place in the Australian Titles in 1955. It was about this time that Clymer introduced the 'V' front on his skis. Jon Nicholas paddled Clymer skis.

I retired in 1956.

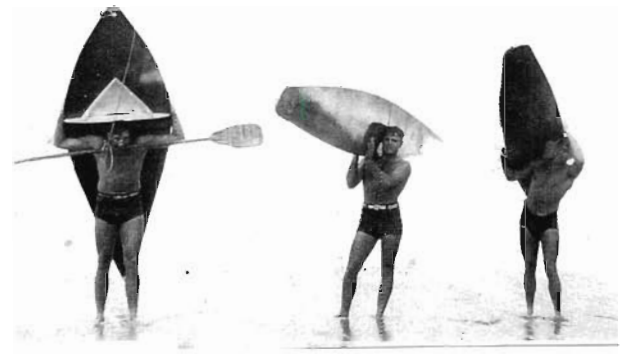

I made a comeback in the 1958/59 season and raced an 18 and a half ft single ski designed by me and built by Brian Harper. Harper was a dynamic canoe paddler and a cabinetmaker by trade. I won all races except the first and the last (Vic. Championships), when I was third in the Vic. Champs. behind Peter Duffin and Bruce Owen. They were both using skis with rudders and on the day that gave them a terrific advantage in the extremely windy conditions, so windy, in fact, that the Carnival Referee, Phil Bennett, changed the course from clockwise to anti-clockwise to allow the less experienced to get around the three buoys with a tail wind. They could not manage to paddle into the head winds.

In the mid 1950s, the successful Maroubra double, Wally Brown and Dennis Green, introduced the rudder to ski racing on their moulded ply round-bottom double ski. Later Bruce Owen introduced foot pedals—very user friendly.

In the late 1950s, Peter Duffin and Bill Luscombe, Torquay's current Victorian Double Ski champions, radically modified their old 'Downie' double ski by widening it aft on the front foot blocks to give better flotation. In particular, they added a 'V' front and an extended false nose to give better lift over the waves—thus wave deflectors evolved thereafter. (The 1954 vintage double, built originally for Beck and Yateman, survived until the Torquay Clubhouse fire in 1970, having by then been paddled in all Australian States).

During the 1960s Barrie Leeson and I made 16 foot wave riders and a couple of 18 and a half foot racing skis. In the 1970s I was making paddles and small wave riders from home. By the1980s I stopped making paddles and skis and through this era I continued to enjoy my wave riding mostly off the 'haystacks' at Torquay.*

Old hands at Torquay remember 'Fabulous Monday' back on Labour Day in March, 1953 when perfectly shaped waves like 'blocks of flats' were coming around the point giving riders a field day. Sprint Walker, observing Peter Troy on a 10ft wave performing a right-hand corner, in his usual dry manner commented, "Yes, that is a very nice wave".

Merv Cain of Anglesea records that "up until the mid 1960s skis were wooden with either round or 'V' bottoms. From then on fibre glass came in. There were a few solid foam skis covered with fibre glass introduced by South African Surf Teams, but the skis broke in half too easily!

The first 'V' fronted wooden skis were built by Bill Clymer (NSW Boat Builder) and used mainly by Victorians. During this time period, the first rudder I saw was on a double ski used by Wally Brown and Dennis Green at the 1956 Torquay Olympic Carnival and operated by a foot tiller. Off-set paddles came in at this time also.

The next season (I think), Bruce Owen of Warrnambool used a rudder with foot pedals — and while I can't remember the exact time span, Peter Duffin fitted heel wells and I fitted the rudder through the ski. These things happened while we were still using wooden skis.

During the change to fibre glass, Peter Duffin fitted a wave deflector — then I put the rudder cables through the ski and added hand blocks to make jumping on easier. There is no doubt that the ski paddlers of Victoria had made a major contribution in more ways than one."

Enter The Wave Rider Ski

Just as the first surf ski was fashioned in 1930 by a lover of surfing who wanted a sit-down pleasure craft, so the wave rider ski was devised some 35 years later to satisfy the surfing fraternity who wanted a manoeuvrable craft, half the length of their competition models. The first wave ski was built by Hayden Kenny of the Maroubra SLSC, and it was based on a Californian design. Although these skis were never officially accepted as an approved item of rescue gear, Michael Petrie in his position of lifeguard at Queenscliff (NSW) used an 8'6" model built in Byron Bay in his official duties. The original models were produced and used without a fin but it wasn't long before they were added, so that cut-backs, re-entries and tube rides could be accommodated.

In Victoria in the early 1970s, the first commercially made units were produced by Fred Pike of Torquay. The upper and lower sections were made from moulds, and were joined at the seams. Although they were quite heavy, they offered a new dimension to surfing. Some clubs purchased these for member training and recreation, and Channel 7 also presented some at surf carnivals as trophies.

The popularity of this form of surfing increased, and more club members purchased them, also wave ski races were incorporated in carnival programs. The natural progression was for keen competitors to produce a special 'speed' model with less banana and weight. Unfortunately, this move resulted in the lack of support for the event by those who owned and paddled a normal surf model. After a few years the event lapsed through lack of support and it was also considered that long-ski competitors were not short of carnival events.

The popularity of the wave ski increased, with craft being produced by many different makers, all with different ideas of shape and length. Many club members continued to enjoy the manoeuvrability and flexibility, much to the annoyance of the regular board riders who now had to share the big surf.

Many rescues were effected by club members proficient in their use; one instance recorded the saving of a mother and two children caught in a run-out, by a single wave ski paddler.

In their heyday many clubhouse racks contained twelve or more of these craft and it was normal to see them at such places as Pt. Grey at Lorne, Moggs Creeks, Pt. Roadknight, the Glaneuse Reef at Pt. Lonsdale, '2nd surf' at Cape Patterson and many other 'special' locations including Torquay point. For the period of the inclusion of the wave rider in competition, the names that stood out were the Maishman brothers, Tim and Brett of Pt. Lonsdale, and Max Stevens of Torquay.

Some of the 'favourite' spots

Special mention should be given to Rex 'China' Gilbert who, one Easter Monday, cracked two perfect nine foot waves from the point into the creek mouth (in flood) beside the clubhouse at Torquay. In the 1952 Victorian Championships at Portsea, 'China' went closest to getting past the break in facing 30 foot 'blocks of flats' which caused the postponement of most events.

Warrnambool had its favourite locations in Little Beach, the Flume and Grannys. For the dedicated, a trip to Levi's Point off the Dennington Road was a challenge. A half mile walk crossing five sand dunes, plus a huge inshore dump, had to be negotiated before clean surf was encountered. Board riders of Warrnambool included Wes McLear, Stan Stevens, Chicken Johnson, Gil Harris, Aub Hill, John Dodds, Ken Smith, Peter O'Rorke and George Day (Australian Champion).

Anglesea riders had the luxury of two venues, one being the main beach and the other Point Roadknight which afforded a half mile ride on a good day. Its other luxury was the ability to walk back around the beach to launch one's craft just inside the point—it saved a long paddle!

Regulars here were David and Robert Kennedy, Bruce 'Rabbit' Patterson, Geoff Sonley, Jimpy Shears, John Laird and Doug Solly.

At Lorne it was normal to encounter about 10 riders out at any time in large or small surf. An easterly was a special challenge and on special days, boards could be seen at Point Wilson (out from the pier) and occasionally opposite the Cora-Lyn Roadhouse. Lorne's first rider on his Sports Craft board (named 'Thora J' after a Colac nurse) was Don Stewart, followed by Barney Hunter and Brian Whitcomb. After that came Guy Bonsey, Alan Clissold, Geoff Tune, Tony Vickers, Alan Atkins, John Westacott, Ned and Stewart Stribling, the Correll Brothers, Bruce Tayler, John Scott and Bryan Poynton who is still currently surfing on his board 'rescued' from the Lorne rubbish tip.

Ocean Grove, with its half mile long beach, sported some good riders, namely Dick and Graeme Tribe, Arthur Stone, Bryan Poynton and Bruce McGeorge.

In 1947, Point Lonsdale had its long board pioneers in Les Higham, Arthur and Russell Hooper and Harry Windmill. The latter three first built a 14 foot board but, after a trip to the Australian Championships and being billeted at the Manly Clubhouse, Fred Notting showed them how the locals constructed boards. On their return they made two sixteen foot models based on the plan depicted in the 'SLSA Blue Book' of the day. Harry then built a fourteen footer which was painted with stripes. In the early fifties, Bill Pearson featured on long boards taking over Vic Tantau's superseded models.

Point Lonsdale's patrolled beach of that era was situated just west of the lighthouse and the large seas presented a challenge to board riders. After a long south-westerly blow, the surf in front of the shops was excellent for long boards as they peaked at about eight feet and offered a 300 yard ride to the beach. Now (2001), on such days, Bruce Tayler can still be seen riding his 45 year old long board at this venue.

Before the formation of Wye River Club, a small group headed by Bryan Poynton built a board and attempted to master the local dumpers. Alas, the board ultimately broke in two! Doug Burden was also a Wye board rider - but without mishap.

At Port Fairy Graeme Woodruff was the local long board specialist.

Portsea surf produced one of which special mention must be made. Mike Wilson was the solitary rider who became Victorian Champion in 1965.

There are a couple of occasions where skill and courage presented spectacles of note. One was at Apollo Bay Carnival (West beach) in the late 1950s, when huge waves breaking onto a shallow sandbar destroyed many events. During the March Past team assembly, 'China' Gilbert picked up a monster wave and out-rode the dump to the applause of the crowd.

The other was at Point Lonsdale in the same era, after a 'big' day when events had concluded, Geoff Emerson launched himself on to a monster wave which ultimately completely swallowed him. Once again, a standing ovation greeted him on his return to the beach.

In summary Victoria has had great success in Open Ski paddling over its 50 years and more, the Torquay Club featuring in the record books with 15 wins at Australian Championships. However the strength and continued enthusiasm of all will see the next fifty years' history feature many more Victorian Ski paddlers.

The many changes in boards, from solid planks to short malibus have embraced this segment of surf life saving and the development and achievements of Victorians involved is immense.

Beach Events

Introduction

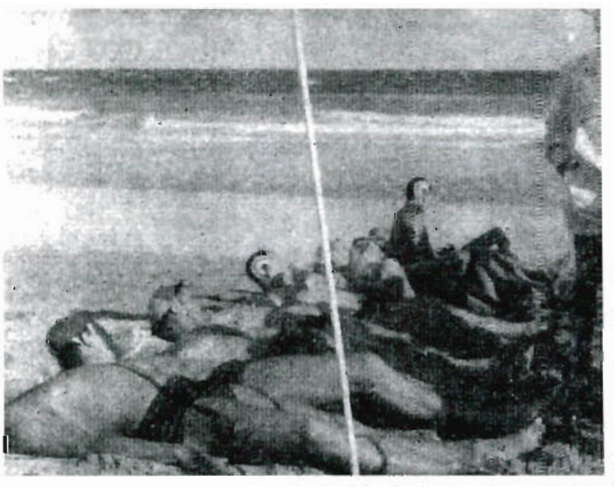

Surf carnivals have always included beach events designed to sharpen members' discipline, agility on the sand and to promote observation. The March Past was the discipline event originally comprising twelve members and on many occasions it included all competing personnel of a small club.

The standard dress was full-length speedos and club cap. A club pennant was carried. Special March Past reels and attractive club costumes were worn to improve the team's presentation. The dominant championship winners were Warrnambool and Fairhaven.

Following the march up the beach, VIPs and local dignitaries spoke, presentations were made and occasionally a new surfboat was christened.

Lack of club support stemming from the time intrusion on competitors has led to the March Past being relegated to championship days.

Sprinting, that is the beach sprint and the relay, have always been popular with competitors and spectators alike. On days when surf conditions prevented holding a full program, beach events satisfied the crowds. The need for lifesavers to reach a rescue site complete with equipment requires speed of movement and the two running events were designed to promote this.

Victoria's narrow beaches present the unfair situation where competitors can draw positions in soft sand or shallow water. At championships, it is necessary to provide a constant surface across the field, so venues with adequate depth are usually chosen. At early carnivals, there was no event specialisation, with swimmers, paddlers and rowers having a run. Some rural clubs such as Lorne shared members with the local fire brigade who also held regular competitions, hence their early domination of sprints and relays.

As more specialist runners came on the scene, judging became critical. Members who came from Harriers or athletics clubs were critical of the judging standards.

In time, judges also became area specialists to improve the standard.

At the Victorian championships one year, the Stawell Gift Starting Gate system operated by the McLean family was utilised.

The flags event was designed to sharpen and develop the reflexes, observation and speed of a lifesaver. It was originally called 'Musical Flags' but the music was dispensed with due to the public address system being too far from the area. With a whistle blast signalling 'Go'and the flags being changed to sections of garden hose, the event name became 'Beach Flags'.

For many years the flags were inserted in the sand over random distances and width placings while the competitors lay face-up. The visual identification of their placing was as important as the speed of the runner. This appealed to the footballers such as Neil Roberts, John Westacott and Cliff Deakin who could demonstrate their winter talents.

As specialist sprinters entered the beach flags, the varying distances were classed as unfair, so a set distance of evenly placed flags was adopted, depreciating the spectator enjoyment.

The pillow fight was a popular novelty event set up for the enjoyment of the competitors and public alike. With a length of 150-200mm round pole supported above the soft sand, two competitors belted each other until an opponent fell. The only rule stipulated was that the free hand must hold the rear of the bathers.

As Pennants were presented for this event, so competitors viewed it quite seriously. One Australian champion even had a blazer pocket embroidered noting his win.

The chariot race was another novelty event usually arranged in an impromptu manner if water events were cancelled and both competitors and spectators were in need of stimulation.

Some famous beach sprinters recall their experiences.

Beach Events in the 1960s

By Peter Robinson, Torquay

The Competition Handbook applicable in the 1960s euphemistically referred to as the 'Red Book', listed beach events under the heading 'Beach and Novelty Events'. Despite the name, most competitors at carnivals generally competed in the Beach Events.

There were three distinct events:

1. The Beach Sprint
2. The Relay Race
3. The Musical Flags

The Beach Sprint was run over about a 100-metre distance depending on tide and hour of the day. The tide was a major determining feature as the event was always held late in the carnival program. The start position for runners was either crouch or standing start. The Officials did not concern themselves about equal track conditions. Some runners had hard sand near the water's edge and others jostled to the softer dry sand. There were no judges appointed for track infringements, just a starter and some Board of Examiners on the finishing line.

Despite the apparent unequal conditions there were four standout performers in the 1960s: Norm Stewart from Lorne, Pete Davies from Point Leo, Bill Johnson from Torquay and David Curtis from Jan Juc. The Beach Sprint was subject to the rule of 'two breaks and you are out!'

After the Sprint the clubs lined up for the relay. Competition was fierce and particularly so on the BP Carnival day, when points were important for the BP boat to be won by the club with the highest aggregate points on the day. On other carnival dates the Beach Relay returned to a novelty event run over the same distance as the sprint and standing baton changes for the receiver of the baton. The writer's memory is that rarely were there heats followed by a final, generally it was 10 to15 teams lined up and started followed by a sand-storm for the next 70 to 90 seconds.

The Musical Flags was next and the last event at most carnivals. It was after the boaties had finished their races and all the Board of Examiners present on the beach moved into the central beach area and placed pieces of rubber hose randomly throughout the area whilst the competitors were told to lay down on their backs, heels closest to the starting line.

The boaties often competed in their buoyancy vests. The vests assisted their view of flag placement since they were elevated in the back and shoulder area by the bulky vests.

The race started when the music stopped. The boaties generally shared first, second and third places as no one in their right mind would run and dive for a piece of rubber hosing knowing that there was a boatie upright and building a head of steam behind. Unless a non-boatie could be guaranteed to run, pick up and clear the area well before the boaties arrived, they ran dead. Needless to say the winners generally weighed in at 95 to 115 kg.

The duration of the beach and novelty events usually took 10 to15 minutes to complete. Everyone then moved off the beach to the after carnival barrel which was a regular event after every carnival and many happy times were spent with our bronzed aussie mates.

Two of those Novelty Events from early days were the 'pillow fight' and 'Chariot Race'. The pillow fight put two lifesavers opposing on a 100mm-200mm diameter pole at about 1500mm above the sand. The one remaining on the pole after belting the 'stuffing' out of one another was the winner.

A Chariot Race was a team event which consisted of a line up from each club on the day. The race was conducted over various distances but usually on the hard sand. The team was made up of three runners, one jockey and two towels. You had to finish over the line intact. These were good fun days.

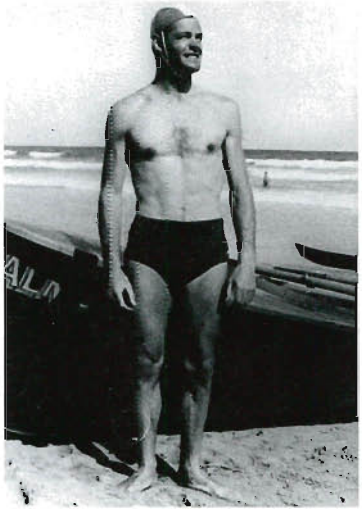

From the 1960s, beach events became much more serious with carefully measured distance, camera photo finish equipment and some very serious coaching and training.

The Anglesea Club in Victoria have not only stood out in this section of competition, but have dominated, as did Lorne in early days with Norm Stewart winning nine Victorian Titles in a row.

Some of the Anglesea Club's achievements, coached by Olympian Peter Van Miltenburg (also a team member) have included Australian and Victorian Gold medals.

Formative credit for the club's continued dominance goes to the sadly now deceased Bruce 'Smoothy' Thompson.

The beach events at carnivals are no longer regarded as the novelty events but are very much seen as measures of quickening reaction and speed of application for any situation.

On The Beach

By Norm Stewart, nine times Victorian Beach Sprint Champion

My time in surf life saving started in 1957 with Lorne. I competed in my first Beach Sprint at the Lorne Carnival in 1959. The carnival was held at the mouth of the Erskine River as the beach in front of the clubhouse had been washed away.

I came second to John Stubbings, the then State Champion. John suggested I should train. I took his advice and started training Tuesday and Thursday nights on the beach in front of Kalimna Boarding House. I was embarrassed that somebody might see me, nevertheless it paid off!

I won my first Sprint later that year at the first televised carnival at Anglesea (1959). John Stubbings was 2nd and we had a good elbowing contest all the way (there were no rules in those days).

Two weeks later I won my first of nine state sprint titles. I was just 17 years old. Bob Clarke also from Lorne was 2nd.

Later that day in the Victorian Championships Beach Relay, I dropped the baton at the last change whilst leading. Our team consisted of my Brother, Don Stewart, Bob Clarke, Murray Mill and myself. Millsy never forgave me, we were all devastated.

That same day they held up the Sprint while I paid out line for Mac Greening in the Junior Belt final.

Times have certainly changed: today if you are not on the line they start without you.

I was not beaten in a Beach Sprint in Victoria until 1963 when Bill Johnson beat me. Can't remember at which carnival.

Bill Johnson from Torquay was the most talented sprinter of my era, in my opinion. With the right application he would have won many more sprints than he did. Bob King from Anglesea was the most determined. A terrific competitor. Other sprinters of note were Peter Davies, John Silver from Pt. Leo, Dave Curtis of Jan Juc and Peter White of Anglesea.

As mentioned, when I first started there were no lanes, everybody jostled for the bottom of the beach. A couple of years later, because of the fracas continuing carnival after carnival, we drew for positions. I can't remember ever running a Beach Sprint in lanes. I retired from running in 1972.

One of the great things in that era was the mateship among competitors. Some of my best friendships were made in the five State Surf Teams of which I was a member. Also the club loyalty was tremendous. One would never think of switching clubs, as is the norm today.

I am not much for keeping records but from memory I won two State Musical Flags. You then started from on your back, hoses were placed at random and it was a real bun fight. John Russell of Torquay used to give me heaps.

We are still mates.

At my first Aussie Titles at Merewether in 1960 I had a milkshake and ice cream in the Marshalling area while everybody else was warming up. Talk about inexperience. However I made the final.

My Australian Title results were 2nd, 3rd, 4th and 5th. I also won one Open Beach Sprint in the Interstate Championships on the Saturday of the Aussies, and came 2nd and 3rd on two other occasions.

Towards the end of my era we had a fairly successful Beach Relay Team which won a State Title and came 2nd and 3rd at two Australian Titles with thanks to the other members: Steve Oakley, Colin Cruse and Phil Davey.

Beach Sprinting 1966 - 1981

By Robert King, Anglesea

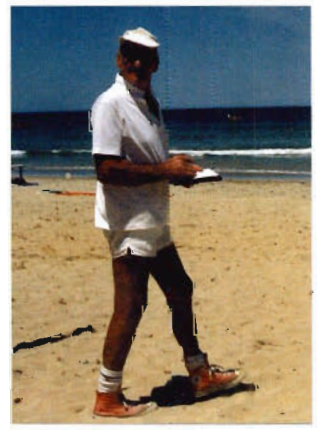

In the early 1960s Bruce Thompson (Smoothie) was one of a group of older members who decided they would get their surf bronze. Although in his early forties he was determined to contribute to the competition side of the Anglesea club. Beach sprinting in the 1960s was dominated by Norm Stewart of Lorne who eventually won nine Victorian sprint titles. Bruce decided that he was going to do something in the running area.

By 1965 Bruce had a small group of runners with Peter White, Richard Bain, Ron Dyson, Gary Orm and Alan Dow. At the 1966 Victorian Championships at Lakes Entrance Bruce achieved his first success, a third in the beach relay title, with a team of Peter White, Ron Dyson, Richard Bain and Robert King.

Peter White had been a successful junior track athlete and competed with the Mentone Athletics Club. Robert King had joined the Anglesea lifesaving Club as a swimmer in 1966 and competed in Junior R&R and occasionally filled in relays when there was no clash in competition.

This modest success set the seed for Anglesea's great run of almost unbroken dominance of beach events for the following 15 years. A key to this dominance was Robert King joining the East Melbourne Harriers Athletic Club, the premier sprinting club in Australia at the time. Importantly it introduced him into the athletics scene that over the next decade enabled tapping into a rich pool of sprinters for Anglesea then ultimately Victoria.

In the 1966/67 season Anglesea started to win beach relays and flags and Robert King started to win beach sprints. He was unbeatable on hard sand as evidenced by his win against the South African Champion, Dr Barry Kaufman at Torquay in January 1967 and captured on film by Ray Marsh. At the State Titles in 1967 Anglesea won the Beach Relay for the first time. In the sprint title, however Norm Stewart of Lorne showed his great experience on soft sand by again winning the Beach Sprint Title in 1967. Although Robert King was now consistently winning sprints at carnivals, recognised by his inclusion in the Victorian State Surf Lifesaving Team, it would be another two years before he was able to claim the State title from Norm Stewart.

Anglesea was often placed in Beach Flags. At this time competitors started Beach flags on their backs, with their heads towards the water, and often arms touching. It was not until around 1970 that the current method was introduced.

For the first time Anglesea in 1967, sent runners to the Australian Titles, held at South Port, South Australia, with Peter White, Richard Bain, Ron Dyson and Robert King getting fourth place in the Australian Open Beach Flag final. The following year they gained third place at North Cronulla.

By 1969 Bruce Thompson had a group consisting of Peter White, Graeme Daley, Ron Dyson, Richard Bain, Alan Dow, Rob King, Peter McGain and Ian McGain. Graeme Daley had transferred from Fairhaven. The strength of the Anglesea beach area was highlighted by the inclusion of Peter White, Alan Dow and Robert King in the Victorian State Surf Team in 1969 at Clifton Beach, Tasmania. Victoria went on to win the Handicap and outright points score against the other states.

At the Australian Titles at Ocean Grove, during Easter 1970, the relay team of Bain, Daly, White and King won silver in the relay. Victoria is the only place where beach sprints are held on hard sand and Robert King's track abilities were evident in his convincing winning of the Australian Beach Sprint Titles. Robert King was selected in the Australian Team for the three test series against South Africa to be held in early 1971.

At the first Test against South Africa at Lorne in February 1971, on soft sand Robert defeated the South African's champion Dr. Barry Kauffman, as he had done three years ago at Torquay, in such commanding style that he was named man of the Test. An interesting aspect of this tour was the anti-apartheid protests. At Lorne they were peaceful and at Burleigh Heads in Queensland there were no protests. However, at the third Test at Coogee in Sydney demonstrators disrupted the March Past. As Australia had basically severed sporting contacts with South Africa at that time, it was of interest that the Surf Life Saving Movement persisted with sporting contact with South Africa. It was expected that any sporting contact with the apartheid regime in South Africa would bring public protest and disquiet.

The 1970/71 season concluded at the Australian Titles in Perth saw Robert King take Silver, on soft sand, in the Australian Beach Sprint Title behind P. Burke, Manly, Pete Rademeyer, Sth Africa 3rd, and Barry Kauffman, Sth Africa, 4th.

For the period 1971 to 1973 Robert King continued to win the Sprint titles and John Baldock, who joined the runners in 1970, won the Beach Flag Titles in 1971 and 1972. However, unavailability of Peter White, Ron Dyson, Graeme Daly and Richard Bain from 1971 saw Anglesea relinquish control of the Relay Titles to Lorne in 1971 and 1972. Both Anglesea and Lorne performed indifferently in relays at the 1971 and 1972 Australian Titles.

By 1972 it was evident to Rob King and Bruce Thompson that no Victorian club would win a National relay title against Sydney strength unless the best in Victoria gathered into one club. A program of targeted and deliberate recruiting commenced. Robert King, through his track competition, was well known in athletics. The regular Saturday interclub athletics competition and the Monday to Thursday late afternoon training sessions at Olympic Park had meant he had established a large network of contacts. By late 1972 Robert had recruited Gary Holdsworth (ex Olympic sprinter), Carry Hayton, Ken Scarfe and Bruce Warlow from East Melbourne Harriers, Greg Plant from Sandringham Athletics Club and Gary Bourne from Box Hill Harriers (and the Lorne Surf Club). Brad Trotter, the 1973 Australian Beach Title Champion from WA, moved to Victoria to join the Moorabbin Athletics Club to advance his athletics career and Robert succeeded in recruiting him to Anglesea. Paul Busst was recruited from NSW.

For the next two years, 1974 and 1975, Anglesea was unassailable in the beach area. Team spirit was high with the large group training regularly at the Melbourne University track, Olympic Park and Middle Park on the sand - the latter under the watchful eye of Bruce Thompson. Brad Trotter won both the Beach Sprint Titles, Gary Bourne both the Flag Titles, with the other Anglesea competitors taking out the minor placings. Anglesea had up to four senior relay teams, which were so competitive that the Anglesea 'B' won the State Title in 1974. Three senior relay teams competed at the Australian Titles in Glenelg, South Australia in 1974, with two teams making the final and several runners in both sprint and flag finals.

Anglesea, for the second time, took silver in the Australian Beach Relay final at Glenelg in 1974 with the team of Brad Trotter, Gary Bourne, Bill Phillips, and Robert King. This was the first of four years where Anglesea would win silver in the Open Australian Beach Relay Final. The same team took silver in 1970, 1974, 1975 and 1977.

An interesting feature of the 1974 season was that the Australian 100 metre sprint champion and Christchurch Commonwealth Games 100 and 200 metre finalist, Graham Haskell, was competing for Waratah Beach. On the track he could crush the best beach sprinters, however, drawn in an Australian Beach Sprint Semi Final at Glenelg, in very soft sand, Graham came a disappointing last— which highlighted the difficulties some track runners had converting to the sand.

By 1976 the beach line-up had changed somewhat. Brad Trotter returned to WA and Gary Bourne moved to Queensland. However, Anglesea continued its dominance in the beach area with Peter White returning to competition and Tony Short and Peter Fidler contributing strongly. Anglesea won all titles. This year saw the first Victorian Team to New Zealand with Anglesea being represented by Robert King, John Baldock and Warren Clarke. In the Victorian Open Beach, Peter Van Miltenburg, competing as a junior for Jan Juc, was second to Robert King in the final and both were selected in the Victorian Surf Team to Tasmania.

The end of 1976 saw further recruiting by Robert King with Peter Van Miltenburg and Fred Lehmann joining the club. Fred Lehmann represented Australia at the Pac Conference Games in 1977 gaining third place in 100 metres.

In 1977, at the Australian Titles at Bancoora, Peter White, Peter Van Miltenburg and Robert King made the Australian Beach Sprint Final with Robert King, at age 29, gaining third place in a blanket finish. With three Anglesea competitors in the Beach sprint final, a victory in the Beach Relay Final seemed assured. However, Anglesea drew the top lane, which had 15 metres of soft sand. It was enough of a handicap such that Cairns, in lane one in rock hard sand, just pipped the Anglesea Team of Peter White, Peter Van Miltenburg, Robert King and Fred Lehmann in the final.

The State Titles in 1978 saw the Beach sprint title won by Peter Van Miltenburg, with Anglesea again winning the Relay Title. At the Australian Titles that year in Kingscliffe in NSW, Peter Van Miltenburg won the Australian Open Beach Sprint Championship. The Relay Team of Peter White, Peter Van Miltenburg, Tony Short and Robert King was leading in the Relay Final when they dropped the batten. This result, added to the four narrow seconds over four championships (1970, 1974, 1975, 1977) was enough for the team. The reality was, notwithstanding the incredibly talented runners Anglesea had had over the years and energy that had been expended, Anglesea had missed its chance at the relay championship. The disappointment was profound. Although Anglesea continued to be very competitive at State level for the next three years, continuing to win titles, it would be almost another decade before Anglesea again sent a relay team to the Australian titles. Robert King never again competed at the Australian Titles.

Although now disinterested in Australian Titles, there was still commitment at State level. In late 1978 Robert King and Greg Plant initiated one last round of track recruitment attracting Peter Fitzgerald and Ted Sztefek. Peter Fitzgerald was a semi-finalist in the 200 metres for Australia at the Montreal Olympic Games. Anglesea continued to win relays with Fred Lehmann winning the State Beach Sprint Title in 1979 and Ted Sztefek in 1981.

At the end of 1981, Rob King, after16 years of competition, decided to call it quits. The track athletes drifted away and so ended a period of Anglesea dominance in the beach area that had run almost unchallenged from 1966. It was to be another five years until Anglesea again began to feature prominently in the Beach area, this was again under the guidance of Bruce Thompson when Mike Spiby, Ken Wallace, Paul Congues, Andrew and his brother Peter Macintosh, and Mark Fraser came to Anglesea.

Over the 15 years from 1967 to 1981 Anglesea won 12 Victorian senior Beach Sprint titles with Robert King winning 8 titles, Brad Trotter two and Peter Van Miltenburg, Fred Lehmann and Ted Sztefek one apiece. Anglesea had won 13 Relay titles and six straight Flag Titles from 1971 to 1976 with two apiece to John Baldock, Gary Bourne and Robert King. At the Australians the record was two Beach Sprint titles (Robert King and Peter Van Miltenburg), a second and a third, and five silver medals and a bronze in the relay Title.

Robert King won eight Victorian State Sprint Titles, two Victorian Flag Titles and was a member of 10 winning State Relay Title teams. He achieved a first, second and a third in Australian Beach Sprint Finals and was a member of 11 Victorian Surf Life Saving Teams and one Australian Surf Life Saving Team.

Memories of a Beach Sprinter

By Russell Middleton, Ocean Grove

"Congratulations! Well done!" I couldn't believe it, and I still treasure that moment when I won my first pennant as a member of the Ocean Grove junior relay team at Bancoora in 1971, all at the tender age of 14.

Winning my first pennant fed a hunger for beach events that effectively lasted some 20 years. I competed in all areas: boat, beach, ski and (horror of horrors!) R&R. I won nine Open Beach Flags, State titles, one Open Beach Relay State title, a number of Wieland Shield representations (including a USA tour in 1987), a State team representation to New Zealand (together with that absolute character, Howard Hughes), numerous medals for State title placings, and more than 50 pennants covering all fields from A grade boat to four-man R&R.

In the early seventies, I was primarily a junior boatie. Believe it or not, we were very good, but sweeps did not appreciate a boating prodigy concentrating on other events. Consequently my input into beach events was sporadic and dependent upon boat finals.

On the other hand, judges and officials were very kind to me and, if practicable, would hold up an event to allow me to run from the boat area to the beach area to compete. That sort of thing is not likely nowadays! Absolutely exhausted, I would compete under the gaze of that unflappable, bigger-than-life, legend-of-the-whistle Harry Pittard, an official extraordinaire! I vividly recall angst-ridden Harry (all of 5 foot 2 inches) once chesting a 6 foot plus bloke, who accidentally walked across the field, out of the flags area.

As a junior, my life was a drudgery but I learnt quickly that to progress in the senior ranks was going to take determination, patience, skill and most importantly some form of tenacity. Tenacity has to be acquired, I discovered — it is not born into you.

In those formative years I was in awe of my seniors. On more than one occasion I was pummelled by the champs of the day. John Baldock from any aspect is not a small man and I've had my share of thumpings from John in many a contest. Time builds strong affinities and I have utmost respect for John who perhaps instilled in me the need to have more than just ability.

Anglesea has bred many beach champions and one who excelled in beach sprints at that time was Bob King. Bob was truly a champion. Although competitive at flags, he was a master in the beach sprint and proved it by winning a National Title. In jest, however, Bob King was always more polite than John Baldock in the flags — my memory proves it.

Anglesea was a club that dominated carnivals and the beach area in particular during this era. Clubs seem to breed specialities and both Ocean Grove and Anglesea over these times had strong beach teams. More often than not I would be faced with a flags final consisting of myself and usually three or four very determined Anglesea competitors. But times were changing.

Towards the end of the seventies, Ocean Grove had a young group of beach competitors and there was intense competition in all beach area events between Anglesea, Torquay and ourselves. New faces began to dominate the scene, in particular Gary Bourne from Lorne in the Open Flags and Peter Van Miltenburg from Anglesea in the sprint. Anglesea could still muster regular success in the Beach Relays.

Like most youngsters (with changeable minds), beach competition was not a priority in my life then, and to my regret I did not place great emphasis upon my most natural skills. I drifted from various events including the waverider and ski races. I remember how gullible I was when leading a waverider race and not knowing whether or not to turn the closest buoy or one further out. In naivety I yelled for someone behind me to tell me which buoy. A very helpful voice replied, "It's the one further out!" Back on the beach after I'd lost the race 'Horror' Hazeldine, the source of that helpful voice, could not stop laughing. Another lesson learnt!

When my rowing days finished, beach competition became my focus. Bob King and John Baldock were basically past their best and an intense rivalry grew in the beach flags between myself and Gary Bourne from Lorne. Anglesea dominated the beach relay and Peter Van Miltenburg excelled in the beach sprints. It is a pity that other names did not play a more dominant part. I recall Ian Guyett from Ocean Grove who won an Australian Junior Beach Sprint title in 1977 at Bancoora and Shane Dowling of Lorne who dominated Junior Flags. But as we have seen with such talents before, they drift off into other activities.

Ironically the flags were quite often the last event and in those days carried points to determine various carnival prizes. I remember being caught up in all that intensity when the flags were the deciding event between Torquay and Anglesea winning a surf boat. Over 90 competitors were lined up, including every boatie who could be mustered from those clubs. In the end it came down to John Russell from Torquay and myself. I won, but John was content since Torquay got the points required.

Gary Bourne (Lorne) was very good at the flags, as proven by two places at the National Titles — 1976 and 1978 —which I'm sure inspired me to beat him whenever possible. Our contests were intense and spanned numerous years. Results were greatly weighted in my favour and I beat Gary at most encounters including State Titles. In one season at least I was unbeaten at every competition.

A bitter memory of this period is why I never received State Team selection or contested a National Title. I knew I had the ability because I had previously beaten both Gary Bourne and the young competitor from Grange (South Australia) who would later hold the National Title. Perhaps at first it was because I did not do R&R, which was important from a State perspective. Yet after a year of similar results - and competing in R&R—the result was still 'no selection'.

Ocean Grove club, unlike Anglesea or Torquay, did not have the infrastructure or support systems to cater to the needs of such competitors as myself. Team fundraising and coaching did not exist. To some degree in these circumstances, club loyalty could prove detrimental. Yet overall I will always appreciate the support and encouragement of state officials of the time such as Peter Taylor, Eddie Kidd, Ken Galloway, Garry Titter, George Missen and spectators like Tony Strahan who would always congratulate me after a win. I have always regarded Tony as more of a champion than myself! I toured the USA with Tony later in 1987 and he is a person who gives his all.

Gary Bourne (Lorne) eventually left the Victorian scene. Portsea then came to the fore in beach events, undoubtedly fired up by Peter Van Miltenburg. Peter came out with all guns blazing and was unbeatable in the sprint. Portsea had a very strong relay team and my mate Rowan 'Horse' Cameron was quick, strong and aggressive in the flags. 'Horse' was my toughest opponent over two decades.

Over a number of seasons we ran off many a final, again weighted in my favour, but not without many tense moments. I recall time after time the flags area being packed with spectators watching. It always reminded me of the Colosseum with spectators expecting or wishing to see blood on the sand and yelling all sorts of expletives. I even remember my wife Lindy being extracted from an altercation with a group of Portsea supporters. They were tough excitable times. 'Drugs' from Woolamai was a great beach sprinter of the time as well and would always support me in these wild and woolly times.

Sprints over the next few years belonged to Peter Van Miltenburg who returned to Anglesea and secured some well-deserved National Titles. Once again Anglesea dominated the relay areas. My later competitive years saw Anglesea return to dominate the sprint and relay areas, with a new face, Ken Wallace, surfacing in the beach flags. Ken was a very competent sprinter and more than capable at beach flags. A new competitive era began with rivalry between myself and Ken Wallace, a rivalry that would have its highs and lows and eventually spell the end of my open career.

Over a number of seasons beach area dominance waxed and waned between Ocean Grove and Anglesea but luck and skill allowed me to still exert some dominance over the beach flags. Competition was tough and I remember being selected over Ken to be a member of the 1987 Wieland Shield team to tour the USA—at age 31 years if I wasn't selected I never would be.

Competitive rivalry, however, is a strange beast and I recall breaking Ken Wallace's arm in the flags at a 13th Beach carnival. I felt sorry for Ken but couldn't help having some bent delight that it would make my life a little easier in the upcoming Victorian Titles. I won the flags but Ken Wallace ran in the sprint, cast and all, and still managed a medal!

But disaster struck when I competed in State Titles for what I thought would be my tenth Open Beach Flags Title. If I won, it would be my swan song in surf life saving competition!

As before, it was a run off between Ken Wallace and myself. As the whistle sounded we were away and I thought I had it in 'the bag'. I led all the way but somehow Ken came completely over the top of me and placed his hand in front of mine to grab the final flag. In doing so his complete body weight came down on my shoulder, driving me into the sand and dislocating my shoulder. One moment the flag was virtually in my hand— the next it was suddenly gone and I was in excruciating pain. At that point I was the vanquished (was this Ken's revenge?) and never destined to gain a tenth title. What's worse is that Ray 'Swampy'Marsh captured the finish on film and the photo hangs both in the Anglesea and Ocean Grove clubs.

Thus ended my two decades of a competitive career. After that, Masters events are fine but do not have the adrenalin buzz of hard core Open competition and the absolute importance of winning.

Special memories pass into mind, such as Harry Windmill and Phil McGibbon continually calling the progress of the flags like a 'do or die' spectacle and good competitors like Ken Goulding (USA 1987) who was a board paddler but very hard to beat in the flags.

But names change yet the cycle persists and the rivalry has passed on to new names. Ocean Grove and Anglesea continue to fight it out in the beach area today, although I just can't see that it is as intense as it used to be —but maybe that's only a memory.

My Beach Memories

By Peter van Miltenburg, Anglesea

As a child growing up in country Victoria I was not exposed to the beach culture of Australia that I was to embrace as a teenager and develop as an adult.

The bronzed Aussie, blonde blue eyed image of a lifesaver was something I had seen in posters, on post cards and movie reels, particularly the March Past teams. The full body costumes to this day still amuse me, but in context with tradition and R&R team's competition uniform, it seems so appropriate and would lack visual impact without them.

I have brought to mind the March Past, because, although this article is primarily about beach competition, in reality the March Past is a beach event. The team may march with a reel but no member of the team enters the water, and at all times the entire team is together on the beach. Each team consisted primarily of the more senior members of the club, long retired from more physical activities. Australian Surf Life Saving was then an all male institution, with many of the clubs set up by people who lived on the beach, holidayed by the beach or were recruited to the club because of their sporting prowess.

It seems that with clubs like Warrnambool and Portland who were very strong with March Past teams, that the majority of their team were ex-army RSL members who were well drilled in marching and precision movement. Sadly, that generation is lost to us now, and the March Past is not run at local carnivals, only to be seen at State and National Championships. As with the R&R, March Past is truly a team event which requires a great deal of time for training and a passion for regimented skills. Performed by the best, March Past is 'hair on the back of your neck raising' stuff; at its worst it is uncoordinated, awkward and embarrassing. It strikes me that a great deal of club pride can be gained by doing it well, be it only a smaller but better trained team of R&R competitors.

My first introduction to surf life saving came at a school assembly, when two members of Jan

Peter van Miltenburg, Anglesea Gold Medalist, Open Beach Sprint, Kingscliff, NSW, 1978.

Juc SLSC spoke to us about all the activities held at carnivals. As a sprinter, the idea of running over 90 m. on soft sand held no great challenge, but I was to find out fairly soon that my youthful naivety would come regularly undone. In my first race with 40 m. to go I hit the wall and could not pick my knees up to save myself. I gained a new respect for sand runners and the sport I was to become obsessed with.

There were three events I could enter, the 90 m. sprint, the 4 x 90 m. relay and the flags, then known as musical flags. At my first National competition, there was also an event, 'The Pillow Fight', which I have not seen since, for as much fun as it appeared to be and popular with the crowds, it has disappeared. Boaties who were eliminated from their rowing competition and anyone with a good grip, a solid right swing and a lot of weight behind them could be an Australian Champion. "At what?" you ask. At sitting on an elevated horizontal pole which was slippery, putting one arm behind your back and holding onto your bathers whilst with the other hand you held a pillow. Two competitors face each other on the pole and proceed to belt each other until eventually one falls off.

The only rule I can recall was that if you let go of your bathers from behind to gain balance, you were disqualified. After a series of heats, the final was usually a collision of the titans which had the crowd roaring with anticipation, as each blow hit what appeared to be a man made of concrete. Sooner or later someone slipped, someone let go, or someone got hammered.

Along with tug-o-war, which used to be an Olympic event, this novelty sport is a thing of the past. Perhaps the boaties need to re-ignite this event at the post competition celebrations, as nothing can compere with the brute strength of a boatie and a bit of fun and lighthearted games are often better than being hammered with a bottle.

Perhaps the most unique of all events at a carnival and certainly presenting one of the most nerve-wracking finals — having the crowd on edge until there are only two competitors vying for one flag — is the beach flags event.

Formerly known as musical flags due to music being played and stopped to signal athletes to start, as with musical chairs, beach flags is fast, physical and a cut throat competition. Originally athletes would lie on their backs, feet facing the water's edge, shoulder to shoulder. When the music stopped competitors would turn their bodies over with chest then on the sand, move into a block start position and then accelerate to full speed over 20 m. and grab a flag. With today's competition the athletes lie on their stomachs, feet facing the flags. On the starter's command, 'heads down', athletes place their chins on the top of their hands which are held together, finger tips to wrist. Ankles must be touching and one's chest on the sand. No movement is to take place until the starter's whistle. On that signal athletes push up, twist around to face the flags and as with the original format, first to the flags picks one up, last to the flags is eliminated without a flag in hand.

Finals, as with the sprint and relay, are made up of eight competitors.

In flags, one competitor is eliminated each start. Open men at National finals level will complete the entire action from start to flag in approximately 3.5 seconds and Open women 3.8 seconds. Most competitors are compact in body structure, very powerful over 20 m. with amazing reflexes. There are more fast twitch fibres in an elite flags competitor than perhaps any other athlete at a surf carnival.

Following hot on the heels of flag competitors for speed, are the beach sprinters. They are very lean machines, with great knee lift and arm drive which makes them appear to effortlessly float over the soft sand. The sprint course is run over 90 m. blocks.

Holes are dug by the competitors into the sand, and if a competitor cannot get good height by running over the surface, they can find themselves digging a very deep hole with 30 m. to go, running flat and going nowhere fast.

Over the years a number of Australian track sprint champions have made the transition from synthetic surface to soft sand. Relay players, professional sprinters and soft sand specialists have all made beach sprinting a fantastic spectacle where, unlike the luck of a flags draw or the misfortunes of Mother Nature offering your opposition a wave out the back when you're 40 m. in front, beach sprinting is won by the fastest athlete.

I was very fortunate as a teenager to have this great foundation of beach sprinting, before I moved onto track running at International level. I have always attributed my strength, balance and technical control to my early years of beach sprinting and would highly recommend it to athletes looking for that edge and that extra bit of fun. The relay, as with the sprint, is run over 90 m. Each team comprises four competitors, and the baton, as with the beach flags, is a piece of rubber hose. Competitors run towards each other, with the change over box being only five metres in length.

The baton must be changed inside the box, and if a baton is dropped, the receiver's entire body must be brought back inside the box, before they can continue sprinting. Some very experienced teams have attempted one handed changes, but generally speaking both hands are held up as the target area to take the baton.

The outgoing and incoming speed of both athletes is naturally different, which makes the change over something akin to driving through a toll gate without stopping and still placing the coins into the 'plastic bucket' —hard work and very exciting.

Beach sprinting, flags and the relay have remained, as with most events, true to their beginnings. Perhaps the biggest change of all, not just in the competition area but for the entire surf movement, was the introduction of women as active members of clubs. Women had always been heavily involved in the operation of the clubs but it was simply not recognised. Mothers were always behind the administrators and were unwavering supporters of their husbands or sons. Daughters were always dragged along to training and carnivals, standing by as their brothers and fathers, clad in club Speedos and caps, continued to dominate what was seen by many as one of the last all male bastions in sport.

Thankfully common sense prevailed, and slowly but surely in 1980/81 women entered the competition arena. In other sports like Australian Rules football and cricket, women have successfully joined associations that continue to develop, particularly with the Australian Women's Cricket team, but neither have been embraced by the public and media as have the women competitors in surf life saving. Be it in boats, boards, swimming or beach sprinting, female athletes in all events and age divisions have engendered a balance of equality and excellence in sport to make surf competition the spectacle it is today.

If success is measured by the colour of medals won, then in 1955-56 Warrnambool's Open Men's relay team with third place, marks the beginning of what was to become one of the most consistently successful competition areas at National level for Victoria.

Norm Stewart from Lorne SLSC was our first National individual medallist with a third place in the Open Men's sprint in 1961-62. Stewart went on in the sprint and relays in later years to gain a total of two silvers and two bronze medals.

To date, our greatest beach competitor is undoubtedly Robert King from Anglesea. From 1967-1977, a ten year span, Bobby King not only became our first National title holder on the beach in the Open Men's sprint, but in sprints and relays he accumulated an amazing total of one gold, five silver and two bronze medals.

Jenny Whiting from Torquay was Victoria's first Women's medallist in 1993 with a 3rd place in the Open Women's flags. It was in this event that Victoria had its first National Women's titleholder with Vanessa Guest from Anglesea in 1999.

Elly Hutton from Anglesea came to the beach as a National level track athlete. Whilst still without a National title, Elly stands out as our most successful female athlete with a total of three 2nd's and three 3rd's in all disciplines of sprint, flags and relays.

Elly is the only athlete in Men's or Women's competition to receive medals in all three events at the Nationals. The National titles in the year 2000 may well find Elly equal Bobby King's total of eight medals or go one better. Most athletes on the beach are sprinters or beach flag specialists, who also compete in relays. In this regard Elly is unique and it is a great tribute to her athletic ability that she can compete at that level for three days through heats, semis, quarter finals and the finals.

Following hot on Elly's heels is Tim Williams from Anglesea, who in two short years as a cadet and junior, has won two gold and two silver medals. A National level track runner, Tim, as with Elly, has quite a few years to reach his peak and only time will tell how far both athletes can go.

As previously mentioned, I was very fortunate to be spotted by a track coach after my Open Men's Beach Sprint win in 1978. This meeting plus six years of training enabled me to gain selection in the Australian Athletics team for the 1984 Olympics. On my retirement from track running I returned to Anglesea SLSC as Coach and Beach Captain.

As with Torquay's National strength in boards and ski in the 1970s and 1980s, Anglesea has maintained a dominance on the beach in Victoria during the 1970s, 1980s and 1990s, culminating in 1999 with Anglesea winning an unprecedented two gold, four silver and two bronze medals. This medal tally ranked Anglesea's beach team an overall second nationally. 1999/2000 season results Nationally Abby Lewtas Women's U18 Beach Flags, and Tim Williams won Gold in U18 Men's Beach Sprint. Anglesea also gained bronze in U18 Mens Beach Relay with the team of Tim Williams, Chris Murphy, Tom Simpson and Luke Cotton. The women's team of Abby Lewtas, Elly Hutton, Lucy Robinson and Naomi McGain were placed fourth in the open Beach Relay.

The 2000/01 results include Tim Williams, gold in the under 19 Mens, a Relay gold in the Men's U19 with Steve Landers, Tom Simpson ,and brother Marcus Williams and Relay silver medals in the Open Women's with Abby Lewtas, Elly Hutton, Lucy Robinson and Naomi McGain and U16 Men's Beach Relay Thomas Rimmington, Richard Moore, Rick Taylor, and David Woolsey.

With a very active Nipper program operating in Victoria, and the development of similar squads currently training at Anglesea, other clubs are emerging with National level competitors each year, strengthening the competitive base in all divisions. It is possible within the next five years for Victorian clubs to be the number one State in National beach competition.

Beach Events - Late 1980s early 1990s

By Henry Kiss (Portsea)

The first thing that springs to mind when I reminisce about carnivals in the late 1980s was that Surf Lifesaving Victoria was the very proud owner of a pink Ford Capri convertible! It's hard to believe now, but back then it actually had some sort of appeal!

The next memory is of a lot of rain. It seemed that each race day was colder than the previous, and we 'scurriers' would huddle together in tents whilst waiting for our events to be run. We would also try and hide so that we could escape the March Past!

Many rivalries developed over this period. Amongst the men's teams, Portsea (the 'Plastics' they use to call us, because we were apparently insincere) and Anglesea (or rather 'Angleslime'), would regularly fight it out for relay glory with the former coming up with gold on the day.

Controversy was always a regular occurrence with long debates amongst the judges as to who finished in what order. We also mostly raced on hard sand, unlike the rest of the country, which put us at disadvantage when it came to the National Championships. A timetable disaster at one state championship even had the first two lanes under water, prompting one of the finalists to complain "if I knew how to swim, I wouldn't have to do beach events in the first place."

The individual sprint honours were shared around a few people over this period. Paul Congues and Mark Fraser, U18 sprinters of Anglesea, went on to win at National level, while in the State competition there were Peter Van Miltenburg, Ken Wallis, Mike Spiby, Andrew Mackintosh, Junior Michael Weber (Anglesea), Wayne Stoll and Henry Kiss (Portsea), Rod Kenny (Jan Juc).

The results from Beach Flags were always obvious. Fantastic tussles occurred every time between Wayne Stoll, Ken Wallis, Rod Kenny, David Salsbury (Half Moon Bay), Adrian Schiller (Pt.Leo) and in the juniors Adam Martin (Anglesea) stood out.

The well meaning officials down here in 'Mexico' would try and keep the contests 'clean and by the book'. Unfortunately the rest of the country used an 'anything goes' method which put us at a disadvantage at National level. Despite this, Wayne, Rod and Adam made finals in this period.

The competition was just as fierce for the women's events. The stand out performer in the sprint in the period was Sharon Stewart, (Jan Juc then later Torquay), one of Australia's premier 800 metre track runners. She dominated for a few years at State level but disappointed all the beach runners when she turned to the dark side and married a swimmer.

Ready to step into her shoes, (or should that be thongs?) were Tami Colclough and Simone Arnel, and later Katie O'Brien, all from Portsea and the up coming Juniors the twins from Torquay, Jenny and Debbie Whiting.

As all the competitors matured the event became more of a lottery with each one capable of winning on the right day (although the Whitings did claim the beach flags as their signature event). A very young Elly Hutton, Anglesea also cut her competitive teeth in the beach events and progressed to be a force in track sprints at a National level representing Australia at the Sydney Olympics in 4x100 metres relay.

The disappointing thing for women at the time was a lack of events at National level.

At the time girls could do sprint, a swim or a board race. To protest, the Portsea women entered a team in the men's relay at the North Wollongong Nationals in 1990. They finished well back in their race but managed to get some coverage from the local media at the time. (They were later disqualified because their costumes were two-piece. Hard to believe it was only 10 years ago!)

The women had to be content with their own separate National Titles in 1990 and it wasn't until 1992 that they were allowed a couple more events. Happily Jenny Whiting made the final of the open Women's Beach Flags and Debbie made the final of the sprint at these first extended Australian Titles.

Relays were always exciting, as the result was never a forgone conclusion. Dropped batons and foot faults cost teams dearly, and in one instance a cap not tied properly flew off and caused the team to be disqualified (despite winning by a 'country mile'). The Portsea team was quite strong in those days, but you could never write off Anglesea and Torquay.

Nearly all the competitors from the period now qualify for the Master's competition and it was great to see a few of them earlier this year (2001) at Lorne. Hopefully a few more of them will come out of retirement and rekindle the old friendships of yesteryear.

For me, the most important thing about racing at the time was the friendships I made (oh, and beating the Slimers).

In the 2002 Australian titles, Anglesea again was amongst the top three clubs Australia wide in the beach area, gaining three gold medals, two bronze, gold in the Mens U16 Beach Relay: Tom Rimmington, Tom Donagan, Matt Finnimore and Jason Stewart. U19 Mens Beach Sprint — Steve Landers; U16 Girls Beach Sprint — Claire Lewtas. Bronze: U16 Girls Beach Relay — Zoe Hitchen, Kia Heinmen, Claire Lewtas, Rosie Moore. Open Womens Beach Relay: Naomi Symington (McGain), Abby Lewtas, Kath Marshall and Emily Watsofrd. Tim Williams was selected for the 2002 Commonwealth Games Athletics Team in the 4 X 100 relay.

The March Past

Over many years at nearly every surf carnival the March Past plays a most significant part in displaying the strength and the depth of each club to the public. Likewise it gives participation to those club members who are not elite competitors to contribute to their Club's day on the beach, gaining points plus satisfying those sponsors and invited guests with the colour, spirit and spectacle so well associated with surf lifesavers.

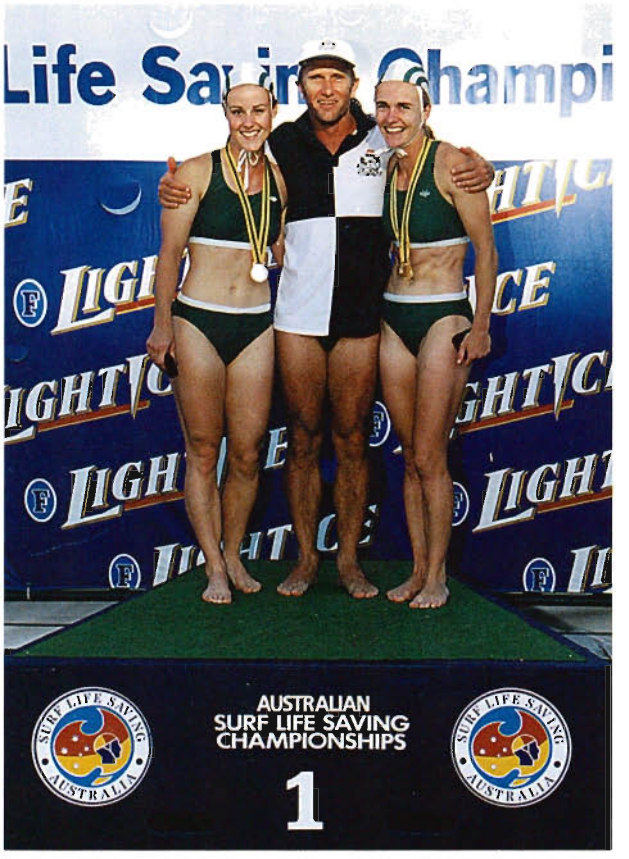

Over the years March Past competition has seen a number of clubs perform extremely well such as Fairhaven, during the late sixties and early seventies also Anglesea and Pt. Lonsdale during our very early days.

However overall the Warrnambool club has dominated with their 15 State Titles.

This amazing record and the strong participation of the other clubs over the years not only gives opportunity for the supporting members of our clubs to contribute, but to uphold the pride and the presence of everything our great movement stands for!

The origins of March Past come from the military influence that contributed in not only March Past but R&R drill and the way our examinations were carried out as late as the 1970s.

In Victoria these past five years or so March Past has not been included as an event but as a display only. The March Past event, remains a Victorian and National Title awaiting the day of its revival.

The Origins of the Iron Man Event

by Neal Inglis

The 'Iron Man' event is arguably the most widely recognised high profile event at all Surf Life Saving carnivals. It is featured at the Australian Surf Life Saving Championships as the final event of the day, producing an exciting climax to that magnificent annual competition.

Its origins as an event are interesting. Records reveal that as early as 1956, at an international contest held at Collaroy Beach, a 'medley' race (swim, ski and board) was held featuring contestants from South Africa, Hawaii, New Zealand, United States and Australia. The winner was Barry Lumsdane of the Freshwater Club.[1]

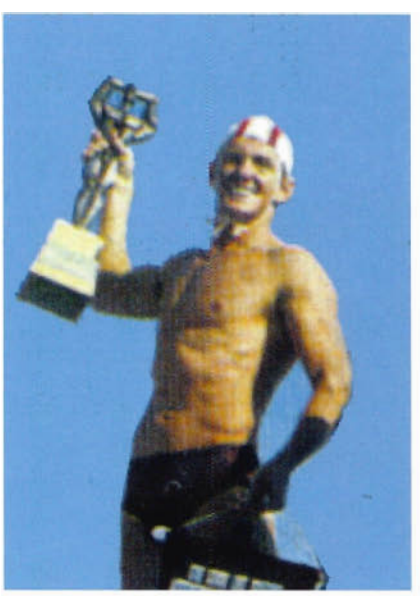

No attempts were made to perpetuate this event and it is reasonable to state that the first officially recognised annual iron man contest, initially also called a medley, was developed in Victoria, as Neal Inglis, a former Club Captain of the Torquay Club (1961-66), records.

The Toughest Event

Over the years, new or modified events have been introduced into the SLSA competition calender to keep abreast of changing times and conditions. But surely the Iron Man has been the most spectacular and physically testing.

It started with a small club event run by the Torquay SLSC in 1962. The event was opened up to members of other Victorian clubs in 1963, then, in 1966, it was incorporated into the SLSA Australian Championships. The iron man event is now an international, televised, multi-million dollar sporting and marketing bonanza.

This unique race is as demanding physically and mentally as any other single or multi-discipline sport such as marathon, triathlon and pentathlon. The iron man is the toughest race in the SLSA competition.

How It All Started

The event in itself started by trying to find an answer to this question, frequently debated by members of Torquay SLSC and, I assume, by members of other SLSC clubs: "who is the best all-round, fittest and most talented surf lifesaver in the club, indeed the state or in the whole of Australia?"

The issue came to a head one day in 1962 when Frank Trainor presented me with a magnificent trophy for which Torquay members might compete. Frank was a staunch supporter of the Torquay Club and through his generosity, and in conjunction with his trophy and jewellery business, helped us out at every opportunity.

The question was, which section of the club should the trophy go to: swimming, board, ski, boat, beach events or patrol? In hind-sight, patrols might have been a better choice, but then the iron man may not have been developed in Victoria.

My thoughts at that time as club captain were to make it available to as many competition members as possible. After talking over the format with Bill Luscombe, who was then Vice-Captain, we decided on an event which started with a run and was followed by a swim, board and ski leg. Frank Trainor readily agreed with the idea and the iron man Race, although not named as such at that stage, was under way. We named the event the 'Frank Trainor Easter Medley Trophy', and it was first held on Easter Sunday in April, 1962.[2]

The medley event started at the Point Danger end of the beach with a 200 m run, followed by a 300 m swim with the buoys set in 'dumper alley', then came a 400 m malibu paddle, a 400 m ski leg, and finished with a 50 m 'sprint'.

The race attracted such a large number of Torquay club members that there were not enough skis to go around, and this necessitated running heats in the morning and a final in the afternoon. After strenuous heats in the morning, some competitors who qualified for the final were so fatigued that they did not compete in it.

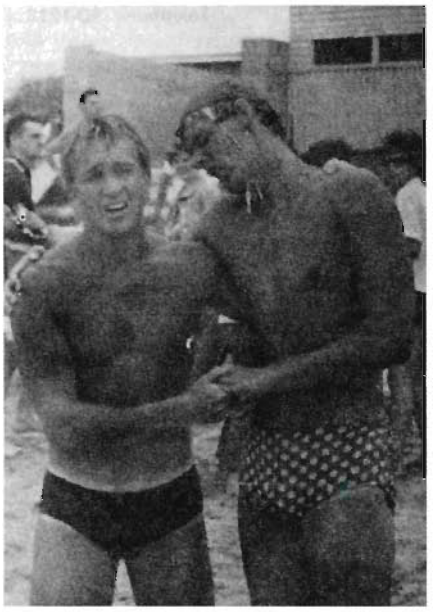

Place getters in this inaugural event were:

1st Peter Philp
2nd Neal Inglis
3rd Richard Knight.

Peter Philp's win was remarkable because as a junior he beat a number of highly fancied senior members.

The day was so successful that the club decided to run the event again on New Year's Day 1963, and make it open to competitors from other clubs. This is listed in the 16th Annual Report of Victorian State Centre under the heading: 'Carnival Venues Program 1962-63 - Tuesday January 1st—Torquay (Pentathlon)'.[3]

By the time New Year's Day 1963 arrived we had decided that the title 'Pentathlon'; sounded too much like a track and field event. So to ensure that the race promoted the surfing image, the word 'Surfathon' was coined. The new title became the 'Torquay Surfathon'.

The January 1964 event was re-named the 'Jim Wall Memorial Torquay Surfathon' in memory of Jim Wall who contributed so much to Surf Life Saving in Victoria. Jim Wall was Torquay's President for 14 years, also the first secretary of the Victorian State Centre. He passed away in 1963.[4]

The 1964 race was appropriately won against the best competition in the State by Jim's son, Terry Wall, who displayed his surfing skills and courage to win the event that was now named in honour of his father.

From Club Event To National Event

Following this race the Torquay Annual Report 1964-5 stated: "It is safe to predict that the Surfathon, invented by our members, will one day be the main test of surfing ability, and could become an Inter-State event".[5]

This prediction soon came true. The Victorian Surfer, November 1966 edition, under the heading 'Iron Man', related: "The race will be held during the Australian Championships at Southport, South Australia next March. It has been held in Australia only once before - during the last Australian Championships at Coolangatta in April this year (ie 1966). Only a handful of Australians have competed in the race, which was popularised in the United States. The difference between the American and Australian version, was that the Americans used dories (a kind of one-man surf boat) instead of surf skis".[6]

It is interesting to note that the American race allowed for a 10 second gap between each leg from the time the last contestant crossed the line. Thankfully we did not adopt this procedure.

The same article continued, "Torquay Club's Jim Wall Memorial Surfathon is very similar to the Iron Man event. Surfathon competitors have to compete in an additional event (a beach sprint) and use malibu boards instead of 'tooth picks' (the 16ft long boards)."

The Official Souvenir Program USA Tour Surf Carnivals 1967 recorded: "The race has been conducted for several years at lifeguard tournaments in the USA and following the Australian Surf Team's visit to that Country in 1965, was incorporated into the Australian Titles at Coolangatta in 1966."[7]

The title of 'Iron Man' was adopted by the SLSA of Australia from the Californian Lifeguard Association, USA.

The introduction of the iron man as a national event followed the recommendation by the Queensland State Centre in a letter of 14th December, 1965, that the race be run at the 1966 Championships.[8]

In correspondence to all State Centres from National Council detailing the format of the proposed trial of 'Taplin and Iron Man Events', it was suggested that "the competitors be given five or ten minutes rest between each of the races". Fortunately this suggestion (similar to the American format mentioned earlier) was not included.[9]

Victorian State Centre responded to National Council's letter by recommending that the event name be changed to 'Surfathon'; that the race be continuous with no rest between stages; that a run leg be included and that the competitors cover the same course. They only missed on the name![10]

Place getters in the first National Iron Man Race, Coolangatta, 1966, were:

2nd	Barry Rodgers, Maroubra, NSW
3rd	Len Woods, Pacific, Qld

First Sponsorship

During 1966, through the efforts of Arnold Goetz, Victorian State Superintendent and George Nutbean, President of Fairhaven SLSC and Deputy President of SLSA Victoria, the Surfathon, now re-named Iron Man, was sponsored at the 1967 Australian Championships at South Port Beach, South Australia by Renault Australia Pty Ltd. This sponsorship, strongly supported by Jacques Thorneaux, Managing Director of Renault Australia Pty Ltd, included the proposed running of the first International Iron Man Race in Biarritz, France, home of the Renault Motor Company.

The trophies included a Renault 10 car to the surf life saving club whose member won the event, air fares to the national titles for state title holders and $400 expense money for the Australian Champion for his trip to Biarritz.[11]

The results were:

1st: Barry Rodgers, Maroubra, NSW.

2nd: Hayden Kenny, Alexander Headlands, QLD.

3rd: Len Wood, Pacific, QLD.

Going International

The 1967 Jim Wall Memorial Torquay Surfathon developed an International and National flavour since it included four members of the touring South African Surf Lifesaving Team and a member from North Bondi, Peter Smiles. The race attracted the largest field to date and with the South African competitors setting a very high standard, it was the surfing fitness of George Day that kept the trophy in Victoria.[12]

2nd	Paul Lanterine, South Africa

As women became surf lifesavers from 1980, they first had to compete against men in the iron man events. Then came a separate event for women called the 'Female Iron Man', until in 1992 it was renamed the 'Iron Woman' event.

Over time, this event has been called a Medley, Pentathlon, Surfathon and finally Iron Man, but call it what you may, the race is a fitting test of endurance, courage and skill in which Australian SLSA members lead the world.

From the memories and records that are available, Victorian SLSA members can be proud of the fact that, so far as Australia is concerned, the first annual inter-club Iron Man events were organised and run in Victoria.

Iron Man / Woman / Nippers... post 1970

An important development has been the junior activities segment of the Association when 'Iron' nippers were added to club and state titles, inspiring young boys and girls to continue after graduating as qualified lifesavers. The age level of Under 16, Under 19 and Open in both sexes further enhanced the event.

At nipper level, the disciplines are board paddle, swim and run. At Under 19 and Open levels, the ski leg was added in 1990 for females.Acquiring craft has been one of the main hurdles to overcome by dedicated competitors. In the year 2000, the cost of a top grade surf ski was $1,800 and a racing malibu was over $1,000. Many clubs assist their members by acquiring - then lending - craft to sincere competitors since sponsorship at this level is difficult to procure. However competitors rising to the highest level need own their own craft so that a balanced training program can be attained.

A typical weekly and in-season training regime, as utilised by four-times Victorian champion, David Strahan, includes surf ski training three times; malibu board paddling twice; swimming each morning up to five kilometres and running with a local athletics club. During the off season, regular gymnasium programs are undertaken to enhance strength and endurance. In the surf, practice is undertaken at weekends at suitable beaches. Group training with a coach is always desirable for body and surf skill development, also a balanced diet is important to enhance muscle development.

Number One Iron Man Ray Brewin

Torquay Club member, Ray Brewin, is seen by many as Victoria's 'Number One Iron Man', in spite of (or because of?) his deafness, which today would prevent him entering the event. (The rule barring competitors unable to hear commands, sirens etc was made in the mid-1980s.)

Ray achieved over 50 wins and places in multiple events— surf race, surf belt, surf teams, surf skis, iron man— at club, state and national titles. He won three Victorian Iron Man titles in 1969, 1971 and 1972. Fourth place is his highest Australian championship position. His most challenging victory was at Bancoora in 1971, after completing the River Murray marathon. With blisters on his hands and behind, it was a painful experience!

Instituting a twice-daily training program was time consuming and required the tolerance of his uncle who employed him as a carpenter. As with so many successful champions, swimming was his strongest area and he was always complaining to officials who wanted to shorten that leg of the event.

Ray's early regular competitors were George Day and Graeme Hazeldine from Warrnambool, and Steve Dyson of Anglesea, then later came Steve McBean of Point Lonsdale and Peter Francis of Point Leo. He rated the most difficult venues as Jan Juc and Fairhaven, owing to their strong shore break.

With over 30 years involvement in craft and iron man, Ray shows no sign of retirement and regularly assists with squad training at Half Moon Bay.

Anglesea's Iron Man Warren Clarke's Reflections

The Iron Man event has always been a spectacular and club favourite with many competitors rising to the challenge to test their fitness and surf skills. Carnivals and state championships in the 1980s regularly featured heats of the Iron Man. The event became very popular when a Victorian carnival presented solid or large surf.

The Iron Man, at times, was complex with entry and exit flags, which were colour coded for each of the disciplines of swim, board, ski and run. The gate/flag system frequently caused confusion with competitors, which led to subsequent disqualifications.

Often the thankless role in the Iron Man event is the contribution of the SLSV officials in the laying and adjustment of the buoys, the flags/gates and the monitoring of the competitors on the course. But without the officials, the competitors could not compete!

In the late 1970s to early 1980s The Age newspaper sponsored the iron man event. At a National level, which filtered through to state levels, Johnston's Wax took up the sponsorship for approximately 10 years. The winner of the Iron Man event often gained craft prizes for their club.

Warren Clarke, Anglesea, leading Darren McFarlane, Po nt Leo, in the Iron Man contest of 1982.

The 1970s and 1980s were one of the strongest periods of Victorian Iron Man competition. High level senior competitors were Peter Schuster (Lorne); Lance 'Ugly' (preferred to be called Ugly than Lance) Johnston (Lorne); Steve McBean (Point Lonsdale); Gary Hourticolon (Bancoora); Darren McFarlane (Point Leo); Rick Payne (Jan Juc); Warren Clarke (Anglesea); and Daryl Barnes (Point Leo).

Peter Schuster and Lance 'Ugly' Johnston from Lorne were regular training partners under the coaching and watchful eye of George Day. Their rigorous training sessions raised the level of Iron Man competition to the most successful result to date for a Victorian with Lance Johnston gaining third at the Australian Surf Life Saving Titles held at Bancoora in 1977.

Peter Schuster, Lance 'Ugly' Johnston, Steve McBean and Warren Clarke regularly made finals in the Iron Man event at the Australian Surf Lifesaving Titles. Steve McBean also competed in a Coolangatta Gold Iron Man endurance race in 1985 and came an astonishing second behind Guy Leech.

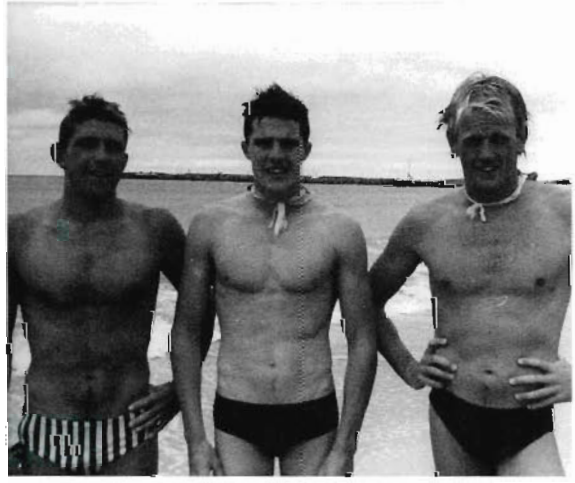

Elite junior competitors during the 1980s were Sean Harris (Anglesea), Brett Tyack (Jan Juc) and Gary Hourticolon (Bancoora) who burst into the Iron Man scene in the mid 1980s and was one of the most exciting up and coming athletes, regularly fronting up for both the junior and senior iron man and at some carnivals winning the double.

Warren Clarke was successful in winning the Victorian Junior iron man with Pt. Leo then rejoining his original club, Anglesea to win four senior Iron Man, three of which were consecutive at the Victorian Titles.

The interesting challenge and debate in the iron man event is: 'Is the Iron Man event more suited to a pool swimmer learning craft skills, or to a craft competitor developing a base level of swimming fitness?'

The debate will continue with Victorians such as Lance Johnston, Peter Francis, Peter Schuster, Steve McBean and Warren Clarke who have swimming backgrounds and by comparison there is George Day and Trevor Hendy who are more craft oriented.

An interesting senior Iron Man event took place at a local carnival at Barwon Heads/13th Beach. A group of front-runners were slammed by large waves of solid surf while completing the ski leg. Cliff Goulding (Torquay), never missing an opportunity, found a green and white ski floating beside him that belonged to an Anglesea competitor. Cliff proceeded to paddle the ski out to sea, closing towards the Anglesea competitor who was floundering in the surf. "What a generous act" thought the Anglesea competitor as Cliff paddled closer and closer towards him. The Anglesea competitor was even more surprised as Cliff paddled right past him to complete the course. Cliff was adamant when explaining to the officials that he thought the ski was Torquay colours! The rivalry and competitive spirit between Anglesea and Torquay was always strong and any advantage was taken.

Iron Man Stuart Fox's Reflections

As a young up and coming nipper I remember watching the likes of Warren Clarke win the Iron Man event at the senior carnivals and thinking how much I wanted to be like those guys.

To me, the Iron Man is such a special event, a real test of strength, ability and endurance combined with the competitor's ability to outsmart the opposition.

My love and attachment to the Iron Man came at a very early age where I became involved as soon as I became a nipper. At that stage I was a very strong swimmer and had good ability on the board and I knew if I could learn the ski leg quickly I would have a bright future as an Iron Man.

From a training point of view the iron man posed the greatest challenge. Training across the four disciplines was not an easy task since I lived in Ballarat. The freezing winter months training on the board and ski on Ballarat's Lake Wendouree was nothing short of torturous. However when the summer arrived and I was able to base my training down on the coast in Anglesea, life became a little easier. My training consisted of three sessions per day six days a week.

My first major success as an Iron Man came in 1986 where I won the Junior Title at the Victorian State Titles held in Ocean Grove. Winning the State Title was a huge thrill and this was the start of an era in iron man racing which really saw the 'changing of the guard'.

Brett Tyack came onto the scene also and Brett and I were set to have a good 10 years of fierce rivalry ahead in Iron Man. Shane Edmonds was also very competitive during this era, however he never posed a major threat to Brett and myself but was always snapping at our heels. One mistake in an Iron Man race and you knew Eddo would be right there.

Throughout the late 1980s and early 1990s, Brett and I battled for the Iron Man titles week in week out. One week Brett would win, the next week I would win. We were great mates during this period and often enjoyed surfing and training together. However come race time and things became quite serious and our rivalry was very intense to say the least.

I found that the swim was the most critical leg of the Iron Man. Most competitors could paddle the ski and board to a reasonable standard. However the swim leg was always renowned for splitting the field apart. My best leg was the swim and I would always use this to my advantage often trying to hang on with the likes of Tyack and then make my move in the swim.

I had a great year in 1987 and focused on trying to win both the junior and senior Iron Man events. This was a hard task, as the events would be running one after the other so you would basically do two full Iron Man circuits in a row. I just loved the challenge and I remember taking both events for the first time at the Barwon Heads/13th Beach Carnival in 1987. At the State Titles that year I won the Junior Iron Man but came a narrow second in the Open Event.

In 1998 and 1999 I tried to compete at a national level in the iron man but found the going very tough. I entered the former NutriGrain Iron Man series and followed the circuit around Australia. Over 100 competitors followed the series and my best place was in a round at Perth where I was placed 13th. At a national level the competition was fierce and I knew during this time that I did not have the ability to cut it with the top competitors at a national level.

Although I was winning most of the Iron Man races in Victoria, I decided to use the event as a fitness mechanism for my belt swimming which I knew I was competitive in at a national level. The fitness the Iron Man provided me with really paid off in 1991 where I had the best State Titles of my career, taking nine gold medals from nine starts at the Vics. held at Ocean Grove.

In season 1992/1993 I also had a great year in the Iron Man. I competed in the Kellogs National Surf League which gave me the tougher national competition. Going back to compete in Victoria became easier and in that season I won all the Iron Man races I competed in. That year I also had my best result in the event at the national titles, making the semi finals.

I love the fact that the whole carnival stops to watch the event and a huge gallery always forms around its boundaries. The Iron Man will always hold special memories for me. I think it's about all the tough training required to be competitive and the stigma attached to the event.

Iron Man from 1980 to 2002

By Bruce Edmonds

For over two decades the Victorian Iron Man competition has been dominated by a small number of competitors. Those emerging from the under age competition (under 18-19) have found the leap to open age competition difficult to bridge and have been unable to break the monopoly of the top group.

From 1980-84, Warren Clarke was successful in four consecutive State titles and generally won most local carnivals. Three inaugural State nipper team members (1983) emerged in the later 1980s to have many great tussles during the 1987-93 period. Stuart Fox, Brett Tyack and Shane Edmonds effectively raised the level of Iron Man competition with their outstanding all-round ability. No longer was it possible to cover a weak leg as the requirement was now to have top level performance in each of the three disciplines.

After three state titles, Brett Tyack moved interstate and gained a contract for the Uncle Toby's Series which enabled him to compete on a full time basis until the series ceased in 2000. Stuart Fox also won three State titles during this period combining his Iron Man skills with his outstanding swimming ability. Following the retirement of Stuart Fox, Shane Edmonds enjoyed a successful period winning a record five State titles up to 2002. During this period David Strahan made the transition from under age ranks and won four State titles and developed a great rivalry with Shane Edmonds. David also had the unique record of gaining wins or placing at every State title he competed in. Shane became the first Victorian competitor to gain wins at carnivals in each of the four major open individual events - board, ski, surf race and Iron Man which is indicative of the standard now required to succeed.

With a number of interstate competitors now at a professional level, Victorian competitors have found Australian Championships a difficult undertaking. A few have reached semi-final level but Open Iron Man finals have not been attained. A need exists for a greater depth of competitors to further raise the overall achievement level.

NB: Shane achieved Silver Medal 30-34 years Men's Masters— Australian Titles Kurrawa, QLD, 2001/02.

Iron Man Steve McBean – Pt. Lonsdale

Steve McBean who was coached to success in his younger years in swimming and water polo by champion, John Olsen (Pt. Lonsdale), quickly made his mark in the surf. In 1964 he gained his bronze medallion and in that same year was a member of the Pt.Lonsdale Junior R&R team.

During those early years, Steve continued his swimming and water polo commitments with great success. This was a very heavy commitment up until 1974 with a premiership in the Melbourne 'A' Grade Water Polo competition.

In the 1975 season, Steve committed to a number of events and gained selection in the Victorian Wieland Shield Team to tour the USA and State team to Dee Why for the Australian Titles.

During 1976 and 1977 Steve gained a 4th place in the SLSA Australian Iron Man contest. Then from 1978 through to the end of his surf competition career he recorded a string of first placings in a number of events.

Steve's coach, George Day who had an impressive competition record himself was extremely pleased with Steve who took on the best in that 1985 'gut busting' Coolangatta Gold. Steve finished second— a fantastic effort —as the winner, Guy Leech, took 4 hours 33 minutes and 31 seconds, was only a mere 84 seconds in front of Steve.

Steve competed through masters age groups and special events with great success, finishing his career after 1985.

Iron Women Competition

Women were first permitted to obtain their Bronze Medallions in 1980, but it was not until 1992 that the Iron Woman event became a championship event at the Victorian Titles when they were able to compete in their own ski events.

Previously the women's event contained only surf board, swim and run legs. The ski leg was not included as part of the womens iron event until the 1999/2000 season.

The first Iron Woman winner at the Victorian Titles at Pt.Leo in 1992 was Frances Murphy of Torquay.

Despite the disadvantages of the cold conditions in which the Victorian girls have to train, they still aspire to compete against the best in Australia. Both Naantali Marshall (Torquay) and Wendy Wilson (Lorne) have made National finals and Naantali has represented the Victorian Blue Fins in the National Surf League. In Victoria since 1996 Naanatali has dominated this event. Other competitors are Olivia Cottrill and Morgan Lacey (Anglesea), Kate Rydberg (Pt.Leo), Annie Luke (Warrnambool) and Kate Lloyd (Ocean Grove).

'Iron' events are the blue-ribbon events in surf life saving, challenging competitors to master all four disciplines, as well as requiring a high level of endurance. It is this challenge that motivates the girls to compete in this event rather than specialising in any one discipline.

The New Generation From 2000

The experience of Iron Person events introduced at nipper level plus the Australia-wide publicity via press and television has inspired the youth of today to engage in continuing multi age group competition through the surfing season.

Both boys and girls, on termination of their nipper years, are gaining their Surf Rescue Certificates and subsequently Bronze Medallions so that they can become competitors in under-age, junior and open Iron Person competition.

The inclusion of a surf ski component relates to males from junior level onwards and applies to females at senior level (when the upper body muscular development has matured).

Naturally parental and club involvement is essential for them to reach competitive standards. Taken for granted by spectators are items such as transport to and from training venues and carnivals, coaching and swimming pool expenses, purchase of up-to-date boards and skis, gymnasium admission plus membership subscriptions. At this level of competition, winners of Nipper of the Year, or Kellogs NutriGrain have received a racing Malibu board.

A Champion in the Making

In 1999 Kirsten Ulmer, a young girl in the iron person event category, showed immense potential when she won the Female Iron Nipper State Title and was classic overall winner a feat she repeated in 2000.

In 2001, she competed in the U16 division winning at all carnivals including the state titles. Again in 2002 Kirsten repeated her successes plus winning the U 16 Kellogs NutriGrain at Torquay and placing 9th in the Australian Championships at Kurrawa, Qld.

Kirsten observes the usual training rituals such as a 5 km morning swim; board paddling at Ocean Grove plus running twice each week.

Enthusiasm and her talented parents' support and coach Michael Portelli have led to her success, which should continue for years to come.

The Taplin Relay

(Introduced in 1965)

The Taplin is a team event which comprises two swimmers, two ski paddlers and two board paddlers from each club. It is not only exciting to watch but is a very popular event amongst competitors as it captures the spirit of the club with everyone cheering on their competitors. It is also spectator enjoyment at its best.

The Taplin event itself is a modification of the American Taplin event. In Australia we replaced the American dory component with surf skis, and reduced the number of competitors from twelve to six, thus making it more achievable for smaller clubs to find the numbers.

It is named in honour of USA Judge Irwin Taplin, President of Surf Life Saving America at that time. Since its introduction to Australia it has increased in importance to the surf lifesaving movement throughout Australia and New Zealand and is very much part of the competition held between Australia and USA teams.

The Taplin has championship status in all states and at Australian Championships. Prior to being introduced as an Australian Championship event in 1974, the event was contested between Victorian teams and American teams during (and since) that 1965 tour of the USA now named the Wieland Shield.

The report to the Victorian Council meeting from the touring team, and from John Turner (Pt. Lonsdale SLSC) in particular, was the catalyst for State Superintendent Arnold Goetz to introduce the event to the Australian Council which immediately added the event to its annual championships. The Taplin was first contested in Victoria as a championship event in 1976.

The first State Titles Taplin event for women was introduced in 2001 with three competitors per club.

Judge Taplin was no stranger to Surf Life Saving Australia. On a visit during 1962 he presented to his counterpart Judge Adrian Curlewis a magnificent mounted bell to be awarded annually to the interstare competition points-score winner. Judge Taplin had made a considerable contribution to life saving generally, so it was a fitting recognition to name this now firmly entrenched event the Taplin Relay!

As far as is known, the bell has never left the SLSA headquarters in Sydney.

First Aid Competition

Surf lifesavers attend to ten times the number of first aid cases by comparison with rescues. Attending to cuts and abrasions, accidents, heat exposure and exhaustion etc have made this aspect of a beach patrol's duties extremely important.

Assisting the beach-going public in this way has also led clubs to install a first aid room and appoint a First Aid Officer to oversee the function of equipment and the stocks of medical supplies.

The surf life saving movement in Victoria has been fortunate in its 50 years and more, to have had a large number of doctors, nurses, ambulance paramedics and other qualified people providing input.

Dr Graham Cato has led the Standards and Quality of Beach Services committee in recent years. Dr Tom Crankshaw and his son, Dr David Crankshaw contributed greatly in the era when EAR and CPR were introduced. Along with a number of medicos throughout the movement they have helped maintain Victoria's high standards of operation within the various aspects of patrolling the beaches.

Victoria's Patrol Competition, which involves random checks on all the clubs through each season, was introduced by Tony Lester in the 1960s. This competition backs up the current situation where Victorian clubs have patrolled at more than 92% efficiency.

Among the patrolling lifesavers of Victorian clubs there have been some most outstanding performances in the First Aid Competition, with teams from Port Fairy club perhaps the most successful.

Bun Fights and Football Matches

'Bun fights' were a traditional component of every surf carnival, treating competitors to some refreshments at the conclusion of the competition after all the carnival gear, packing boards, skis, reels and other equipment were stowed away or put into each club's vehicle.

It should be remembered that in those early days clubs charged an entry fee from the spectators. This was the major fund-raiser for the season, and included the job of putting up hessian fences.

To reward the competitors for their attendance and effort, the host club would provide sandwiches or rolls and put on a barrel (or two).

After a hard afternoon with competitors entering up to five or more events, not only were the refreshments most welcome but the social mix when competitor rivalry reverted to a rowdy but friendly interchange was most important.

Since club houses were situated on foreshore reserve land, clubs could not dispense alcoholic beverages at the club and so the food was invariably distributed from the Club house with the 'eighteen' (an 18 gallon barrel of beer) planted outside. With the opening of the doors, the 'bun fight was on, continuing until everyone was well fed, and the throng then adjourned to the barrel.

That was the time for acts, songs, and frequently the surreptitious pulling down of track suit pants (commonly called 'de-dacking) much to the surprise of the recipient (and any ladies present!). Songs such as 'Come join us' and 'Ivan Skavinski Skavar' (...'and The Next Wife Told Her Tale'), 'Sing us anothery, dirty as buggery'. These were rendered with great enthusiasm. The inimitable pair of Owen Yateman and Ming Smith (in Davey Crockett hat) never failed to excite the mob with their fishing act and their rendition of 'Nice People'.

The 1954 carnival at Point Lonsdale saw the first occasion of Owen Yateman's Jazz Band playing. The members of the band varied occasionally but basically they were Owen on trombone, Ming Smith on clarinet, John Morey on trumpet, Graeme Bennett on washboard, Dave Brownlee on saxophone and Bruce Tayler on euphonium.

Frequently a musical street parade was conducted much to the amusement of the locals. On one occasion in Lorne, the police held up traffic to allow the musicians to perform and there were lots of laughs, even from the police.

Various clubs had their regular sites which were both secluded and not close to public areas. Portsea utilised the local sports ground where even the local constabulary enjoyed the frivolities. Lorne hired the local library hall which had the luxury of a stage on which the jazz band performed.

On one occasion at Warrnambool, the patrons were frustrated when on finding the keg would not pour, they discovered that the gas cylinder was empty. Someone produced a tyre pump from a car boot and saved the day.

Probably the most gastronomic prize winner was Apollo Bay. Their allotted carnival date was overlooked until Lorne telephoned with an offer to supply carnival gear. Then, at one day's notice, the club put on its first and most successful competition carnival. The local fishermen rallied to the occasion and supplied fresh crayfish for the bun fight. No other club has equalled that!

in the centre of the beach on borrowed time. We celebrated its last season with a good after-carnival send-off then somehow it fell into the sea.

Probably the most spectacular gathering was after the Pt. Leo carnival in the early 1960s. With no pre-arranged venue, everyone arrived at John 'Fizzle' Forsyth's camp site situated on a corner of the then President, John Raw's property. It did not take long for one of the hundred strong crowd to light a huge bonfire which became the focal point for the usual songs and acts. An unheard of number of verses of limericks were sung coupled to the usual bonfire acts. One of Fizzles' camp furniture pieces found its way onto the fire and Bruce Tayler tempted cremation by sitting in it as the flames devoured it. On realising that it was a total fire ban day, the male members attempted to extinguish it, in the 'approved' style.

The Famous Stink Bomb Affair

Unfortunately all these traditional 'de-briefings' came to an end when, after the Lorne carnival in the Lorne Library Hall, someone released a 'stink bomb'.

This was no ordinary stink bomb, like bad egg gas. It was a chemical concoction previously unsmelt or unused before. On its release, the remark was heard, "Who spewed?" and the crowd began moving around the hall to escape its ever-increasing presence. It showed no mercy. Then, as if from a hidden signal, all doors burst open and the whole complement exited out onto the street — all, that is, except the organising ladies who stuck to their duties.

It might have appeared a boyish prank at the time, but the repercussions were endless. The ladies claimed insult and all resigned from the Lorne club. The visiting competitors were forced to burn their clothes and sleeping bags stored in the hall after their overnight stay. Then the whole incident was debated at State Centre for some hours, with the result being an immediate ban on bun fights.

It was a pity that what was intended by a Torquay member at the time to be a humorous incident incurred the wrath of officialdom. On the positive side, many of those older group competitors, the Masters, still joke about this debacle forty years later.

And so to those secret venues. Many clubs enjoyed their own secret venues for their 'secret' barrels. Lorne had its 'Teddy's lookout'; Warrnambool had 'Ti Tree Inn'; Pt Lonsdale had the 'Members' Grotto'; at Seaspray there was Andy Kelly's open house opposite the Club house; Torquay sported its own 'Boot Hill' and a spot called the 'Outlaw'.

Then came .05 and a touch of common sense, both more accepted these days. However there is a dent in the camaraderie, the interaction and the hilarious fun that the 'old bun fight' was for surf life saving.

Aussie Rules

At the completion of the football season, a lightning premiership day was conducted each year for any clubs who wanted to participate.

The Little River oval was hired and the umpiring was in the charge of a VFL nominee.

The competition ran for six years and was vigorously contested with eight to ten Clubs represented.

The enthusiasm of attendees sometimes became an umpiring problem when it was discovered that about 50 players were simultaneously on the field. A temporary halt and captains' re-organisation trimmed the teams back to their rightful number.

As well as the twenty 18-gallon kegs on hand, the ladies dispensed hot pies.

They were memorable events for all attendees and a good fund-raiser.

Rescues and Shark Attacks
Just some of those 31,844 rescues!

The real thing! ... about to be resuscitated. Gunnamatta Surf Life Saving answers the call at unpatrolled St. Andrews Beach.

Each weekend and on public holidays through every long summer from November to Easter, lifesavers place those red and yellow flags appropriately on each of the 40 or more Victorian beaches. Their motto is 'Vigilance and Service'. The area patrolled on each beach is in the strictest sense, the only area that the lifesavers' 'duty of care' applies, yet many of their rescues are outside the flags.

There are safe beaches, but every beach on its day can be extremely dangerous and there are some beaches which are dangerous more often than others, but on very wild surf days, it is the lifesavers' judgement as to when it is time to 'close the beach'. In early days and up until the 70's, closing the beach was designated by crossing the two flag stands at the water's edge. This was changed during the 1980's to a sign reading 'beach closed'. Still some would swim and, of course, there were rescues of all sorts in any number of circumstances and for many reasons.

Lifesavers are trained and practised to cope with all types of conditions, however the near 1,200 rescues per annum indicates that lifesavers are kept extremely busy during the summer months. Most lifesavers involved in a rescue choose not to talk too much openly, however a report is compiled and kept on each and every rescue - the same for first aid cases, which over the years have been quite numerous.

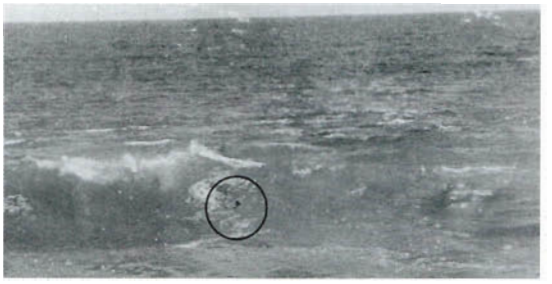

The rescues captured within the next few pages are just some of those that perhaps made the papers or in latter years, TV, thus becoming common knowledge.

In just over fifty years there have been 30,844 recorded rescues from drowning in Victoria, many of those rescues merely a recorded statistic in the Patrol Book on the day and not even making the local paper, let alone radio or television.

Looking back over fifty years and more, some of the rescues have been in as dangerous circumstances as one could find. Anywhere and anytime, when people get into trouble, or drown by misadventure or by accident, the surf lifesaver puts his or her own life on the line each time.

There is no telling where or when!

St. Andrews Beach 1975

The beaches of Portsea, Rye back beach, St. Andrews, Gunnamatta, Woolamai on Phillip Island and Kilcunda are regarded by many as the most dangerous in Victoria, and possibly Australia.

Like all beaches these have good days and because of the prevailing winds and swells through Bass Strait there is a greater percentage of bad days with dangerous conditions. This day, Sunday, 7th December, 1975 between 1.00 and 3.00 p.m. Mr Nagy and a friend, had started fishing off rocks at St. Andrews when the conditions were moderate with swells around 1.8 m. but this deteriorated as the tide changed and was coming in. Both men were washed from the rock ledge. Mr Nagy was taken by the strong current out through the quite large surf. The other man made it back to the beach. Mr Nagy managed to keep himself afloat for some time but gradually grew weaker and by the time the patrol did arrive from Gunnamatta SLSC Mr Nagy was exhausted and had struggled feebly into submission.

The beltman and another Patrol member with flippers dived off the rocks and headed out to sea towards Mr Nagy. On reaching him and securing him, the order was given to haul him in. This was not an easy rescue situation because of the treacherous rocky outcrops which make up this foreshore plus the now 2-3 metre swell. The following sequence of photos (opposite)—by some extraordinary co-incidence —were taken by photographer, Mr Keith Platt of Dromana who was able to catch this series of photos capturing the sequence of events from when Mr Nagy was swept off the rocks and out to sea. The beltman is then seen here getting the patient back to the beach then the resuscitation by surf lifesavers, the lift into the ambulance and off to hospital. The paramedics continued the treatment of Mr Nagi on the way to the hospital. Mr Nagy lived.

Gunnamatta 1998

Within these fifty years and more, there is one recent tragedy that not only lifted public awareness and respect for the sea, but affected and changed both Government and the world around us. This was the Wilson family who, by whatever chance, took a wrong turn and lost four of their beautiful children, Ben, Molly, Belinda and Catherine.

For the parents, Derek and Mary Wilson, her sister Sharon, and Sharon's husband, Peter Leahy, not a day passes when an image of the beach at Gunnamatta does not cloud their vision. How often they think about their lost children, taken from them when a lifetime of joys and experiences, dreams and plans would be unfulfilled.

This briefly is their story:

It was in the holiday period, 8 January, 1998 when two mothers with nine children in two mini vans left their Rosebud holiday house to go to the beach. They lost direction and found themselves at the Ranger's Hut, asked about the safety of the beach, paid their money then headed for the beach.

They were at Gunnamatta Beach and the time was 3.15 p.m. One mum, Mary, stayed with her sleeping twins in the car in the car park —the rest raced to the beach. Mary, after waking the twins, struggled over the dunes and saw Sharon, the mother of both Belinda and Catherine, who said that she could not see the children.

Mistakenly they were not in a patrolled area and all hell had broken loose. The patrolling lifesavers suddenly realised that these people, Mary and Sharon and nine children, Molly, Ben, Amy, Emma and Luke Wilson and their four cousins, Catherine, Belinda, Gus and James Leahy had suddenly been caught up in one of surf life saving's most terrifying tragedies. After being swamped by huge waves, the strong rip had swept everyone off the sand bank on which they'd been paddling. Catherine, 17, held Molly, 4 in her arms. She screamed to Emma, 12, who was floating nearby on her boogie board, to take Molly.

Emma did. Catherine became caught in the rip, fought it, then returned to the deep to try to save her younger sister Belinda, 15. The two girls were never seen again.

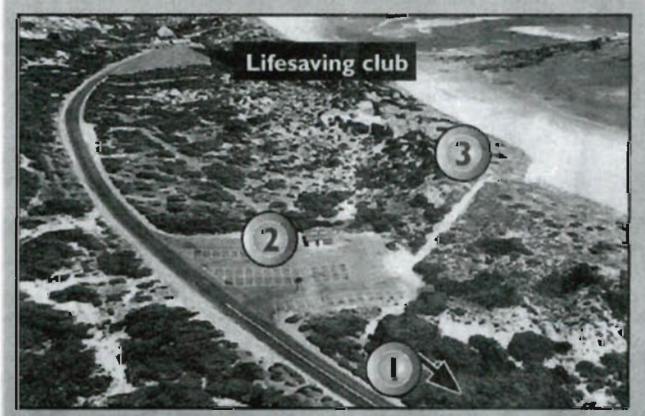

Luke and James were safe, but Ben, 7, Amy, 11, and Garry, 10 had been swept away by the rip. By the time lifeguards, Joe Watt and Jason O'Shannessy had been alerted, launched their rubber duckie and travelled 800 metres west along to the unpatrolled part of the beach where the family had gone swimming, the three children had been dragged beyond a second rip. They found Garry dog-paddling and Amy floating on her back. Her body was submerged, only her face was above the water. Watt said afterwards that another wave and Amy probably would have gone under.

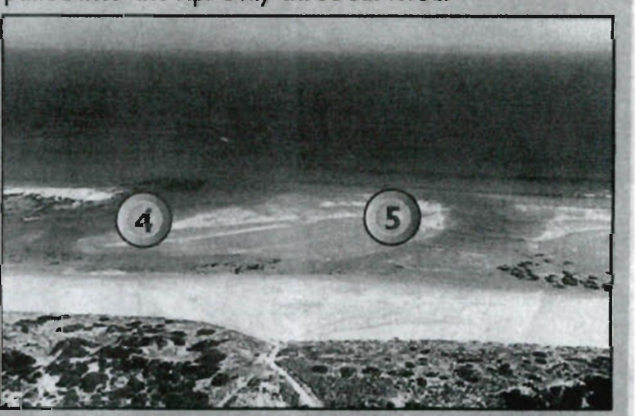

Just as they pulled around to go back to the beach, the lifeguards spotted a third child, Ben, nearly a metre under the water. Jason leant over the boat and grabbed him, pulled him on board, realised he had stopped breathing and started mouth-to-mouth. They raced toward the patrol area.

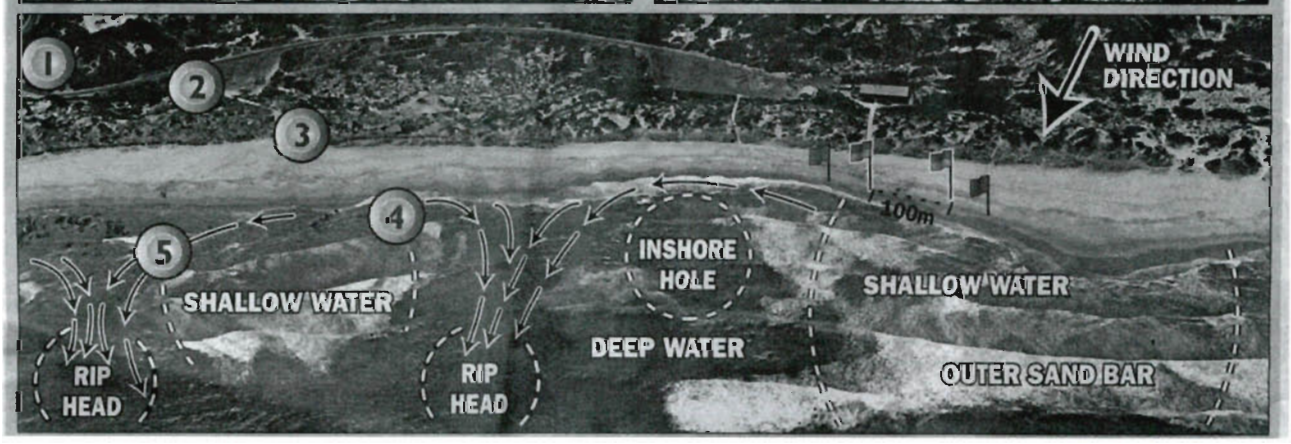

How many more children were missing? It was so confusing, no one was sure. And then the young boy, a bystander who had originally alerted the lifeguards, ran up again. "There are kids still out there!" he shouted. This time Joe Watt hit the water with lifeguard Chris Kelly,

THE FATAL SHORE: How the Gunnamatta tragedy unfolded.

1. Sharon Leahy and her sister Mary Wilson drive with their children to the beach in separate cars. At the entrance booth they are told the beach is manned by lifeguards.
2. They pull into the first carpark, unaware the life saving club – and the patrolled swimming area – is next to the second carpark further up the beach.
3. Some of the children go down to the unpatrolled beach ahead of the parents.
4. Catherine and Belinda Leahy wade with Molly Wilson in the shallows of the sandbar, while the others swim and play on the eastern side. Emma, Luke and Amy Wilson catch waves on the edge of the sandbar.
5. Ben Wilson calls out "the water's great over here" on the western side. Someone tells Ben to come away because it's too dangerous. The sandbar is then hit with a wave and seven children are pulled into the rip. Only three survived.

taking directions from people on the beach as to where the child on the boogie board was last seen, and headed east toward Rye.

A flash of colour. A boogie board being swept up by a wave. Joe and Chris raced to the area and found Emma floating on her board, the cord tangled around her neck and upper body. Beside her, under the water, was Molly. For all that time, in that ferocious surf, Emma had held on to Molly's waist. She had risked her life in an attempt to save her little sister's.

When it was all over four beautiful young people had died. The heartbreak of this tragedy lives on for these two families. The lifeguards too felt shattered that they had not been able to have saved everybody. One can understand that after what they had been through, trauma counselling was appropriate for them also.

Gunnamatta Club members were devastated to think they missed this happening. Even though their Clubhouse and the patrolled area was way up the other end of the beach approximately 600 metres, the lifesavers keep a strong watch on everyone and everything as far as they can see. This incident caused heartbreak and trauma not only to the families and lifesavers, but the Community too! These 4 drownings now made up the shocking toll of 18 for the season and was the trigger to bring Government, life saving bodies, Royal and Surf plus VicSwim to the table. Consequently a number of initiatives have now been put in place for the benefit of all the beach-going public including signage to beach tracks with indicators, i.e. "Swim between the flags"; a Swim Safe Magazine sent to every home in Victoria and increased funding for every surf life saving club on our coast.

Public awareness from that event of 1997/98 could not have been higher. Everyone had felt this shocking incident, in a year when eighteen people lost their lives from drowning. This was the year that really shocked Victoria and Australia.

Footnote: Derek and Mary Wilson, notwithstanding their grief and that of their whole family, have been willing to assist with the inclusion of this tragedy here; their co-operation has been the catalyst to a most positive input to the prevention of drowning; more than at any other time in Victoria's history within this whole drama of life and death. At a ceremony at Government House, Catherine was posthumously awarded a medal from the Royal Humane Society for her extraordinary bravery in returning to the surf to try to save Belinda. Emma also received a medal. These drownings were four of eighteen drowned for the 1997/98 summer season; none of these people swimming were between the red and yellow flags. By contrast there were no drownings for 1999/2000. People had really taken notice.

Apollo Bay 1961

One amazing rescue at Apollo Bay was on 8 January, 1961.

A family was holidaying at Apollo Bay with a young boy who, sadly, was blind from birth. To make things worse, the boy was left unattended and drowned. This occurred well outside the flagged area and by the time lifesavers reached the boy, mouth-to-mouth resuscitation was required. He recovered and on regaining consciousness, the boy started yelling out and became agitated. He could see for the first time in his life! Now living in Cowrie Road, Torquay, his eyesight incredibly is just fine.

Pt. Campbell 1980

Around the corner, and some 50 kms along the Great Ocean road, the Port Campbell Club is faced with the unenviable task of being committed to patrolling a coastline of unique beauty and tourism popularity. However this is an area of some of the most dramatic rescues recorded. The coastline has gorges such as Lochard's Gorge and the Twelve Apostles. Some 60 kms as far as Peterborough is under the care of the Port Campbell Club. This is right on the edge of Bass Strait with huge swells sometimes up to 13 metres. The main method of rescue devised for these conditions over and above the normal patrol equipment, involves

Near-blind boy gets sight back

Eight-year-old Robert Kenyon, who was nearly blind, has regained his sight after an accidentin which he nearly drowned.

Did rescue bring back boy's sight?

APOLLO BAY, Wed. — Did the mouth to mouth resuscitation which saved the life of Robert Kenyon, 8, bring back his failing sight?

That's the question the Apollo Bay Surf Life Saving Club is going to ask a specialist.

Earlier this month Robert was rescued from 30 ft. of water at Apollo Bay. Life savers revived him with mouth - to - mouth resuscitation.

Two days later, in the Apollo Bay Hospital, nurses noticed that Robert was reading without his glasses, and since his discharge there is no indication that his sight is not normal.

Robert has been treated at the Eye and Ear Hospital since he was 18 months old.

the use of a 'rubber goose' capable of high speed and with the power required in situations of rescue for this section of coastline.

The unique coastline either side of Port Campbell makes a great tourist destination, however when someone is swept into these treacherous waters or falls into the sea from the cliff tops, then it's the lifesavers of Port Campbell who really put their lives on the line.

The vision of the circumstances surrounding this next rescue is somewhat typical of the way that this section of the coastline has to be coped with.

Just visualize six metre waves coming through Bass Strait and one after the other crashing onto the cliffs at sometimes less than two minute intervals and the job is to rescue someone in close under the cliffs. The only way in is from out at sea thus direction and timing is crucial as the IRB is directed in towards those cliffs. In these circumstances the IRB has to follow a breaking six metre wave down to the rescue area and the lifesavers have less than a minute to drag the patient into the IRB and get back out over the next wave before it engulfs the boat, crewman and patient.

Here such a rescue at the famous Blowhole resulted in two Port Campbell lifesavers receiving Surf Life Saving Australia 'Citations of Merit'.

On Sunday, 6 April, 1980, Easter Sunday, Peter Norman Rodgers of Newtown, Geelong, Victoria was walking near the Port Campbell Blowhole preparing to go scuba diving.

The Blowhole is a sightseeing area approximately five kilometres east of Port Campbell.

At the time, huge seas were running along the coastline. Information from the local Police gives the size of the waves in the area at the time as in excess of six metres.

Peter Rodgers was swept into the seas by a huge wave and was not able to return to the shore owing to the heavy seas buffeting the cliff face in the area.

A trail bike rider was sent to raise the alarm by Mr Geoffrey Archer, who is a friend of Rodgers. Archer then donned a wet suit and swam out through the boiling surf to offer assistance to the swimmer.

Archer found Rodgers to be in good spirits but suffering from severe cold. In the meantime two members of the Port Campbell Surf Life Saving Club, Ross Powell and Patrick Plozza, had been requested by the local police to launch their inflatable rescue craft and go to the Blowhole area to assist in the rescue.

Local fishermen refused to put to sea in the prevailing conditions having regard to their own safety and the possible loss of their craft. Powell and Plozza, with scant regard for their own safety, launched their inflatable boat after great difficulty due to the sea conditions, navigated the treacherous entrance out through Port Campbell and then battled the huge seas for five kilometres to the location of the two swimmers who were by now exhausted from their terrible ordeal.

The rescue was made even more difficult at the scene because of huge waves breaking nearby. The two swimmers were retrieved from the water by the crew of the inflatable boat who reassured them before setting off back to Port Campbell. Powell and Plozza again navigated the treacherous entrance to Port Campbell and brought the two swimmers to safety.

Peter Rodgers was admitted to hospital overnight and treated for exposure, cuts and bruises and was allowed home the next day. Ross Powell and Patrick Plozza, of the Port Campbell Surf Life Saving Club, Victoria, acted in the highest ideals of the Surf Life Saving Association of Australia with scant respect for their own lives. By their actions, they have upheld the high standards achieved by members of the Surf Life Saving Association of Australia and have answered a call of distress from a fellow human being. They have truly upheld the Association motto —Vigilance and Service.

For their heroic actions on that day, Ross Powell and Patrick Plozza have been honoured by the conferring on them a Citation of Merit.

Subsequently, as these incidents are becoming more frequent the Port Campbell Club purchased a 'goose' with much more power giving lifesavers more chance of making it!

Mass Rescues

Over the fifty and more years, there have been a number of 'mass rescues'. In these instances a number of people have suddenly got into trouble and have been quickly engulfed by a number of large waves and/or swept out to sea in what is known to be a rip or run out.

This is the worst situation for the patrolling life saver, as usually the people involved are in various numbers, spread out in various stages of panic from drowning. The patrol needs to call on all available assistance and equipment at top speed. The patrol captain is totally in charge and is the most important person on the beach giving the instructions.

Any number of these have been quite dramatic.

Torquay is normally a relatively safe beach by comparison with some along our coast, however by contrast, one of the most popular beaches is Portsea. Portsea together with Sorrento, Capri, St. Andrews, Gunnamatta, Woolamai Beach on Phillip Island and the unpatrolled beach at Kilcundra, where the rolling swells from Bass Strait hit straight on, can be some of the most dangerous beaches on our coast.

On one occasion during 1965 at Torquay, this is exactly what happened. It was a beautiful day. There was a nice wave and not much happening on a crowded beach. Then very quickly a series of big waves came from somewhere out in Bass Strait, each wave pushing everything before it. Within minutes, on a high tide, a strong rip started to suck people out to sea. A large number of people found they could not swim against the flow and were sucked out.

The Torquay Patrol were already into action.

The decision of the Patrol Captain was to employ two reels and two beltmen. The second reel was quickly transported down to the left of the rip whilst the other is positioned to the right. "Beltmen Go" came the command and both took off out to sea, swimming around all those caught in trouble. The beltmen, plus other patrol members out among the group, instructed each person to let the line run through their fingers as the two beltmen swam out and around the patients furthest out, came together and tied their two lines together. Their arms were raised — the signal for the reel men to haul in. Within minutes everyone was in touch with the lines being wound in. The plan worked and twenty seven people were back on the beach, safe and well. The beltmen, John Fay and Gary Sharpe, fortunately, were two of the finest surf life savers in Victoria.

Both John Fay and Gary Sharpe fit the description of the Australian Surf Life Saver in the truest sense; John Fay did all his patrols for 30 years and is a Life Member of Torquay Club. Gary Sharpe, now deceased after having a heart attack whilst swimming in the Lorne Pier to Pub Swim, had never missed a patrol.

Portsea Mass Rescues

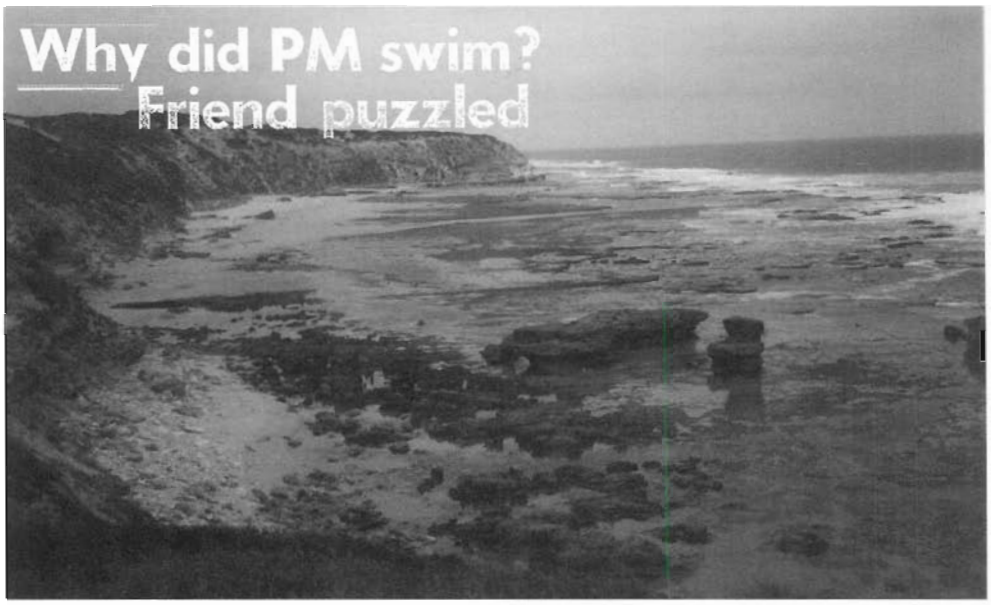

Portsea back beach, is popular, always crowded, known for its big surf, and is not far from Cheviot Beach where our Prime Minister, Harold Holt lost his life whilst swimming on his own on 17 December 1967.

Multiple rescues are common with the Portsea club who by 2001 accumulated the total of 4868. On the occasion of achieving its 1000th rescue in 1971, a pennant was produced for display.

Typical of their performance is Sunday 5th January 1986 when two patrols combined with 40 lifesavers rescuing over 133 people in difficulty and performing over 800 preventative actions. On another occasion during the course of an Uncle Tobys National Super Series on 21st January 1990, the sand bar collapsed resulting in 151 people being rescued.

Shark attacks gain huge media attention and are, of course, horrifying to think about. However given that we will never know what happened to Prime Minister Harold Holt, the old adage "If you enter their domain, you are at their mercy" applies always, especially if swimming alone!

There have only ever been a small number of shark attacks in Victoria. The first that comes to mind was the young boy Clarke, who was taken when diving off Brighton Pier in 1930. The shark did not surface, but there was a large trail of blood. The large number of people on the pier just watched in horror. This attack is still spoken of today after some 70 years.

The story of Portsea's John Wishart, after whom the coveted medal given to Victoria's Life Saver of the Year is named, is extensively covered in the chapter on John Wishart and the tragedy on the 4 March, 1956.

Shark attack at Warrnambool 1961

The weeks prior to this shark attack a geophysical survey ship was operating in the area and regularly anchored overnight in Lady Bay. The discarding of galley waste more than likely attracted sharks.

The attack occurred shortly after the departure of this vessel and was 60 yards from the shore. Ken Smith and Ron Blackney decided to swim around the buoy. Another two club swimmers also intended to do the same and being poorer swimmers started sooner while Ken and Ron caught some shore break waves. The earlier swimmers reached the buoy and were hanging on resting. Ken being the stronger swimmer, "got the jump" on Ron and was out to sea when the shark struck, grabbing him in the stomach area. Ken fought the attack managing to prise the jaws apart, losing a finger in the process.

His screams of alarm alerted Ron, who sped back to the Clubhouse to organise the surf boat. The crew swept by George Day were unaware of the actual attack and took with them a harpoon/spear with which to "have a shot" at the shark.

By this time the shark returned for a second charge which tore into the rear of Ken's abdomen, severing muscles and stomach contents.

By good fortune, a small yacht of similar design to a Sabot or Vee Jay was attracted to the scene and Ken managed to haul himself onto the low deck. The two other swimmers were also taken aboard and it headed back to the sheltered waters at the western end of the beach.

The surf boat crew, realising that it would have been impossible to lift Ken into the boat, returned to the Clubhouse to summon an ambulance.

Those who helped lift Ken from the yacht deck onto a stretcher recalled that their hands were supporting loose intestine rather than flesh. All abdominal muscles were torn away exposing organs and intestine. Ken also lost the end of his thumb as he attempted to ward off the second attack. Apparently the cold water seemed to cauterise the veins, etc. and reduce blood loss as Ken remained conscious throughout the ordeal. He thought to himself that he hoped the ambulance would not go past the Club and over the bridge but this did occur and the trip over the bridge hump was agony.

The surgeons worked on him all night with stitches and clips to repair torn intestine and abdominal muscles. After weeks in hospital and huge skin grafts, he ultimately returned to normal life but required a stomach support thereafter.

He retained his cheery personality and lived about 20 more years but never returned to his work as a carpenter.

Shark attack at Fairhaven 1959

The first patrol of the 1959/60 season was on 30 November. Chris Holland was Patrol Captain and it was a quiet day with regards to beach attendances, and about five members decided to go for a training swim to prepare for the forthcoming Lorne carnival. Chris being the Club Belt Swimmer soon outpaced the four others, being about 300 yards off shore and the other stretched behind some distance.

The shark struck Chris, fastening onto both legs and dragging him under. His immediate reaction was to try and get free and yell for help. After considerable trauma and shouting out he attracted the attention of fellow Club member, Russell Hughes, who was paddling his board about 100 yards away. Russell came to his rescue and on his board, the two of them made their way to shore, Russell sliding off his board into blood stained water and Chris, on the board, paddled with his arms as his legs were not functioning.

Waiting members carried Chris to the clubhouse attempting to arrest the profuse bleeding with towels. His left leg was not badly affected but the majority of his right calf muscle was torn away.

The Ambulance from Lorne was summoned, but poor co-ordination resulted in it taking 33 minutes to cover the short distance.

Russell Hughes recalled:

"The day of Sunday 30 November, 1959 was humid and overcast with some light rain sporadically falling throughout the day. The sea was very flat at Fairhaven that day with small surf breaking on an insignificant sand bar near the first rock.

Vic Tantau, Steve Robinson (not a member of the Surf Life Saving Association but he heads up the Board Riders Association) and myself were debating whether we should go for a surf on the boards as the surf was fairly small. Vic and Steve decided not to go out and went back to Torquay. I, however, chose to go for a surf at the first rock at about 2.45 p.m.

On catching a few waves I remember after turning off one wave, a large black shape appeared under my board. I was sitting at the back of the board turning with my legs, the rear of the board sunken under with my weight and the water up to about my waist. This board was a new type called a "tear-drop", a contemporary style of the short board made from balsa wood/fibre glass. It was a smaller board, different from the 16 foot long boards people had been using up until 1956. On seeing this dark shape, I quickly turned the board and pulled my legs up, then proceeded out to sea looking for another wave. I can remember thinking to myself that it was a bit strange as I could not recall being near any rocks.

There was no doubt in my mind, however, that this was the shark that attacked Chris Holland. When I paddled out for my next wave, I sat on my board waiting and observed some of the boys having a swim out to sea. In fact they were further out than I was sitting on the board. After that I had occupied myself looking for the right wave when I heard a lot of yelling and the word 'SHARK'. I quickly started paddling my board parallel with the beach, toward the boys in the water. I remember thinking I was glad that I had been doing some training, as the distance I had to paddle was a few hundred yards. When I got near the boys, they yelled that it was Chris Holland and not those other swimmers who had been attacked by the shark. I then turned the board to sea as Chris was the furtherest out. And as I was paddling towards him I remember thinking what will I do when I get to him as this board is too small for both of us.

On reaching Chris I pulled up beside him and he asked me to put him on the board. He grabbed one side and I slipped off the other into the bloodied water. As I pulled him onto the board he told me that the shark had bitten off his legs. I pulled his legs onto the board and told him that he still had his legs but the shark had taken part of his (left or right) calf muscle —so start paddling towards the shore. He asked if I could push him but I don't think I answered him as I had started swimming for the shore. I'm sure that if I hadn't got off the board and given it to Chris he would never have been able to reach the shore with the loss of blood from injuries he had incurred. I swam fairly quickly in fact beating the three other boys back to shore. I half expected the shark to bite me on the legs at any time. My thought at that time was every stroke that I made towards shore the safer it would be.

On reaching shore and standing up in waist deep water, I then looked around expecting to see the shark following me but what I saw was Chris on a small wave surging the board towards me. The board was starting to nose in so I waded back to him and grabbed him and held him on the board at the same time dragging him towards the shore. I remember yelling out to the others on the beach to come in and help me, but they were frozen with fear and would not enter the water. Eventually my pleas for help brought assistance and we lifted him out of the water and carried him to a stretcher on the beach. At that point I left the rescue as I was exhausted and the others who were on the beach applied first aid."

Chris continued his activities with the life saving movement after recuperation, joining the Board of Examiners and is still a regular attendee at the Fairhaven Clubhouse.

As well as a pronounced limp, he has a damaged finger from fighting off his assailant.

In recognition for his bravery in assisting Chris back to shore in the face of a possible return attack, Russell Hughes received a Royal Humane Society Bronze Medal.

Surf Boat Crew Rescued

Related by W. Luscombe

"During Easter 1965 a cold westerly wind, combined with a large ground swell, drove mountainous seas into Torquay beach. Naturally the temptation for club members to ride the huge surf was satisfied when a group of ski paddlers braved the elements and spent over an hour enjoying the thrill of the huge swells.

Their demonstration of bravado influenced some Club members into taking out an oared boat. With a large audience, a crew swept by John Russell, fought their way out to the back. Unfortunately, some larger than average waves broke over the bow, completely swamping the craft and rendering the boat unmanageable.

SURF RESCUE

It was obvious to onlookers that the crew were in trouble, with the drift carrying the boat towards Point Danger. The brothers, Mick and John Hayden, using a double ski attempted to take out a surf line which proved impossible. Meanwhile Bill Luscombe, on his single ski, paddled out to the stricken boat to assure the occupants that their plight had been observed and attempts for their rescue were contemplated.

The drift pushed them past Point Danger to the front beach area where Ron Hussey was in the process of launching a second boat. This was immediately swallowed up becoming invisible to spectators on the beach and rendering the attempt futile.

The partnership of Bill and a board paddler, Eddy Beacham, once again went to sea on a double ski and managed to reach the boat. One crewman, Ron Bryant, was suffering from hypothermia so it was decided to try and return him to shore on the front deck of the ski. On the way in, a large wave upset them and the patient was lost. Bill dived under the surface and recalls his joy at seeing the patient's hand and wrist which he grabbed. On re-mounting the ski, they managed to come in past Yellow Bluff at the Fisherman's Beach. In spite of Ron's state, they pointed him in the direction of the local doctor's house nearby leaving him to stagger there alone.

Meanwhile, through the efforts of Owen Yateman, a small cabin cruiser was located and commandeered to be crewed by Owen and the owner's son, John Ainsworth. It was necessary to suspend the boat above the waves utilising many personnel, to avoid swamping during the launch.

Bill mentions his relief as the launch sped past on its rescue mission as he was returning. With great difficulty, the four remaining crewmen were secured and the surf boat abandoned. With the experience of Owen Yateman, they were brought back to the Darian Road area at Fisherman's Beach which completed a successful and courageous rescue.

A couple of days later the surf boat was located washed up on the beach between Bancoora and Barwon Heads much to the relief of the Club.

Meritorious awards were presented to Owen Yateman and John Ainsworth, with letters of commendation being issued to the four ski paddlers and Ron Hussey

Lakes Entrance

Down to the far east of Victoria is the fishing and tourist destination of Lakes Entrance. One more recent rescue which involved both Bruce Woodward and Peter McDonald who, as crew on board an offshore rescue craft returning to port, found themselves rolling over and over on the treacherous Entrance bar.

Out of this disaster came a Royal Humane Society award to Bruce Woodward for this heroic act.

The following brief account of that Rescue is given by Dale Richardson.

On 24 January 1989, the Lakes Entrance Ocean Rescue Squad evacuated an ill crew member from a yacht some distance out to sea, in their Shark Cat, with a doctor and nurse in attendance. The Surf Club's IRB was also carried aboard, with club members Bruce Woodward and Peter McDonald. Whilst returning to port, the Shark Cat overturned in turbulent seas as it crossed the sand bar, throwing six people into the water, and trapping two people inside the cabin.

The IRB crew accounted for those visible, and assisted all to gain a position aboard the upturned hull. Then Bruce Woodward dived under the boat until he found an opening to the cabin, where he found clear space, which unfortunately was full of petrol and oil fumes. So overpowering were the fumes that Bruce nearly lost consciousness, and he was forced to return to the surface. Despite the rough conditions, he recovered quickly and dived once again into the cabin where he found the nurse, returning to the surface, and then onto the upturned hull of the Shark Cat. By that stage, her condition was very poor.

All survivors aboard the upturned hull were again washed into the sea by a large wave, but were able to recover their positions, the nurse with the help of Bruce Woodward. Eventually a boat arrived and took off four survivors, leaving the IRB crew and a Shark Cat crew member still clinging to the upturned hull. Eventually it drifted to safety of the shallows.

Unfortunately during the rescue, the Shark Cat skipper was unable to be found. As the boat neared the shallows he became dislodged from within the cabin and was washed into the shallows. Despite their exhaustion, the two members began CPR until two off duty SLSA lifegaurds arrived to take over. Despite all these efforts resuscitation was unsuccessful.

This rescue merits particular note as it went beyond the normally encountered by surf lifesavers. Bruce Woodward is not a man to seek personal recognition, but it was inevitable that due recognition should have been forthcoming. It took the form of a commendation from the Coroner; a Meritorious Award with bronze insert from SLSA; and the Clarke Medal from Royal Humane Society. The rescue was a contributing factor in earning Bruce the Wishart Medal in 1989.

Awards & Honours

Life Members Victorian State Centre 1947 - 2002

Surf Life Saving Australia, at club, branch, state and national level, awards Life membership, which is the highest honour it can bestow upon its members. Life membership throughout the Association, generally, is not even considered before fifteen years of 'outstanding' service. 'Outstanding' is qualified by a comprehensive array of positions held on committees, patrolling record, and/or exceptional contributions additional to the normal duties. It is possible to hold all four levels of life membership in Queensland and New South Wales. In the other states, as in Victoria, where no branches exist, three only are possible; yet each of these life memberships is a great honour.

The granting of life membership to a member of the Victorian Surf Life Saving Association can only occur after a person has rendered special service to the Victorian State Centre over a period of 15 years as an elected officer, a member of a sub-committee, a member of the Board of Examiners (which became Board of Lifesaving in 1995) or a member of the Emergency Services of State Centre.

At first, life members were elected by the State Centre. Later a Life Members sub-committee was formed to recommend life members who are then elected by the full council.

The first Life membership was awarded to Jim Wall during the 1950/51 season for his outstanding contribution as the first Honorary Secretary of the Victorian State Centre.

Since then a further 51 Life members have been elected, all of whom have made long and worthy contributions within a cross section of activities of the life saving movement, both within Victoria and interstate.

Until the 1970s, it was the life members who recommended to State Council the Honorariums to be paid to officers such as the State Secretary, Secretary of Board of Examiners, Treasurer and Superintendent.

In 1972, the life members considered the development of a project for Surf Life Saving Victoria covering 10 years to oversee such areas as administration, finance, techniques, gear, manpower and competition training in order to keep up to date with changing circumstances.

In 1979, State Council requested that life members form a Surf Life Saving Museum in the lecture theatre of A W Walker House.

Life members made it known to State Centre and clubs, that records of members' performances needed to be kept, in order to overcome difficulties in establishing details of the historical contribution of potential life members.

The change of name from 'Surf Life Saving Association of Australia Victorian State Centre' to the present day 'Surf Life Saving Victoria' was not, however, greeted very well by the life members and was only accepted with reluctance.

In 1994, life members moved to update the method of election of new members. They proceeded to contact secretaries in other states in order to gather information about their selection processes.

National level life membership is held for those within surf life saving who have gone on to proudly represent their state, and in no lesser way to have followed and upheld the tradition, the ethic and the moral code that has made surf life saving in Australia an icon throughout the world.

Those Victorians who hold this highest honour are marked with an asterisk against their name on the Victorian Life Members' Honour Board.

The block of pictures of our life members, which is featured next, includes people from all walks of life who have come together to further the interest of surf life saving. They are our finest people, yet there are so many in this great movement who give of themselves to others by way of their contribution to surf life saving, it is an invidious task to compare the worth of any one particular Lifesaver, with that of any other.

The life members of Surf Life Saving Victoria are those who have led the way over the many years; theirs is truly a contribution by which to set benchmarks.

The John Wishart Memorial Medal

Surf Life Saving Victoria's most coveted Surf Life Saver of the Year Award is called "The John Wishart Memorial Medal". It perpetuates the deeds and memory of John Wishart of the Sorrento-Portsea Surf Life Saving Club who was killed by a shark attack at Portsea in March 1956.

John Wishart, 1929 - 1956.

The shark attack at Portsea Beach which ended John Wishart's life at 4.45 p.m. on Sunday, 4 March 1956, occurred only minutes after the Portsea Club Championships were concluded. It happened without warning— a quick, silent attack— just as Wishart was joining his club mates 'out the back' for some relaxing surfing, after bringing in the competition buoys. Once again in the history of our relationship with the sea, this incident highlighted one of those capricious elements within beach waters that, when entered by bathers — whether experienced swimmers and lifesavers or not — few have any control.

Portsea Club Captain (also State Superintendent) Jack Hopper's report to State Centre a week later, is telling in its brevity: "The attack occurred about two minutes after Wishart's arrival (to join a group of us swimming out behind the break— Wishart came across the channel from the western side). Although there was a large crowd on the beach at the time, very few people actually saw the attack. It was of such short duration, about three to five seconds, that it would have been necessary to have been looking at Wishart to have seen anything. Even those within feet of the victim did not hear any call or noise except the thrashing of the shark and the thud of impact.

At the time it was believed the shark had come from the eastern side and through the group to take Wishart off the end of the line. I now believe this to be the shark's second run. I believe that it came from the western side out of the channel, and took Wishart under at the first attack without itself breaking the surface. It then wheeled about through the group of us, breaking the surface as it did so, and hit again. This time it carried the victim deep and neither Wishart nor the shark were seen again.

"The shark was about 12 feet long and had a black back. From information and photographs viewed since, I am still of the opinion the shark was a whaler shark".

At only 27 years of age, John Wishart's death was deeply felt by his family and pregnant wife, Sue, and by all in the surf life saving movement, especially by those in his Portsea Club which he had served diligently since helping to form it in 1949, and also by everyone in the Portsea district where he lived and worked as a plumber.

This extract from the memorial plaque of 1958 in the Portsea clubhouse summarises the achievements that made John Wishart "...Portsea's most famous surf champion, finest club member and greatest all-round surf lifesaver.

Born on 17 February 1929, John Wishart spent all of his teenage summers out at the 'back beach'. He was one of the formation members in the six-man unofficial life-saving club which operated under the Ocean Park Trust from the end of the Second World War. This group of public spirited young men placed white flags on the most suitable section of the 'old beach' down past the reef and kept a lookout for rescues from the sand dunes. John had well over 100 rescues before the Portsea Club was even formed, and, until his death, had over 200 personal rescues to his name.

"Interested in all sports, John was captain of the Portsea Cricket team and a member of the premiership Sorrento football side of 1953. He was also a very keen golfer.

"As a prominent member and committee man of the Portsea Club, John Wishart featured in every carnival, starred in the state championships, and represented his club and Victoria at two Australian championships; he was also a member of two Victorian teams to visit other states. Back at Portsea, he was a patrol captain for seven years and vice-captain for three. He rowed in the memorable crew of the Fred Matear, competed in belt races, open surf races and R&R teams, and was equally at home riding a board or ski. His complete versatility in the surf has always amazed the experts who said "competition swimmers shouldn't row" and "rowers are unsuitable for R&R". John Wishart was probably one of Victoria's few successful complete all-rounders in the surf.

"A few days after his death, as no funeral could be held, Dr Mannix (Melbourne's Roman Catholic Archbishop), gave permission for the first open-air Requiem Mass for the Dead to be celebrated on the Portsea surf beach."

John Wishart's son, Tim Mazzoletti, maintained the family connection with Portsea and was club captain in years 1975, 1976 and 1977.

Inaugurating the Wishart Medal

The State Centre's executive decision to start such an award was made late in 1956.

The executive's unanimous desire to name the award after John Wishart acknowledged the outstanding contribution Wishart made not only to his own club in all its activities, but to the surf life-saving movement in general. The criteria used in judging candidates for this annual award embraces the above.

'The Wishart', as it is affectionately known today, has since been awarded to 47 of the state's lifesavers who have excelled. Selection each year is made by the Meritorious Awards and Honours Committee who take into consideration:

- Awards held
- Awards gained during the year by each candidate
- Positions held on S.L.S. committees
- Contribution to one or more sections and to essential club activities
- An impeccable record of patrolling, including rescues and first-aid
- Community service and assistance
- Attitude to club life

The committee also considers the outline of his or her ambitions within surf life saving, and is questioned on how the candidate would represent the association if successful.

These standards are similar to the criteria of Surf Life Saving Australia in judging its National Life Saver of the Year Award. Sponsored by BP and later by Pioneer. Wishart winners to have won the National Award are Natalie Hood (the first woman to win the Wishart and the first female and Victorian to win both the Wishart and 'Lifesaver of the Year' in the same year). Scott Tannahill, Brett Ellis and John Takac also have the distinction of winning both awards.

A unique 'father and son' achievement in gaining the Wishart was achieved by the Torquay Club's Pettigrove family: John Pettigrove in 1969, and Garry in 1997.

Proud day for Tim

TWO-YEAR-OLD Timothy Wishart was first to clamber into the Portsea Surf Club's new boat, John Wishart, just before it was launched yesterday afternoon.

The boat is named after Timothy's father, a Victorian surf champion, who was the victim of a shark tragedy at Portsea in March, 1956

Mrs A. W. Walker, wife of the State president of the Surf Life Saving Association of Australia, launched the memorial boat at Weeroona Bay, Portsea.

Timothy was born after his father died.

Since then he has been "adopted" by members of the Portsea Surf Club, who have been teaching him to swim from the time he could toddle into the surf.

The boat is 26 ft. long and weighs just over 400 pounds.

Moulded from cedar veneers and hand-built by Bailey Bros., of Sydney, it is one of the lightest, fastest and most streamlined surf boats on the Australian coast.

Bruce Bowman, Alex Stirling, Malcolm Hall, Jack Hopper and Peter Horman were crew members of the boat on its maiden voyage.

All are members or ex-members of the club who rowed with the late John Wishart (pictured inset below).

The Sir Adrian Curlewis Scholarship

Sir Adrian Curlewis, CVO, CBE,
SLSA President from 1933 - 1975.

The passing of the legendary Sir Adrian Curlewis in 1985 and his wife Betty, Lady Curlewis in 1999, sadly brought to an end the friendship of an era that spanned more than half a century. However their memory and the wisdom of their input into SLSA will live always.

SLSA initiated a fitting tribute to Sir Adrian in the Sir Adrian Curlewis Scholarship presented annually to the most outstanding senior lifesaver between the ages of 18 years and 26 years in each state and territory.

The criteria for this prestigious award ensures that each state can be extremely proud of those who have received the Scholarship over the twelve years since inception.

Victorian winners are:

1988/89	David Ruddell — Waratah Beach
1989/90	Brett Sekac — Woolamai Beach
1990/91	Angela Holmes — Apollo Bay
1991/92	Sally Marsh — Anglesea
1992/93	Mary Travis — Gunnamatta
1993/94	Scott Gregory — Pt. Leo
1994/95	Rebecca Johnson — Jan Juc
1995/96	Greg Denehy — Woodside Beach
1996/97	Bradley Newton — Pt. Leo
1997/98	Sarah Gallagher — Ocean Grove
1998/99	Matthew Symington — Anglesea
1999/2000	Janis House — Pt. Leo
2000/01	David Marsh — Anglesea
2001/02	Edwina Gallagher — Lorne

From the inception of the award, Lady Curlewis has always been there to meet with the group as they gathered in Sydney for dinner. The representatives from each State travel to Lake Ainsworth, just south of Byron Bay, where they join the Lake Ainsworth Annual Camp. This camp is fully supported and run by SLSA for top lifesavers from around Australia.

In the case of the Curlewis Scholarship winners, their total costs are met in attending this camp which runs over approximately one week and is an extremely motivating experience.

It is totally fitting that the Lake Ainsworth Camp is synonymous with the Sir Adrian Curlewis Scholarship.

The Graeme Long Memorial Medal for Best Club Person of the Year

During the afternoon of Saturday 16 October 1998, South Barwon District Supervisor Graeme Long disappeared at sea.

Graeme Long

After conducting an examination at Anglesea, Graeme and two Torquay members whom he had been coaching in ski paddling, set out together to paddle the 10 kilometre distance back to Torquay. A fierce north wind blew up. Graeme became separated from the other two paddlers, who, being closer inshore, made it back to Torquay. Worried about Graeme disappearing from their sight during the return, they raised the alarm. Despite an extensive search by the clubs and emergency services, he was not found.

President of Surf Life Saving Victoria at the time, Charles Lyne AM expressed his and National President, Alan Whelpton's sympathy on behalf of all of Surf Life Saving, and remarked at the State Council meeting held at Victorian State Centre on Monday evening, 19 October 1998:

"Tonight all in Surf Life Saving are very saddened by the events of the past several days and I speak of Graeme Long, District Supervisor for South Barwon, lost at sea. This was a guy who played football with Geelong 2nds; he rebuilt Bancoora SLSC after the troubled years there; he was a Life Member of Bancoora; he was a Wishart Medallist (1971). In later years he applied himself to the involvement of his children in Surf Life Saving along with his association with the Board of Life Saving and the Nippers.

Here was an outstanding lifesaver and an example to all our people, young and old, but particularly to those coming into this great movement.

All the clubs involved in the search, from Apollo Bay to Point Lonsdale are to be congratulated. Their input was magnificent, likewise the Police and Emergency Services, the fixed wing aircraft, Red Cross and the Helicopter Crews."

To perpetuate Graeme Long's contribution to surf lifesaving, from 1999/2000 season a medal, The Graeme Long Memorial Medal, is presented to the Club Person of the Year.

The Presidents

Surf Life Saving Association – Victorian State Centre

Ainslie William Walker, OBE
1947-1970

On the formation of the Victorian Branch of the National Surf Life Saving Association of Australia on 9 January, 1947, Ainslie William Walker was elected Foundation President. 'Sprint' as he was affectionately known to all in surfing circles, held this position until his death in 1971.

Prior to transferring to Melbourne in 1928, with his firm Grazcos Ltd. stock and station agents, Sprint was a member of the famous Sydney surf club, Manly, gaining his Surf Bronze Medallion in 1921. During his many years with that famous Club, Sprint was a member of the surf relay team that won the Australian Championship event in 1922, 1925 and 1926.

With the new mates he had teamed up with from the Melbourne Swimming Club — Jim Wall, Phillip Bennett, Harry Pittard among them — he continued his love of 'body shooting' and surf board riding at Portsea, Anglesea, Lorne and Torquay. The Torquay beach finally became their 'headquarters'. 'Sprint' was a mover behind the formation of the Torquay Surf Life Saving Club in December, 1945 and was elected that Club's first Captain, a position he held until 1952. For outstanding service to the Torquay Club he was elected a Life Member in 1958.

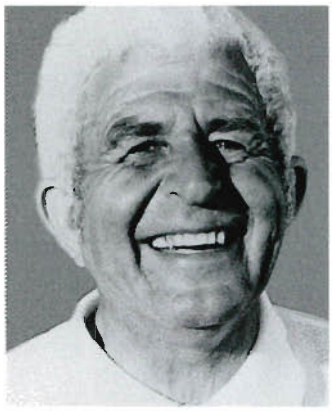

With Allan 'Kanga' Kennedy, a visitor from the Queensland State Branch, acting as the driving force behind its establishment, Sprint and his mates from the Torquay SLSC were instrumental in the formation of the Victorian State Centre in January, 1947.

During his Presidency, and always assisted by his charming wife Norma, Sprint's magnificent leadership during the formation of the many surf life saving clubs around the Victorian coastline, was outstanding. His calm dignified manner, coupled with his love of surfing and surf life saving endeated him to all with whom he came in contact. He worked ceaselessly, purely on a voluntary basis, for the advancement of surf life saving in Victoria right up to his death. He was elected a Life Member of the Victorian State Centre in 1957. For services to the community, Sprint was awarded the Order of the British Empire (OBE) in 1967.

His final years however, were marred by Parkinson's Disease, but it was the wish of all involved that he remain 'in the Chair'. Vice President Alan Forster conducted the meetings at 'Sprint's' side.

The first official Victorian State Centre headquarters, the original West St.Kilda Lifesaving Club, which had been extensively renovated, was named 'A W Walker' House in 1962 in his Honour.

Surf Lifesaving in Victoria is indebted to the vision and drive of this great man.

George P. Nutbean
1970-74

George, known as the 'Chief', was a latecomer to surf lifesaving. An astute businessman in Melbourne, with a holiday house in the fast growing coastal resort of Fairhaven, he saw the need to develop the recently formed Fairhaven Surf Life Saving Club to better protect the bathers who began flocking to this beautiful surfing beach.

With his drive and enthusiasm he quickly recruited friends from Melbourne and with a number of local residents, the Fairhaven SLSC rapidly grew from its beginnings in 1957. George was elected President in 1958, a position he held until his sudden death in 1980.

George did nothing by halves. He gained his Surf Bronze Medallion in 1968 at the age of 51 and then turned his energy and talents to official duties with the Victorian State Centre. He was Victorian State Centre Vice President from 1968 to 1970.

He was elected President at the AGM in 1970, a position he held until his resignation in 1974. His period as President saw a marked increase in the marketing of surf lifesaving to the business community of Victoria. George brought sponsorship clearly into focus and promoted all avenues in maintaining and increasing this vital means of fundraising.

He introduced club pennants at carnivals, formation of guard of Honour during Race Week November 1970, 1971 at Flemington, gained BP sponsorship, and introduced surf lifesaving competition between a combined Victorian team and the American professional lifeguards of Orange County, California, USA in what has now become known as the 'Wieland Shield'.

For his years of selfless contribution to the betterment of surf life saving he was elected a Life Member of the State Centre in 1973.

Gordon Linton Dann
1974-77

Gordon was an active lifesaver with the Port Phillip Bay Club, Albert Park prior to the Second World War. He was a strong swimmer and an 'A' grade water polo player, competing with many of the early Torquay SLSC members from the Melbourne Swimming Club.

He subsequently joined Torquay in 1948, quickly gained his surf bronze in 1949 and with his vast knowledge of R&R and Bronze Medallion instruction became a most valuable member of that club. In those early years the gaining of this award was severely regimented with painstaking hours of training necessary before a squad could be presented for Examination. Gordon thrived in this atmosphere.

Joining the Board of Examiners in 1949 he helped establish a number of clubs around the Victorian coastline. He gave more than twenty years encouragement, instruction and assistance at many of these same clubs. Gordon was widely respected as an R&R judge at surf carnivals during this same period.

He joined the Lorne Surf Life Saving Club in 1954 and was Captain for a number of years during a period when this club was experiencing rapid growth. His next venture was to the newly formed Gunnamatta Surf Life Saving Club that was going through a difficult period. He was elected President and within two years the club was up and firing.

After holding a variety of positions with the State Centre he was elected President at the AGM in 1975, a position he held for the next three terms during a period when the movement was expanding in a variety of areas. Once again Gordon's strong leadership and dedication to the tasks involved saw surf life-saving in Victoria continue to prosper.

He was made a Life Member of the Victorian State Centre in 1964.

Anthony 'Tony' Thorburn
1977-85

Tony was one of a small band of life savers who founded Waratah Beach SLSC. His long association through his Club and the Hon. Secretary of Surf Life Saving Victoria from 1974 to 1977 made Tony an ideal choice to step into the State Centre chair. An accountant, he was also well versed in the day-to-day running of surf life saving. Coming from the east coast and a small club, Tony gave great impetus to the Victorian body from the viewpoint of the smaller clubs.

He saw the introduction of helicopters, professional lifeguards and the 'rubber ducky', whilst at club level, he encouraged the 'Royal'clubs to become part of the bigger picture. South Melbourne Life Ssaving Club set the trend which eventually led to it joining State Centre. Tony Thorburn's fine contribution spanned club, state, national level over 13 years.

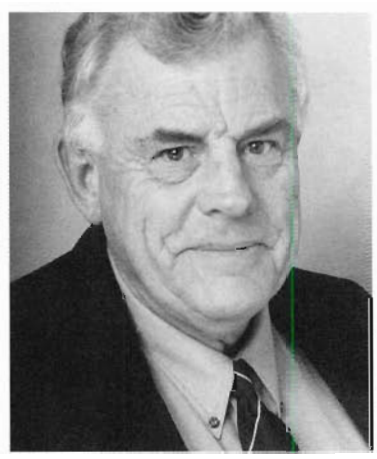

Alex 'Ajax' Sutherland
1985-87

A Life Member of Anglesea SLSC and very well liked, with a great ability to get along with all those that came into contact with him, Ajax was President for two years.

He took on the role as President during a very difficult financial period. The financial situation eventually grew overwhelming for the State Centre despite all efforts to rebuild and hold the situation together.

He put in an enormous effort into his role as President with special input into the advancement of competition and life saving, with his unquestionable dedication to surf life saving.

Charles Reginald Lyne, AM
1987-2000

Prior to joining the Torquay SLSC in September, 1965, Charles had been a champion belt and swim-wade competitor for the Bayside Club, North Road in Brighton. During the many years he spent with this club, he carried out and assisted in a number of daring and dangerous rescues.

On joining Torquay, he quickly gained his Surf Bronze Medallion, the Instructors Certificate and became a member of the Club Committee. Elected President in July, 1970 Charles took over a burnt out shell of a clubhouse, but he and his committee spent the next three years rebuilding and refurbishing it— a task of great proportions. The story of this project is graphically detailed in the club's history book, The First Fifty Years— 1945-1995 written by club Life Member, Ken Pollard.

In appreciation of his outstanding service he was elected a Life Member of the Torquay SLSC in July, 1981.

Charles served as Club Delegate to the Victorian State Centre, now known as Surf Life Saving Victoria, for a number of years, then on being admitted to the Board of Examiners in 1981, he became an official of this governing body in a variety of positions up until 1987. He was then elected President of State Centre in August, 1987, a position he held to 2000. Only the first President, Ainslie Walker, OBE, served for a longer period.

Charles has overseen:

- the return to financial stability of the Victorian State Centre during his term;
- the welcome influx of bayside life saving clubs to the surf scene;
- the successful marketing of surf life saving to new sponsors and the Victorian public;
- the implementation of new strategies to ensure the viability of surf life saving clubs well into the next century.

His outstanding leadership qualities have resulted in the following honours being bestowed on Charles during his term as President :

- 'Citation of Merit' from the World Council of Lifesaving, 1990.
- 'Member The Order of Australia' (AM) awarded in January, 1996 for 'Services to Surf Life Saving in Victoria'.
- For outstanding service to Surf Life Saving Victoria, elected a Life Member of Victorian State Centre in August, 1996.
- Awarded Federation Australian Sports Medal 2001.
- Overseeing the production of this history.

Michael J. Martin
Honorary State President
2000-

Mike Martin first joined Point Leo SLSC during the 1960s. Twenty years later, he joined Anglesea SLSC in the early 1980s when his two children, Adam and Amanda, became involved in the nipper movement.

Mike became the assistant State JAB coach from 1986 to 1990, and Coach from 1990 - 1991. He was an Anglesea delegate to the Victorian JAB from 1987 to 1990, Anglesea under 18 Manager from 1990 to 1994, Anglesea Director of Marketing from 1995 to 1999, President of the Anglesea SLSC from 1996 to 2000 and was awarded Life Member of the Anglesea SLSC in 2000.

Mike was awarded the inaugural Graeme Long award for Volunteer Life Saver of the Year in 2000 and became State Centre President in August 2001.

Although an active patrolling lifesaver, he still finds time to officiate at carnivals whilst being enthusiastically involved with the official duties of State President. Mike begins his term as State President as this book goes to print.

SLSV Gear Stewards

Each club in Victoria appoints a gear steward, usually a person with good practical skills and with dedication to the cause. The gear steward is responsible for each piece of equipment, from the reel line and belt of old, to the outboard motors and inflatable rescue craft of today's main rescue equipment.

The State Centre gear stewards are drawn from various clubs. Each takes on the additional task of preparing and maintaining the gear which the Victorian State Centre requires for each examination and competition carnival. At any SLSV event they have the unenviable task of being the first on, and the last to leave the beach.

The first SLSV great stewards actually made the buoys and spliced the ropes, having to beg, borrow or to find a truck to transport the equipment.

Today, the gear steward has a large SLSV truck, which in turn pulls an outdoor resource unit (the caravan) which acts as the broadcast facility. This unit is the nerve centre for competition. It also includes a kitchen and a bunk.

This is quite a contrast to those early days when the gear steward just threw everything into a truck or trailer, and arranged for the buoys to be laid by the host club's duty boat crew of five.

In recent years, the carnivals (sometimes running to two or three days) are much bigger with many more clubs, more events, and much more gear to look after. This has seen the recruitment of a number of people, who provide an expanded working team at each and every carnival or special SLSV event.

It is remarkable that there have been only 12 State Centre gear stewards in the past 55 years, highlighting the dedication of these people. They do not appear on any honour board; there are little thanks; and it is hard work! So why do they do this ardous task season after season, year after year? Bless them!

SLSV gear stewards hold a special place in the 'engine room' for their dedication and perserverance. They represent the true 'grass roots' of our movement.

SLSV Superintendents and District Supervisors

State Superintendents (Directors of Life Saving Services & Examination and Instruction) and District Supervisors

When State Centre was established in 1947, the duties of examination, instructions, competition and other needs were carried out by the first state superintendent, Allan Kennedy. As the number of clubs increased, districts were created and district supervisors were appointed working under the state superintendent.

The first district was 'South Western' with Doug Kemp from Warrnambool as the first district superintendent, covering his own and nearby clubs of Port Campbell, Portland and Port Fairy. Other districts such as Bellarine, Otway, Eastern etc soon followed.

This list of our state and district superintendents is a proud record of the men and women who have worked hard in the 'engine room' of the surf lifesaving movement.

The Sponsors

Sponsors, that is, a company or corporate body or individuals who contribute financially to the volunteer surf life saving movement, have backed Surf Life Saving Victoria from its beginnings in 1947.

The following list records alphabetically each and every sponsor, large or small, who have made a contribution to State Centre's achievements and the successes since then.

Some of the longest-standing corporate sponsors are still with us today, such as Carlton & United Breweries, Kellogg's, BP, TABCORP to mention a few. VicHealth—SunSmart and our Victorian Government have always stood by us.

To every sponsor, we thank you.

The bronze medallion was the benchmark award of the Royal Life Saving Society in Victoria, for many years before the formation of the Surf Life Saving Centre in Victoria. Ever since then, the 'bronze' has been the award standard gained by every surf life saver who has ever donned the red and yellow cap.

Until the late 1970s, the examination, which contained written, oral and physical sections was a highly regimented drill, strictly supervised by the instructors and examiners on the day. The regimentation and the discipline demanded, clearly had their origins in the Armed Forces. Thereafter, this focus gave way to a dedicated professionalism, and the training manual of today leaves no stone unturned in pursuit of the high standards expected of modern surf life savers.

Every life saver whose details appear in the following pages can reflect with pride on the dedication and the persistence needed to satisfy the demanding standards required of them. The length of this list bears testimony to the extent of the involvement of the surf life saving movement in the Victorian and Australian community.

The first list covers awards from 1920 and prior to season 1954/55 when Bronze Medals were awarded Nationally, thereafter the awards were presented by the Victorian State Centre, which prefixed the medallion numbers with a 'V'.

Some 22,000 Victorian life savers gained their Bronze Medallion in surf life saving over the 50-55 years that SLSV has been in existence. This in itself, is a remarkable achievement. However each and every life saver has, as requirement of membership, carried out his or her patrols. What this has meant is that the number of patrol hours carried out over the years amount to more than 6,000,000 hours. Each one has given of themselves, by way of their patrols, a magnificent contribution to our Victorian community.

Proudly and to the best efforts, each and every one who ever gained their bronze is hereby recorded. Apologies to any life saver whose name has been incorrectly recorded or inadvertently omitted.
